The Family and the Farm.

WITH THE ANGELS.

BY ELIZABETH CONVERSE.

"Baby is with the angels;"
The tear-stained letter read,
"Now for the precious body
Bring leaves and flowers;" it said
"For us deep prayer and pity,
But flowers for our dead."

I wonder what the angels
Who loved the baby so,
Say softly to each other,
As, gliding to and fro,
They look into those faces
So sad with sudden woe.

I wonder if, with longing
And sorrowful surprise,
They kiss the heavy eye-lids
Dropped o'er tear-laden eyes,
And try to turn to thankful
Songs of joy those bitter cries.

Oh! if beneath such kisses
Those eyes might grow so clear
As to see the holy vision
Waiting for them, always near,
If only through the shadow
Of that body they could peer!

Then perhaps without regretting,
They this darling form could take
To robe and crown with flowers,
Since it sleeps and may not wake;
But, Lord, this dreadful stillness!
Pity thou the hearts that break!

Jesus, who in thy sorrow
Didst know the comfort sweet
Of holding little children
Who gathered at thy feet,
Why must their arms be empty?
O'er and o'er our hearts repeat:

That one of those should perish,
Is not our Father's will,
Somewhere happy with the angels,
Baby Maud is living still;
Myriads of worlds may vanish,
God will His word fulfil.

A CHARMING STORY FOR THE CHILDREN.

"I wonder," said Deb. And she did wonder very much. What about? I think that she hardly knew herself. She only knew that she wondered—and wondered.

All the world was a wonder—the great, soft, shining snow-drift that curled up against the fence opposite her window; the beautiful whirlpools that the snow made when the wind was up; the ice in the streets, and the little girls that tripped on it, and the little boys that didn't; the cross grocer who brought flour and beans into Brick Alley every morning; the pleasant baker who sometimes tossed her up a seed-cake through the window; the factory-girls with the little pink bows on their nets, who strolled by in the evening after mills were out, and laughed so that she could hear them quite plainly, or sang a little—and she could hear that quite plainly too; the skies when they made faces at her through the square top of the alley—gray and silver and blue faces, or flame-colored and gold faces, or black faces, or faces crowned all about with stars; the river too, all that she could see of it, and that was just a crack away between two houses, and a crack of slope that banked it in. In winter the slope was shining white, and in summer it was shining green; and as for the crack of a river, sometimes that was white too, and sometimes it was green or purple or gray or blue, and sometimes it tossed about, and sometimes it was as still as Deb herself. That was all she knew about the river. And so she wondered.

But most of all she wondered about the bells. The town was full of bells. There were bells in the streets, and bells, she had heard, to the mills, and bells, she thought, to the river too; but all the bells that she knew about belonged to the grocer and baker, and these she had never done very much more than wonder at, after all, for they were two stories down in the yard, and she was in her high chair by the window.

Now this, you see, was why Deb wondered. She never got out of that high chair by the window, except to get into her bed. And she had never been anywhere in all her life except into that chair and into bed. And she was fifteen years old.

The bed and the chair and the window were all that Deb had, except a mother, and she didn't amount to much, for she was busy and worried and hurried and sick and anxious and poor—very poor, and the room was full of children who could run out and see the bells, and knew all about the river, and who never wondered; so, when she had put Deb out of her bed into her chair, or out of her chair into her bed, she thought no more about her: so, as I say, she didn't amount to much.

Deb was not ugly to see—except for the curve in her poor shoulders, and her little soft, white, withered feet, that hung down useless from her high chair. In the face Deb was not ugly at all to see. She had soft hair, and her cheeks were white and clean, and her eyes had grown so large and blue with fifteen years' full of wonder, that if you were once to see them you would never forget them as long as you lived.

A young lady that I heard of will never forget them as long as she lives, and you shall hear about her presently.

In the daytime Deb shut her eyes and tried to think what it would be like to run about with the children who did not wonder; to see streets, or a crowd, or a church-spire, or a funeral, or people going to a wedding, and other strange things of which the children who did not wonder talked to each other; and which, because her eyes were shut, she saw or seemed to see, and yet always knew that she never saw them at all.

At night she liked to open her eyes, and to lie with them open a long, late time, after the children who did not wonder were asleep. She liked to open her eyes at night, because then the two things that she liked best happened—the dark and the bells. It seemed, indeed, that the darker it was, the more bells there were always. First, there were the mill-bells, in the early winter dusk; they rang very hard and very merrily, to let the factory girls go home to put the little pink bows upon their nets. Then there were church-bells, they rang very heavily and respectably, to call people to the weekly prayer meetings, but they did not call the girls in the little pink bows. Sometimes there were fire-bells, that shrieked at Deb out of a yellow sky, and frightened her. At nine o'clock, when it was darkest, Deb heard the closest, pleasantest, awfulest bell of all. This was the great Androscoggin bell, the largest in New-England. Deb held her breath—every night she held her breath—to listen to this bell. It was more like a voice than a bell. Sometimes the little cripple thought it cried. Sometimes she thought it prayed. But she never heard it laugh. The streets, the river, the crowd, weddings, funerals, church-spires, all the strange things that Deb in the daytime saw with her eyes shut, came, or seemed to come, at night, when her eyes were open, and talk to her—but always prayed or cried, and never smiled—out of the solemn Androscoggin bell.

The solemn Androscoggin bell was ringing the mill-girls in by broad sunlight one noon, a little testily, when there came a knock at the door, and behind it the young lady of whom I heard. Deb was startled by the knock, and frightened by the young lady. It was not often that visitors came to Brick Alley, and it was still less often that Brick Alley had a visitor who knocked.

This was a young lady for whom Deb's mother did fine washing. Deb's mother wiped her hands and a chair, and the young lady sat down. She was a straight young lady, with strong feet, and long brown feathers in her hat, and soft brown gloves upon her hands. She had come, she said, with that Cluny set which she found that she should need for a party this very night; indeed, she was in so much haste for it that she had hunted Deb's mother up; which was a matter of some difficulty, as she had never had the least idea where she lived before, and how crooked the stairs were; but the lace was very yellow—as she saw—and would she be sure to have it done by nine o'clock to-night? and—

And there, turning her head suddenly, the straight young lady saw poor crooked Deb in her high chair, with the wonder in her eyes.

"Dear me!" said the straight young lady.

"I wonder if I frighten her," thought Deb. But she only wondered, and did not speak.

"Is this your—"

"Yes," said Deb's mother, "the oldest. Fifteen. I'll try my best, ma'am, but I don't know as I'd ought to promise." She spoke in a business-like tone, and turned the Cluny lace—a dainty collar and a pair of soft cuffs—about in her hands, in a business-like way. A breath of some kind of scented wood struck, in a little gust, against Deb's face. She wondered how people could weave sweet smells into a piece of lace, and if the young lady knew; or if she knew how much pleasanter it was than the onions that Mrs. McMahoney cooked for dinner every day in the week but Sunday, upon the first floor. But it gave her quite enough to do, to wonder, without speaking.

"Fifteen!" repeated the young lady, standing up very straight, and looking very sorry. "How long has she been—like—that?"

"Born so," said Deb's mother. "She's jest set in that chair ever sence she's ben big enough to set at all. Would you try gum on these, Miss?"

"But you never told me that you had a crippled child!" The young lady said this quickly. "You have washed for me three years, and never told me that you had a crippled child!"

"You never asked me, Miss," said Deb's mother.

ME TOO!

MANY years ago, the streets of Newburyport, Massachusetts, re-echoed the voice of a pretty Indian girl as she uttered her sweet notes in plaintive song, somewhat as follows:

"Come buy my baskets,
Come, ah! come; Gentlemen and Ladies,
You who have money, poor me has got none,
Come buy my nice baskets, and let me go home."

Her song was listened to by all, and people often visited the town to hear the Indian girl. In consequence of this and of her selling peculiarly nice baskets, she carried on a brisk trade, so that the family at home were taxed to their utmost in order to supply the demand. But envy, that "green eyed monster," never happy in view of another success induced a rival to enter the field, without a single trait of excellence of beauty, virtue, voice, or of wares, who endeavored to imitate the song of the original, but in this she was laughed to scorn by an appreciative public. Unsuccessful in every attempt at counterfeiting, she was at length obliged to follow the other at a short distance and cry out ME TOO—ME TOO.

In every community of either race may be found just such persons as envious Polly, either too indolent or not sufficiently up in their trade to invent either a SONG OR A BASKET, and are ready to cry out "ME TOO" whenever anything approaching a success is being developed.

FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES

has been before the world since 1865, was invented by Mr. JAMES I. FELLOWS, of St. John, N. B., has been introduced over a large amount of territory by expensive advertising and wherever known. Has been tried by the leading physicians in every city where introduced, and pronounced

BECOME POPULAR

A Tonic far surpassing any Composition hitherto used in Medicine.

It has obtained great favor and commendation in curing

CONSUMPTION,
BRONCHITIS,
ASTHMA,
DYSPEPSIA,
HEART DISEASE,
DEBILITY and PROSTRATION,

and other diseases developed by loss of nervous power and muscular relaxation.

Apothecaries and Dealers are allowed as good a margin for selling it as the expensive nature of the ingredients will admit of, but owing to the small profit to the inventor he is obliged to ask that cash invariably should accompany the order.

NOW IN FULL VIEW OF THE FACTS THAT THIS PREPARATION SELLS RAPIDLY, LEAVES A FAIR PROFIT TO THE RETAILER, IS EMINENTLY SUCCESSFUL IN CURING DISEASE, WE HAVE REASON TO BELIEVE THAT PERSONS IN SOME PARTS OF THE COUNTRY ARE MANUFACTURING AND FOISTING IMITATIONS OR SUBSTITUTING ARTICLES BEARING A NAME CLOSELY RESEMBLING THE GENUINE, BUT DIFFERING FROM IT IN COMPOSITION AND EFFECT, IN ORER TO OBTAIN MORE MONEY, DISHONESTLY PROFITING BY THE JUSTLY EARNED REPUTATION OF ANOTHER, SOILING THEIR OWN REPUTATION, INJURING THER FELLOWS, AND INTERFERING IN THE RELIEF OF SUFFERING HUMANITY.

THE PUBLIC ARE CAUTIONED

TO ASK FOR FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES, AND TAKE NO OTHER. THE NAME OF THE INVENTOR, JAMES I. FELLOWS, IS WRITTEN OBLIQUELY ACROSS THE INSIDE LABEL AND THE NAME FELLOWS & CO. IS BLOWN UPON THE BOTTLE.

The peculiarities of Fellows Hypophosphites are first its rapid absorption by the stomach and its healing influence upon the

MUCOUS MEMBRANE,

In the treatment of disease, it is necessary that this membrane, on account of its sensitive and sympathetic nature, should be in a healthy condition, no matter whether it be the lining of the Stomach, Lungs, or other organs; if otherwise, debilitating symptoms will surely present themselves.

CHYLE is formed by the regular digestive process, is secreted in the lacteal vessels, and is carried by the thoracic duct into the blood circulation. The manufacture of perfect chyle is only brought about by good digestion, and good digestion is secured by Fellows' Hypophosphites. Some necessary ingredients of healthy blood and ELEMENTS OF NERVOUS POWER, composing the Syrup are brought into the circulation along with this chyle, so that in a very short time after taking the remedy the patient feels the vitalizing influence of these ingredients upon the system.

By the use of certain constituents and a process discovered by the writer, and known only by his United States partner, his son, and himself, are these ingredients rendered potent and efficacious in removing disease and sustaining the system. This effect in a very remarkable and striking degree is observable on the nursing infant. Not only does the syrup benefit the mother, but assists wonderfully in developing the child. The attention of the writer has frequently been called to cases of emaciated children restored in this way.

IMPROVED DIGESTION,

liberal assimilation, and renewed vitality to the blood, are followed by tone to the nerves, and strength to the muscles, so that the heart, lungs, and even the stomach, which receives the first impulse from the syrup, are strengthened more and more.

Persons who have reached a

GREEN OLD AGE,

and been subject to the tortures of a dyspeptic life, in commending the use of the syrup, state that it has not only removed the disease, but secured to their advanced years comforts unknown since their youth, and so the

ENDLESS CHAIN

of good effects is formed by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, and we are safe in saying, from a long experience in medicine, that these effects are not possessed by any other combination, nor can its virtues be improved upon, as the following summing up will show:

It is most ACCEPTABLE TO BOTH PALATE AND STOMACH.

Sufficiently active to ensure gradual but decided benefit, yet so mild as never to do harm, no matter how long its use may be extended. (The author used it uninterruptedly nearly four years for CONSUMPTION, WITH PERFECT SUCCESS, and then discontinued its employment abruptly without a single unpleasant effect.) No other tonic enjoys such a reputation as this.

It assists digestion and promotes assimilation.

It vitalizes the Blood, supplying such ingredients as are deficient.

It restores tone to the nerves, including the mind.

It confers health on such organs as are dependent for efficiency on muscular action, such as the Lungs, Heart, Stomach, &c., &c.

And unless afflicted with some disease involving absolute organic loss, it will

SUSTAIN THE SYSTEM

until it reaches the age allotted to man by a beneficent Creator.

In all cases adhere strictly to the directions, use the food, clothing, &c., as directed, reject alcoholic stimulants and liquids which ferment easily, also tobacco and coffee, reside on elevated ground if possible, and take the syrup regularly in the prescribed doses.

By conforming to these rules no person will be disappointed in the virtues of

THE objects contemplated in the formation of this Society are three-fold, viz.: First—To secure to Stockholders a profitable return on their gradually accumulating capital, by its safe investment on real estate. Second—To afford to Borrowers facilities for obtaining legitimate Loans on the security of their property, and to enable them to repay such loans by periodical instalments spread over a period of ten years. Third—To provide all the advantages of a thoroughly secured Savings Bank system of business, and paying a higher rate of interest than is paid by those institutions.

Shares may be taken up at any time, and matured either by monthly investments or in one amount.

Money is received on deposit, bearing interest at six per cent. per annum, compounded half-yearly.

Monthly investments bear interest at six per cent., compounded monthly at maturity. Paid-up shares bear interest at seven per cent. per annum, compounded half-yearly at maturity.

The attention of the industrious classes of tradesmen, and of professional gentlemen, is respectfully invited to these arrangements. The wealthy classes will find in this Society a thoroughly safe and convenient mode of investing in Shares, and one that will relieve them from much anxiety in seeking after safe channels through which to make their investments.

This Society confers all the advantages of the Savings' Bank, pays a higher rate of interest, with more accommodating terms, and equal security.

CHALONER'S TONIC EXTRACT,

FOR Indigestion, Heart-Burn, Nausea, Nervousness, Biliousness, Debility. This medicine is an excellent remedy for these and similar diseases, with their attendant evils. The Directions that go with the medicine ought to be read and studied by every person who wants not only to get cured, but to be kept in health. The Tonic Extract is a medicine that really does good. It is composed of the Extracts of Seeds, Roots, Barks, &c. There is very little Alcohol in it, therefore invalids need not be afraid of it. Many of the Appetizers of the present day only give an appetite for Spirituous Liquors. This is not the case with the Tonic Extract; on the contrary, it is warranted, if the directions are followed up, to extinguish this vile thirst and make him feel that he does not need intoxicating liquors. The Tonic Extract was invented by the Proprietor, and is neatly put up in phials at 25 and 50 cents.

TESTIMONIALS.

The Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Waters' Pianos are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material.—Advocate and Journal

Our friends will find at Mr. Waters' Store the very best assortment of Pianos, Melodeons and Organs to be found in the United States.—Graham's Magazine.

The Waters' Piano ranks with the best manufactured in America.—The Independent, N. Y.

MUSICAL DOINGS.—Since Mr. Waters gave up publishing sheet music, he has devoted all his capital and attention to the manufacture and sale of Pianos and Melodeons. He has just issued a catalogue of his new instruments, giving a new scale of prices, which shows a marked reduction from former rates, and his Pianos have recently been awarded the First Premium at several Fairs. Many people of the present day, who are attracted, if not confused, with the flaming advertisements of rival piano houses, probably overlook a modest manufacturer like Mr. Waters; but we happen to know that his instruments earned him a good reputation long before Expositions and 'honors' connected therewith were ever thought of; indeed, we have one of Mr. Waters' Piano Fortes now in our residence, where it has stood for years, of which any manufacturer in the world might well be proud. We have always been delighted with it as a sweet toned and powerful instrument, and there is no doubt of its durability; more than this, some of the best amateur players in the city, as well as several celebrated pianists, have performed on the said piano, and all pronounce it a superior and first class instrument. Stronger endorsement we could not give.—Home Journal.
