

Poetry.

UP, UP!

"Up, up," cries the wakeful Cock,
"Did you not hear the village clock?
I have been up for an hour or more,
Crowing aloud at the stable door;
Dobbin has gone with the boy to plough,
Betty has started to milk the cow,
Sure there is plenty for all to do,
And all are up, young friend, but you."

"Up, up," cries the soaring Lark,
"Only sleep, my young friend, in the dark,
Oh let it never, never be said
You wasted the morning hours in bed;
Out of the window glance your eye,
And see how blue is the morning sky;
Open the casement, your slumber spare,
And smell how fresh is the morning air."

"Up, up," cries the busy Sun,
"Is there no work, little friend to be done?
Are there no lessons to learn I pray,
That you lie dozing the hours away?
Who would give light to the world below,
If I were idly to slumber so?
What would become of the hay and corn,
Did I thus waste the precious morn?"

"Up, up," cries the buzzing Bee,
"There's work for you as well as for me;
Oh how I prize the morning hour,
Gathering sweets from the dewy flower:
Quick comes on the scorching noon,
And darkness night will follow soon.
Say, shall I chide you for idle hours,
Time unimproved and wasted powers?"

COMMITTING PSALMS AND HYMNS TO MEMORY.

An objection is often made to the kind of religious instruction which we give to children, that it is not intelligible, and cannot be made immediately useful. It is never thought wrong to store up money, which we can in no way use now, but by letting it accumulate—never to look after present health, with a view to the state of the bodily constitution in years long to come—never, indeed, to fill the mind with rudiments of worldly science, whose remote application and benefit are neither appreciated nor comprehended. But the moment we talk of laying up funds, the interest of which the heart may live upon—of looking after the soul's health now, with a wise foresight of what the poor soul may have to encounter, in its passage over the rough "waves of this troublesome world"—of charging the memory with words that possibly may be understood in future years, so as to make an immortal soul "wise unto salvation," then we have to encounter "the disputers of this world," as setters forth of strange doctrine.

I knew an aged Christian, who had so nearly lost his eyesight, as to be able to read but a solitary chapter in his Bible, every day; and that with difficulty. He, of course, had many hours upon his hands, which, to an unemployed mind, would have been most truly, in the language of the poet, "an aching void." I asked him how he busied himself in his lonely moments. He replied, that one of his most frequent, as well as delightful occupations was, the repetition of hymns. Of these, most fortunately, he had committed to memory, in times gone by, an unusually large number; and now, when the precious word of God was, through his infirmity, an almost "sealed book" to him, he found no mean entertainment in "psalms and spiritual songs, singing," when his poor quivering voice forwaded outward melody, "singing with grace in" his heart "to the Lord."

Happy old man, thought I, who thus undesignedly made provision for unexpected solitude. His otherwise gloomy mind kindled and brightened by words of sacred rapture, may not inaptly be compared to the little Goshen, where the light of heaven was beaming in cheerful beauty, while clouds and darkness hung a thick curtain, over the broader domain of ungodly Egypt. But, oh how much happier he who in the midnight of distress for sin, discovers in some long forgotten, but then remembered hymn, a glimpse of the blessed "Way, and Truth, and Life,"—its Lord and God. And may not such a simple means be employed by Him, "who alone works great marvels" by instruments, which proud man would throw away as foolishness? I am fondly inclined to believe it, when I know the amazing and almost undying influence, of the commonest and most unestimated associations of childhood. There is a familiar tune, now long out of date and fashion, by which your correspondent was often lulled to slumber, by maternal fondness, in his infant's crib. Almost any psalm or hymn, now sung to that simple and frequently laughed at tune, would bring tears into his eyes. And God only knows how many psalms or hymns there are, which, by means little dreamed of as potential, may be able to melt even the stubborn into child-like pliancy.—Abridged from the Journal of Christian Education.

PRESCRIPTIONS.

For a Fit of Passion—Walk out into the open air. You may speak your mind to the wind, without hurting any one or proclaiming yourself to be a simpleton.

For a Fit of Idleness—Count the tickings of a clock. Do this for one hour, and you will be glad to put off your coat the next, and work like a negro.

For a Fit of Extravagance or Folly—Go to the work-house, or speak with the ragged and wretched inmates of a jail, and you will be convinced—

"Who makes his bed of brier and thorn,
Must be content to lie forlorn."

For a Fit of Ambition—Go to the churchyard, and read the grave-stones. They will tell you the end of a man at his best estate.

For a Fit of Envy—Come to the Bridge of Allan, or some other place of the kind, and see how many keep their carriages are afflicted with rheumatism, gout, and dropsy.

For a Fit of Despondency—Look on the good things which God has given you in this world, and promised in the next.

For a Fit of Doubt, Perplexity, and Fear—The following is a radical cure which may be relied on, for I had it from the great Physician—"Cast thy burden on the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

A SUCCESSFUL TEACHER.

Our readers have all probably heard of Busby the celebrated English schoolmaster. He lived in times when teachers used the imperative mood, and before "the moral suasion system" came into fashion. He seems to have understood Solomon very literally when speaking of the use of the rod, if we may judge from his practice. He was a thorough teacher and a rigid disciplinarian—sometimes laying on the rod with a vengeance—as it would be considered now-a-days. He however made good scholars. One day going into the House of Lords and seeing a full bench of Bishops, he remarked that he had "whipped nine of those Bishops on to that bench."—N. H. Bap. Reg.

CHILSON'S

Patent Air Warming and Ventilating Furnace.

(FOUR SIZES.)

THE fame of this well known FURNACE has now become so extended, that it would become mere supererogation to enter into any elaborate detail of its construction. Since the period of its first appearance, it has attracted the attention, and gained the encomiums of many individuals, who hold high rank in the scientific world, and completed an entire revolution in the construction of "HOUSE WARMERS."

The antiquated and now exploded notion, of obtaining a sufficiency of pure warm air from a small surface of Red Hot Metal, in contact with which, an inadequate supply of Cold Air disseminates into the apartments above a sluggish current of burnt and vitiated air, unfit for respiration, is rapidly being supplanted by the introduction of our new House Warmers, which, from its peculiar construction, can never become overheated, and by its extensive and well proportioned surface, is capable of warming a large volume of atmospheric air.

Another prominent peculiarity of our Furnace, is its complete adaptation for Wood or Bituminous Coal; the flues being so arranged that they cannot become closed by soot or ashes; this point has never before received the attention of Furnace Manufacturers, and is indeed the only article in which this description of fuel can be used to any advantage.

And when we take into consideration the fact, that this has become the standard on which all new Furnaces are founded, and the only Heater on which attempts at infringement are constantly being made; and add thereto, that it has received numerous Medals and first Premiums from various Scientific Institutions—not to make mention of the "World's Fair," (where, in competition with articles for similar purpose, from all parts of the world, it received the GREAT PRIZE MEDAL.)—it must convince every unprejudiced mind that this Furnace already holds the highest rank for the purposes to which it is applied.

Any information respecting our Furnace, or the general subject of "Heating and Ventilation" together with our pamphlets containing Cut of Furnace &c., and an Appendix of over 1000 References, will be promptly forwarded to all who address the Subscribers by Post.

We are also the Agents for, and have constantly on hand, an assortment of the Patent Mirror Marble Chimney Pieces—a new, cheap and elegant substitute for Marble—at prices varying from $18 to $150 each, a sample of which is in possession of the Editor of this paper.

Besides the above, we have always in our Warehouse a large stock of Cooking, Office, Hall, and Parlor Stoves; Ranges, Registers, Ventilators, &c., &c., which we are happy to present for inspection at 51 and 53 Blackstone Street, Boston.

in the World, purifying and cleansing, giving tone and strength to the whole system.

This Extract is the result of numerous experiments, and the Proprietors feel confident that they have arrived at that perfection in preparing it to which no other manufacturer has yet attained. Every person has heard of Sarsaparilla. All have heard of its uses.—And many Physicians in this City are conscious of the fact that our Extract is far superior to those sold under the names of Townsend's, Sands Bristol's, Brown's, or Bull's Sarsaparilla, inasmuch as it contains other prime remedies besides those used by the above named parties, is stronger, contains nothing but Vegetable productions, and is prepared without boiling, which causes it to retain all the volatile and active properties.

Encourage home manufacture.

We pledge our reputation on the truth of what we here state, that we believe it better in every sense than any other Extract of Sarsaparilla ever introduced.

Scrofulous diseases, Cutaneous Eruptions, Rheumatic Affections, Syphilitic disorders, Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Lung and Bronchial Affections, all diseases arising from the injudicious use of mercury, impure state of the Blood or habit of the system, are some of the many diseases which are cured by the use of this SARSAPARILLA.
