KNITTING WORK.

BY SARAH L. JOY.

Sitting alone in the twilight,
Knitting these blue wool socks,
I turn with a reverent hand the key,
That the door of the past unlocks.
The click of the bright little needles
Wake thoughts that have slumbered long,
And my brain is flooded with memories
Sweeping over me sudden and strong.

A bevy of fair young faces
Smile out through the twilight on me,
And I hear their voices ringing
In girlish frolic and glee.
Just as I used to hear them
In the days that seem so far,
When we knitted socks for the soldiers
In the cruel times of war.

We did not know who would wear them,
Nor where the feet would go,
But we knew they never would falter,
Nor turn away from the foe.
And we wove our little romances
As the socks 'neath our fingers grew,
And each one pictured her soldier,
Loyal and brave and true.

But the war is long since over;
And the girls that knitted and dreamed
Have found that life, in its sternness,
Was not the fair thing it seemed.
Care and trouble and grieving
Have come with sudden shocks
To us all, since we sat romancing
And knitting soldiers' socks.

The faces fade out through the twilight
The voices are hushed and gone;
The darkness gathers around me,
And I am once more alone.
But the busy needles keep clicking,
The thread slips my fingers through,
And now, as then, I am knitting
A soldier's stocking of blue.

No hero went forth to do battle,
In the stormiest days of strife,
With tenderer prayers than follow
This one to the conflict of life.
Oh God! keep the dear feet from straying
Into paths of temptation and wrong,
May the hands in the fight never falter,
The brave heart grow braver and strong.

So knitting, remembering and dreaming,
I sit in my sewing chair,
Till by and by comes the echo
Of my soldier's step on the stair.
A merry, glad voice comes singing,
I hear the street door unlock,
And I drop my dreaming and memories,
As I do my soldier's sock.

SOCIABILITY IN CHURCH.

My pretty cousin Amy Hanks called last evening. I was deep in the mysteries of the construction of a new black lace bonnet for myself, but she offered her assistance.

"It will be a perfect love," she exclaimed, throwing the flowers and lace into a pile in her lap. "But I must not forget my errand. I came on purpose to ask you a question. And the preface to it, like the postscript to the old fashioned love letter, is longer than the question itself."

I bade her go on, while I wound up my wire skeleton with fancy cobwebs.

"You know how fascinated Roy and I both were with Rev. Dr. Earnest, so much so that we joined his church within two months after we moved to the city. We rented half a pew of the sexton, and twice every Sabbath walked in and out of it in a most proper and straightforward manner. A year and a half have rolled by, and notwithstanding our exemplary conduct and good clothes—for I do not think we have ever been a whit behind any of the congregation in this latter respect—nobody has taken any notice of us. I have had a few spasms of annoyance in reference to the matter, but Roy always said, "Never mind, we have friends enough outside of the church; we can worship God all the same whether we know our neighbors or not—"

"Excuse me, but I thought Dr. Earnest was one of Roy's college friends?" I remarked, while inserting a pin through a confusion of nothings.

"Oh, yes, and he has called upon us two or three times. On one occasion he urged us to attend a church sociable. I did not like the idea, but Roy thought it was best, so we went. Dr. Earnest was there, met us as we entered the parlors, and very courteously introduced us to the host and hostess. After that, we passed on to the other end of the room, and stood by and entertained each other until half-past ten o'clock. It seemed almost incredible, but it is none the less true, that we were not noticed, with only that first exception, during the evening, and were not anxious or willing to place ourselves again in such an awkward position.

"I do not feel disposed to cast one shade of a shadow of censure upon Dr. Earnest. He did all that he felt called upon to do under the circumstances, and we were probably not in his mind after that. As no one else in the room knew who we were, of course all were exonerated from blame. But the facts remain unchanged.

"Last week I read your article on 'Sociability in the churches,' and was particularly struck with that remark of Mrs. Finley's, how 'three ladies, occupying the same seat in the sanctuary, went in and out for two years together, each believing she, herself, was the only isolated one of the number, until some mysterious accident revealed the fact that all were alike strangers, not knowing another person in the church.' It set me thinking about the pale, elegant woman who sits in the pew with us in Dr. Earnest's church, and who has twice found the place in the hymn-book for me when I have been late. I thought at the time that her manner was a little too patronizing. But now I believe the fault was all in my own imagination.

"All at once I became impressed with a vague sense of duty, I who was not an old resident, and under no obligation to make first calls! My ideas were in a chaotic state, but amid much restlessness, and pricking, and smarting, my conscience whispered something about 'Christian responsibility.' 'Somebody else's business, not mine,' I retorted. 'It is your own account that you will have to render up at the last day, not your neighbor's,' continued conscience. 'Etiquette stands in the way,' I argued. 'Not a valid excuse,' said conscience, nor could I find one that was so considered, although I fought womanfully to regain my lost sense of easy indifference and what I had been pleased to term proud independence, among those who seemed to ignore my existence altogether.

"'Away with your starch and crimple, and do as you would be done by,' exclaimed conscience, getting saucy and unmanageable, and declaring war with such savage earnestness, that I had no alternative but to equip myself, go to the sexton and obtain the name and address of the before-mentioned lady, and proceed with all due celerity to pay her a visit.

"I was warmly received, and found her most charming and agreeable. She has been in the church a little longer than myself, but had not made an acquaintance, was even behind me in that respect, for she had never spoken with her minister. 'I was ill about a week ago,' she remarked, 'and told my husband that if I should by any chance be taken away, I hoped he would call our old Brooklyn pastor to attend my funeral, to spare Dr. Earnest the embarrassment of seeing me first in my coffin.'

"I confessed to her as I have to you the influence which had driven me into making the call, and while we laughed over it, we resolved to put a pin in at that very point, and together visit every new-comer who should come into the church after us. Now the question I want to ask you is this:

"Ought Christians, members of the same church organization, to observe to the letter all the ceremonies of society in reference to first calls? May they not with propriety make many exceptions, and by so doing increase their usefulness, and render themselves more acceptable to the great Head of the Christian family? Of course I refer to such as are similarly situated with myself, and who esteem it quite impossible to make any advance toward an acquaintance in a strange church."

I was so much interested in this little bit of history to which I had been treated, that I cut off my strings too short, and put my thimble into the ink bottle. I so thoroughly approve of the course adopted by my cousin Amy that I could not at once collect my thoughts for a direct answer to her very straightforward question.

My father tells a story of how when he was a young man he was once coming out of the Sidehill church, after having listened to a very able discourse from a candidate for the pulpit, and meeting his neighbor, Comfort Beals, on the steps, shook hands with him and inquired:

"How did you like the sermon this morning?"

"Don't know; haven't seen Deacon Richards yet."

I am not exactly in the same predicament, but I have a strong inclination to submit this subject to the readers of the Christian Union. Perhaps some one, our good friend Mr. Laicus, for instance, will shed a little light to illumine Amy's pathway, and help all such as are inclined to follow her example.—Christian Union.

W. F. WORTMAN,

ME TOO!

MANY years ago, the streets of Newburyport, Massachusetts, re-echoed the voice of a pretty Indian girl as she uttered her sweet notes in plaintive song, somewhat as follows:

"Come buy my baskets,
Come, ah! come; Gentlemen and Ladies,
You who have money, poor me has got none,
Come buy my nice baskets, and let me go home."

Her song was listened to by all, and people often visited the town to hear the Indian girl. In consequence of this and of her selling peculiarly nice baskets, she carried on a brisk trade, so that the family at home were taxed to their utmost in order to supply the demand. But envy, that "green eyed monster," never happy in view of another success induced a rival to enter the field, without a single trait of excellence of beauty, virtue, voice, or of wares, who endeavored to imitate the song of the original, but in this she was laughed to scorn by an appreciative public. Unsuccessful in every attempt at counterfeiting, she was at length obliged to follow the other at a short distance and cry out ME TOO—ME TOO.

In every community of either race may be found just such persons as envious Polly, either too indolent or not sufficiently up in their trade to invent either a SONG OR A BASKET, and are ready to cry out "ME TOO" whenever anything approaching a success is being developed.

FELLOWS'
COMPOUND SYRUP
HYPOPHOSPHITES

has been before the world since 1865, was invented by Mr. JAMES I. FELLOWS, of St. John, N. B., has been introduced over a large amount of territory by expensive advertising and wherever known. Has been tried by the leading physicians in every city where introduced, and pronounced

BECOME POPULAR

A Tonic far surpassing any Composition hitherto used in Medicine.

It has obtained great favor and commendation in curing

CONSUMPTION,

BRONCHITIS,

ASTHMA,

DYSPEPSIA,

HEART DISEASE,

DEBILITY and

PROSTRATION,

and other diseases developed by loss of nervous power and muscular relaxation.

Apothecaries and Dealers are allowed as good a margin for selling it as the expensive nature of the ingredients will admit of, but owing to the small profit to the inventor he is obliged to ask that cash invariably should accompany the order.

NOW IN FULL VIEW OF THE FACTS THAT THE PREPARATION SELLS RAPIDLY, LEAVES A FAIR PROFIT TO THE RETAILER, IS EMINENTLY SUCCESSFUL IN CURING DISEASE, WE HAVE REASON TO BELIEVE THAT PERSONS IN SOME PARTS OF THE COUNTRY ARE MANUFACTURING AND FOISTING IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTING ARTICLES BEARING A NAME CLOSELY RESEMBLING THE GENUINE, BUT DIFFERING FROM IT IN COMPOSITION AND EFFECT, IN ORER TO OBTAIN MORE MONEY, DISHONESTLY PROFITING BY THE JUSTLY EARNED REPUTATION OF ANOTHER, SOILING THEIR OWN REPUTATION, INJURING THER FELLOWS, ANI INTERFERING IN THE RELIEF OF SUFFERING HUMANITY.

THE PUBLIC ARE CAUTIONED

TO ASK FOR FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES, AND TAKE NO OTHER. THE NAME OF THE INVENTOR, JAMES I. FELLOWS, IS WRITTEN OBLIQUELY ACROSS THE INSIDE LABEL AND THE NAME FELLOWS & CO. IS BLOWN UPON THE BOTTLE.

The peculiarities of Fellows Hypophosphites are first its rapid absorption by the stomach and its healing influence upon the

MUCOUS MEMBRANE,

In the treatment of disease, it is necessary that this membrane, on account of its sensitive and sympathetic nature, should be in a healthy condition, no matter whether it be the lining of the Stomach, Lungs, or other organs; if otherwise, debilitating symptoms will surely present themseves.

CHYLE is formed by the regular digestive process, is secreted in the lacteal vessels, and is carried by the thoracic duct into the blood circulation. The manufacture of perfect chyle is only brought about by good digestion, and good digestion is secured by Fellows' Hypophosphites. Some necessary ingredients of healthy blood and ELEMENTS OF NERVOUS POWER, composing the Syrup are brought into the circulation along with this chyle, so that in a very short time after taking the remedy the patient feels the vitalizing influence of these ingredients upon the system.

By the use of certain constituents and a process discovered by the writer, and known only by his United States partner, his son, and himself, are these ingredients rendered potent and efficacious in removing disease and sustaining the system. This effect in a very remarkable and striking degree is observable on the nursing infant. Not only does the syrup benefit the mother, but assists wonderfully in developing the child. The attention of the writer has frequently been called to cases of emaciated children restored in this way.

IMPROVED DIGESTION,

liberal assimilation, and renewed vitality to the blood, are followed by tone to the nerves, and strength to the muscles, so that the heart, lungs, and even the stomach, which receives the first impulse from the syrup, are strengthened more and more.

Persons who have reached a

GREEN OLD AGE,

and been subject to the tortures of a dyspeptic life, in commending the use of the syrup, state that it has not only removed the disease, but secured to their advanced years comforts unknown since their youth and so the

ENDLESS CHAIN

of good effects is formed by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, and we are safe in saying, from a long experience in medicine, that these effects are not possessed by any other combination, nor can its virtues be improved upon, as the following summing up will show:

It is most ACCEPTABLE TO BOTH PALATE AND STOMACH.

Sufficiently active to ensure gradual but decided benefit, yet so mild as never to do harm, no matter how long its use may be extended. (The author used it uninterruptedly nearly four years for CONSUMPTION, WITH PERFECT SUCCESS, and then discontinued its employment abruptly without a single unpleasant effect.) No other tonic enjoys such a reputation as this.

It assists digestion and promotes assimilation.

It vitalizes the Blood, supplying such ingredients as are deficient.

It restores tone to the nerves, including the mind.

It confers health on such organs as are dependent for efficiency on muscular action, such as the Lings, Heart, Stomach, &c., &c.

And unless afflicted with some disease involving absolute organic loss, it will

SUSTAIN THE SYSTEM

until it reaches the age allotted to man by a beneficent Creator.

In all cases adhere strictly to the directions, use the food, clothing, &c., as directed, reject alcoholi stimulants and liquids which ferment easily, also tobacco and coffee, reside on elevated ground if possible, and take the syrup regularly in the prescribed doses.

By conforming to these rules no person will be disappointed in the virtues of

Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites

Young Ladies' Seminary,

128 GERMAIN STREET, ST. JOHN, N. B.

THE YOUNG LADIES' SEMINARY, established in 1832, by Mrs. Hunt, its present Principal, affords every facility for a thorough education in the common English branches, Natural Sciences, Languages, and Polite Accomplishments.

Miss Hunt, the Associate Principal, a graduate of Mount Holyoke Seminary, is assisted by another graduate of the same Seminary, and a corps of competent teachers, including several Professors.

French is the language of the school and Family.

TERMS:

Board and Tuition in the English branches, $200 per annum.

Moderate charges made for instruction in Music, Drawing, Painting, and Languages.

The Seminary is situated in one of the most desirable parts of the city. It is large, and contains every convenience for the comfort and accommodation of a Ladies' School, while a garden and play-ground attached to the premises furnish the pupils with healthful recreation.

School will re-open on September 5th, 1870.

For further particulars apply to Mrs. Hunt, 128 Germain Street, St. John, N. B.
