

Doetry. For the Christian Visitor.

The writer of the following verses possesses a hope in!the Lord Jesus Christ, and has written these lines in reference to a sermon he heard delivered by the Rev. G. F. Miles, when he looked on him, for the first time, from these words, "Seek ye first the king-dom of God," &c., sometime before he was the subject of the above mentioned hope.

While wrapt in the shades of a misguided youth, A foe in my soul both to God and his truth, Unacquainted with charms, that flow from the mind, I saw thee, I loved thee, and to thee inclined.

Before heaven's sun, had darted that ray, Which scattered my darkness, and ushered my day, Before I had felt the soft breath of the Lord, I saw thee unsheath his two-edged sword.

I saw those dark eyes, as they gazed on the throng, I heard those deep tones, as they gased on the throng, I heard those deep tones, as they uttered that song That shall burst from the harps of all, to whom given, As they march through the plains of Immanuel's heaven.

That sermon was founded on Christ's exhortation, Where he portrays the evil of procrastination, And kindly proclaims, that all good is given To those who seek first the kingdom of heaven.

There sat on that brow, so exhausted and pale, The large drops of sweat, as the dew in the vale, That tall manly form was all in commotion, Like the tremulous face of the deep heaving ocean.

The dark shades of hell, seemed to wrap round my frame, When that voice, as from Sinai, proclaimed in God's name. With deep, awful words, more endearing than earth, That my soul would be damned, without the new birth.

But as dews of the morn, that float on the t rees Are drank by the sun, or blown by the breeze, As the shadows of darkness are scattered by day-So my sighs and my fears seemed to vanish away.

The Field Marshal's Daughter.

There has recently appeared a work of great interest, hy Field Marshal de W____, of Austria, entitled, "Recollections of my Times." But there is one real incident connected with his eventful life which has not found place in those recollections, and which I will relate in a few words.

The veteran General who more than once staid the almost invincible battalions of Napoleon, and who, like Kadetkiz, played nobly his part in Austria's darkest bear of 1848, was a number of years Governor of the Tyrol ; and resided then at Inspruck, its capital. There he spent his time, between the duties of his high office, attention to his only daugh. liked that course very well. But he had to ter L-, and the culture of flowers, for which occupation he has a great predilection. The city of Inspruck is beautifully situated, amid lefty mountains, whose bases are covered with vineyards and gardens, cultivated by after clesely examining it, he turned round the perserving, hard-working peasants. The river Inn, which bathes the valley with its excellent work for a new boy." Did he not limpid waters, adds greatly to the enchantment of the scenery around. Field Marshal de W. lost his wife long before he assumed the Governorship of Tyrol; but the charm and solace of his life was his only child, mentioned above, upon whom he had lavished his tenderest care. She had from childhood always been near him :: often riding on horseback close by her father, when he passed the review of his troops, and thus she had early become known to every soldier of his regi- He is in a higher post now, and is doing well ment, as the beloved child of the General. __ more ways than one in the world.

love was deepened, and she came forth, openly renouncing Romanism, professing Christ before men. Then she wrote to her father her change of opinions. The General became very angry- He not only pronounced malediction upon her head, but abandoned her, who before knew no want, and refused even to see her again. But when forsaken, God took her up. She went to England, and there manifested great energy of character by maintaining herself as a governess, and wealthy and happy. There are very few soils but are benefited by draining, except such as many an hour have I spent with her, at her little cottage at E., in one of the delightful are on a declevity, and naturally dry. point of view, to an English gentleman.-When I last saw her, she was spending a winter in Italy, and though she was then the object of much admiration in a gay circle, she always firmly maintained her religious principles.

Affliction has visited her; yet her trust is still in Him who mercifully lead her to the light of the truth, and in all her trials she feels that God can give her tenfold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

I shall not learn a Trade.

I should like to know why not. Hundreds and thousands have learnt one before you, and many more will do the same thing. A trade well learned may make a name and a fortune well earned.

I don't think much of a boy who says he is not going to learn a trade. If his place in the world is such that he can learn a good trade and have a good situation, he will be very unwise not to seize the opportunity. A boy who goes to a trade determined to make himself master of his business, and to be a well-informed and intelligent workman, will soon rise to the head of his profession, if he pursues the right path. The apprentice who delights to do his work well, and do it to the best of his ability, so as to earn the praise of his employer, will feel happier and be more an honourable man, than he who does just enough to shuffle along through the day, and then hurries away from his work as though it were a nuisance and a curse.

I knew a bey who was tee poor to go to school and college, although he would have work. So he went to learn a trade. He tried to do his work always to the very best of his ability. He went to a place, and one day his master came to look at what he had done, and and said to the foreman, " James, that is very feel as proud as if he had won a triumph? He was rewarded from the start with the good opinion of his employer, and he never forgot the pleasure with which he heard his master's encouraging words. He always tried to do his work well .- to do in fact the very best, and while other apprentices did not seem to care how their work was done, or how they spent their master's time, he took a pride in working as though he was in his own shop.

Yet, accustomed as she was then to the life Not long ago a boy was leaving school, and MEDICATED INHALATION. - A New Method 1-A most wonderful discovery has re-cently been made by Dr. CURTIS for the cure of Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Coughs, colds, and all Lung, Complaints, by Medicated Inhalation. Dr. CURTIS'S HYGEAN VAPOR and CHERRY SYRUP, has accomplished the most wonderful cures of Asthma, and Consumption in the City of New York and vicinity for a few months past, ever knowe to man. Here is a case of ASTHMA CURED.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 20th., 1863. For about eight years I have been severly afflicted with the Asthma; for the last two years I have suffer-ed beyond all my powers of description; months at a time I have not been able to sleep in a bed, getting what rest I could sitting in my chair. My difficulty of heatthing and my sufferings, were so creat at times that for hours together in the past six years 1 have had the aid and attendance of some of the most cele baated physicians, but have received no permanent benefit, and but little relief. I at length had the good baated physicians, but have received no permanent benefit, and but little relief. I at length had the good fortune to procure Dr, Curtis's Hygeana or Inhaling Hygean Vapor, and Chrery Syrup. At the time I first obtained it, I was suffering under one of my most vis-lent attacks, and was in great distress, almost sufficat-ing for want of breath. In less than ten minuites from the time I applied the inhaler to my stomach, and took a teaspoon full of the Cherry Syrup I was reliev-ed inja great measure from the difficulty of breathing, and had a comfortable night. I have since continued it with the greatest possible benefit, and am now com-paratively well. God only knows the amount of suffer-ing this medicine has relieved me from. This is the first step to the permanent im-when passing to the drains.

6th. Draining renders a soil more easily worked, and enables the farmer to pursue his avocations immediately after the rain ceases to fail; the crops can be put in earlier, and will, consequently, ripen earlier.

7th. It has the effect of warring the soil, usual. by removing the water, and thereby lessening the amount of evaporation.

8th. The removal of an excess of water is equal to an actual deepening of the soil, as the absence of superfluous water from the subsoil enables the roots of plants to penetrate deeper in search of food, where some of the fertilizing matters may have been deposited by the rains.

9th. Wetness prevents the action of manure by excluding air and heat; without which hose changes (so essentially necessary to produce food for plants,) cannot take place. 10th. On moorland districts, the subsoil is rendered hard by the deposition of ferruginous matter, which is easily broken up by draining and subsoiling.

11th. The general health of the country is benefitted by lessening the amount of evaporation, which produce fogs, mildews and malaria of different kinds.

The advantages of draining might be muliplied to an indefinite extent ; but I consider the above amply sufficient to induce every person engaged in the cultivation of the soil to pay the strictest attention to its thorough and efficient drainage.

of the camp, and often placed in no ordinary siz lation, she never was allowed to forget her name, or the elevated position of her father: and, as the daughter of a nobleman, she acquired all that peculiar refinement of manners and taste, which, in Europe, seems to be the appendage of noble birth.

Gen. de. W. was a rigid papist, strongly attached to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, and in its dogmas his daughter was educated. The circle in which she moved was very gay. At any time she could command the bands of the regiment for an evening ball, or a Mutinec Musicale, and she thecame the centre of the brilliant society of the provincial capital. In that throng who flocked to the Governor's palace, noone pointed her guished men of modern times ? But,

"God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform."

It was in the summer of 184-. All Inspruck was out, breathing the balmly air, and enjoying the last rays of the setting sun. On the palace-square, a large multitude was assembled to hear the band playing some merry national airs, in honour of their Governor, for it was his birthday. He and his daughter were upon the balcony, responding by graceful bows to the enthusiastic vivas of the brave Tyrolese. The General perceived amid the crowd, a gantleman and some ladies, who appeared to be strangers. 'He dispatched immediately one of his servants to ask them to enter the palace, as they would more conveniently enjoy the fete. This accidental introduction was to be the beginning of a new phase in their life, and from it the General and his daughter were to date.
