MY BIRD.

Ere last year's moon had left the sky,
A birding sought my Indian nest,
And folded, oh, so lovingly!
Her tiny wings upon my breast.

From morn till evening's purple tinge,
In winsome helplessness she lies,
Two rose-leaves, with a silken fringe,
Shut softly on her starry eyes.

There's not in Ind a lovelier bird,—
Broad earth owns not a happier nest,
Oh God! thou hast a fountain stirred,
Whose waters never more shall rest!

This beautiful, mysterious thing,
This seeming visitant from heaven,
This bird with the immortal wing,
To me—to me, Thy hand is given.

The pulse first caught its tiny stroke,
The blood its crimson hue, from mine;
This life, which I have dared invoke,
Henceforth is parallel with Thine.

A silent awe is in my room,
I tremble with delicious fear;
The future, with its light and gloom,
Time and eternity is here.

Doubts, hopes, in eager tumult rise,—
Hear, O my God, one earnest prayer!
Room for my bird in Paradise,
And give her angel plumage there!

SIR CHARLES NAPIER—the "Devil's Brother," as the Scinde warriors called him—amidst all his genuine nobleness of character and eagle flights of genius and daring, had something of the vulture as regards money. He affected to live in a small lodging in London and receive company in his bedroom, because the East India Company had not given him sufficient prize money. His will now administered to, shows no want of funds, though he richly merited every penny he received and ten times more. The personal property was sworn under £20,000; but it appears from the will that the general had given away £50,000 before his death. His real property (not taken into account in proving the will) was also great. He devised his Oatland estate, on the decease of Lady Napier, to her daughter Emily, and her issue; and his funds in the United Kingdom and Pennsylvania also to his wife for life. He leaves an Ameer sword, which had belonged to the Conqueror of Scinde, to his daughter Emily for her eldest son. Macmurdo's sword, with which the great Belooch chief, Jan Mahomed, was slain; also the sword given to him by Lord Ellenborough, he leaves to Major Macmurdo. His favourite arms were those he had of his father, which are to be divided among his brothers, and in respect to which he observes—"I have used my father's arms as he wished, and so have my brothers; and his ghost shall rejoice in the fame of his sons." His white cornelian ring (Hercules) given to him by his mother in 1807, and which was never once off his finger, he leaves to his wife and daughter Emily. On this he observes—"It was with him in every battle, and was only saved at Corunna, when made a prisoner, by his hand being so clotted with blood as to hide the ring." His father's cornelian ring, which he wore in battle, he leaves to his sisters and brothers, that it may be held by one who had seen it on the hand of their father, "whose rival in grandeur of body, and mind, and virtue, neither they nor I have ever seen." He leaves his journals and letter books to his brother William, with the hope, if anything is published, his own words may be used, and not frittered away. The last injunction has been complied with as respects Indian affairs; for, in the posthumous work recently published, the Indian Company and Lord Dalhousie are abused with true Napier-like warmth and heartiness of hatred and contempt.

WHAT IT IS TO BE AN EDITOR.—Dr. Johnson thus describes the difficulties and responsibilities of the editorial office:—"I know of no class of the community from whom so much disinterested benevolence and thankless labour are expected as from editors of newspapers. They are expected to feel for every one but themselves—to correct public abuses, and private ones also, without giving offence—to sustain the difficulties of others without regard to their own, to condemn improper measures of every one and no one at the same time. They are expected to note everything that is important or extraordinary; of men's opinions their notices must be calculated to please every one and at the same time offend no one."

THE POMP OF THE GREAT.—Let not the pomp which surrounds the great mislead your understanding. The prince so magnificent in the splendour of a court, appears behind the curtain but a common man. Irresolution and care haunt him as well as others, and fear lays hold of him though surrounded by his guards.—Lord Kaimes.

When you endeavour to make others laugh, take care that it is with you, not at you.

LESLIE'S STOVE VARNISH.

A Valuable discovery by which all Stoves, Pipes, Grates, Franklins, Iron Railings, and every description of Iron work, (where an intense heat is not required,) whether exposed to the weather or not, may be kept a splendid Jet Black with as beautiful a polish as a Coach Body and with one third the labour bestowed on other preparations.

This is a valuable preparation on account of its anti-corrosive properties; all Stoves and Pipes which are put away during the summer should have an application of the Stove Varnish which would effectually prevent the rusting or corroding of the Iron.

The Varnish is strongly recommended to Families and the Public in general, from three facts: First, its cheapness brings it within the reach of all; Second, from its high polish and durability, two applications during the year being at all necessary for a Franklin; and lastly, from no labour being required in its application, this last fact justly entitles it to the name of "SERVANT'S FRIEND."
