

Poetry.

THE BRIGHT LITTLE GIRL.

Her blue eyes they beam and they twinkle;
Her lips have made smiling more fair;
On cheek and on brow there's no wrinkle,
But thousands of curls in her hair.

She's little—you don't wish her taller;
Just half through the teens is her age;
And baby, or baby, to call her,
Were something to puzzle a sage.

Her walk is far better than dancing,
She speaks as another might sing;
And all by an innocent chancing,
Like lambskins and birds in the spring.

Unskilled in the airs of the city,
She's perfect in natural grace;
She's gentle, and truthful, and witty,
And ne'er spends a thought on her face—

Her face, with the fine glow that's in it,
As fresh as an apple-tree bloom;
And oh! when she comes, in a minute,
Like sunbeams she brightens the room.

As taking in mind as in feature,
How many will sigh for her sake!
I wonder, the sweet little creature,
What sort of a wife she would make!

DEATH OF THE YOUNG.

It must be sweet in childhood to give back
The spirit to its Maker, ere the heart
Has grown familiar with the paths of sin
And sorrow, to garner up its bitter fruits
I knew a lad whose infant feet had trod
Upon the blossoms of some seven springs;
And when the eighth came round and called him out
To revel in its light, he turned away,
And sought his chamber to lie down and die.

VISIT TO THE PATAGONIANS.—About nine, whilst drifting on past Picton Island, we observed lying off Garden Island three canoes, which presently put off to us, each one containing a Fuegian and his family, more or less numerous. In each there were two women and children, and in one an infant at the breast, in another a poor decrepid old man. Whilst scarcely discernible with the naked eye, we heard their stentorian voices, shouting "Yammer schooner" (give me):—amazing indeed is the power of the voice. As they severally hove in sight, they gesticulated and shouted with every wild and remarkable expression, one man in particular being very garrulous, and full of vivacity. The impression they made on my mind, as they became distinctly seen, first by the telescope, and afterwards by the naked eye, is one which can never be effaced. It seemed incredible they could be human beings. You observed a lopsided strange uncouth thing on the water, not to be called a boat, and not realizing our ideas of a canoe, but so deep, that just the heads of the Fuegians could be seen in it. As these dark masses of hair, like so many mops, drew nearer, we were able to discern the features, which were, indeed, surprising to us. On a nearer inspection, however, I could trace in many of them, indeed I may say in all, the lineaments of the noblest humanity, and features expressive of benevolence and generosity, though, as it were, buried deep in deplorable ignorance, and abject want. One woman had a remarkably prepossessing appearance, very open and cheerful; so also had one of the men, and he often in our after intercourse laughed heartily. I had taken some comfort to my mind, from the favourable aspect which the islands around us, particularly Picton and Garden Islands, presented; but now my heart swelled with emotion, full of pleasure and satisfaction that our errand was for the purpose of imparting benefits so great and so much needed to these poor creatures. I hailed the prospect with a degree of rapture.—Memoir of Richard Williams.

TWO PHILOSOPHERS.—The Rev. J. Craig makes the following statement in an article headed, "Sir Isaac Newton and Voltaire on Railway Traveling."

"Sir Isaac Newton wrote a work upon the prophet Daniel, and another upon the book of Revelation, one of which he said, that in order to fulfil certain prophecies before a certain date was terminated, namely, 1,260 years, there would be a mode of travelling of which the men of his time had no conception; nay, that the knowledge of mankind would be so increased, that they would be able to travel at the rate of fifty miles an hour. Voltaire, who did not believe in the inspiration of the Scriptures, got hold of this, and said: "Now look at that mind of Newton, who discovered gravity, and told us such marvels for us all to admire. When he became an old man, and got into his dotage, he began to study that book called the Bible; and it seems, that in order to credit its fabulous nonsense, we must believe that the knowledge of mankind will be so increased that we shall be able to travel at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The poor dotard!" exclaimed the philosophic infidel. Voltaire, in the self complacency of his pity. But who is the dotard now?"

"I bless God," said Dr. Watts, "that I can lie down with comfort at night, not being anxious whether I awake in this world or another."

How all of us who have mourned the loss of some dear friends, can answer to the truth of this little paragraph:

"The ideal face of any one to whom we are strongly and tenderly attached—that face which is enshrined in our hearts, and which comes to us in dreams long after it has mouldered in the grave—that face is not the exact mechanical countenance of the beloved person, not the countenance that we ever actually beheld, but its abstract, idealization; the spirit of the countenance, its essence and its life. And the finer the character, and the more various its intellectual powers, the more must this true eidolon differ from that a painter or a sculptor can produce."

DEATH OF AN AMERICAN MARCHIONESS.—By the last steamer from Liverpool, we learn that the Marchioness Wellesley died on the 17th ult., at Hampton Court Palace, after a short illness. She was a daughter of the late Richard Caton, of Maryland, and grand-daughter of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. One of Lady Wellesley's sisters is Mrs. MacTavish; another is Duchess of Leeds; and another, the Dowager Lady Stafford. Lady Wellesley's first husband was Robert Pattison, Esq. In 1825 she married the late Lord Wellesley, eldest brother of the Duke of Wellington. Her ladyship was for many years Lady of the Bedchamber to Queen Adelaide. The sister-in-law of Lady Wellesley married Jerome Bonaparte, and her son, now living in Baltimore, is, of course, full cousin to the Emperor of France. It was a most singular piece of fortune, that so many members of one American family should marry so many eminent foreigners.—N. Y. paper.

LESLIE'S STOVE VARNISH.

A Valuable discovery by which all Stoves, Pipes, Grates, Franklins, Iron Railings, and every description of Iron work, (where an intense heat is not required,) whether exposed to the weather or not, may be kept a splendid Jet Black with as beautiful a polish as a Coach Body and with one third the labour bestowed on other preparations.

This is a valuable preparation on account of its anti-corrosive properties; all Stoves and Pipes which are put away during the summer should have an application of the Stove Varnish which would effectually prevent the rusting or corroding of the Iron.

The Varnish is strongly recommended to Families and the Public in general, from three facts; First, its cheapness brings it within the reach of all; Second, from its high polish and durability, two applications during the year being at all necessary for a Franklin; and lastly, from no labour being required in its application, this last fact justly entitles it to the name of "SERVANT'S FRIEND."
