TOUCHING AND BEAUTIFUL LINES.

The New England Diadem gives its readers the following beautiful stanzas, which were suggested by hearing read an extract of a letter from Capt. Chase, giving an account of the sickness and de at of his brother-in-law, Mr. Brown Owen, who died on his passage to California:

Lie up nearer, brother, nearer,
Fo my limbs are growing cold,
And thy presence seemeth dearer,
When thy arms around me fold; I am dying, brother, dying.
Soon ye'll miss me in your berth,
For my form will soon be lying,

'Neath the ocean's briny surf. Hearken to me, brother, hearken, I have something I would say, Ere the veil my vision darken, And I go from hence, away I am going, surely going, But my hope in God is strong;

I am willing, brother, knowing That he doeth nothing wrong. Tell my father when you greet him, That in death I prayed for him, Prayed that I may one day meet him, In a world that's free from sin;

Tell my mother, (God assist her, Now that she is growing old.) Tell her, her child would glad have kissed her When his lips grew pale and cold.

Listen, brother, catch each whisper, 'Tis my wife I'd speak of now; Tell. O tell her how I missed her, When the fever burned my brow; Tell her, brother, closely listen, Don't forget a single word. That in death my eyes did glisten With the tears her memory stirred.

Tell her she must kiss my children, Like the kiss I (ast impressed; Hold them as when last I held them, Folded closely to my breast; Give them early to their Maker, Putting all her trust in God, And he never will forsake her. For He's said so in His word

O, my children! Heaven bless them! They were all my life to me, Would I could once more caress them, Ere I sink beneath the sea; Twas for them I crossed the ocean. What my hopes were I'll not teil; But they've gained an orphan's portion, Yet He doeth all things well.

Tell my sisters I remember Every kindly parting word, And my heart has been kept tender, By the thoughts their mem' y stirred-Tell them I ne'er reached the haven Where I sought the " precious dust." But I have gained a port called Heaven, Where the gold will never rust.

Urge them to secure an entrance, For they'll find there brother there; Faith in Jesus and repentance, Will secure for each a share. Hark ! I hear my Saviour speaking, Tis, 1 know his voice so well When I am gone, O don't be weeping. Brother, here's my last farewell.

Scene in Real Life.

We do not often indulge in the sentimental, out occasionally in our walks our attention called to the events happening before us, which leave an impression upon our minds, and lead us to thoughts and reflections which it is well we, as all other men, should indulge in at times.

We had been on the north side to see an acquaintance at his hotel, and returning by Clark Street, found, as is generally the case when a man is in a hurry, one of those little busy inventions, a steam tug, had passed up the river with a small fleet of vessels in tow. one of which had been cast off, and had hauled in just west of the bridge. Seeing no hopes of getting to our office for some time. and knowing that our compositors could not be in any worse temper an hour later than then, we revolved to bear it meedly, and find mental occupation by observing what was going on about us. We little expected what did occur. The vessel we have mentioned had been moored, or made fast outside of several canal boats, and as we stood looking at the men upon her, one of them approached a female, who had been crouched upon deck, addressing her, pointed to the shore, then to the bridge, and then down towards the thronged and busy streets of living, moving, headlong Chicago. She rose picked up a small bundle, from which she drew forth a coin, which she tendered to the hardy sailor. He refused it, whatever it was, and lending her a hand, helped her from the vessel to the dock, and from the dock up to the bridge. By this time a large crowd of persons thronged the north end of where the bridge would be, if it was always a bridge, and in contemplating the new faces, and the representatives of the various classes there assembled, we had almost forgotten the incident we have related. Our attention was called from a vain endeawor to discover some hope of a cessation of tugs going up and down, and schooners and brigs pulling in and out, by hearing a most audible sob from some one near us. It was not the sob of childhood, caused by some sudden change from gaiety to grief; it was the sob of some maturer breast, filled with a sense of loneliness and despair. It reached other ears than ours. A lady, dressed in a manner which bespoke a wealth that could gratify taste and elegance, and who like ourselves, was detained at that place, stood near, accompanied by three children, whose desire to get at the extreme edge of the platform, she with difficulty repressed.

With a woman's tenderness her heart re cognized the stifled ebulitions of sorrow, and approaching the person from whom it came, who was none other than the woman we have just seen land from the vessel, she quietly, and in that soft sweet voice of woman which none can resist, inquired if she stood in need, or was she ill, or was her sorrow such that it could be relieved? A portion of the railing near us was vacant, and toward that, and almost at our side, these two women ca:ne to converse. The stranger was a fair, handsome girl, about seventeen years, neatly but coarsely dressed, with shoes not only worn, but heavy and unsuited as much for her sex as for the season. The poor girl in honest as for the season. The poor girl in honest aimplicity, and with an earnestness which despair alone could impart, related her history, uninterrupted by a single observation from her companion, but often accompanied by the tears of both. We have not space for it at length, and we will give it, changing its order just enough to enable us to state it briefly.

that she had a sister, the eldest, whose name was Lizzie; that sister, years ago, against her father's will, had married, and with her sight, had gone off, and had not been heard of since—no doubt was dead. At the time of ber sister's marriage, her parents were wealthy; brother to Him who had really sealed the truth the pride which drove away Lizzie had brought silent regrets, and after awhile came melancholly complainings by the mother sighing for the embrace of her first born. These soon led to anger and criminations at home, and dissipation by the father abroad. Losses came upon them, and at last, gathering the few worldly goods they possessed they left the proud city of their birth, and settled five years ago, upon land purchased of the Gov-ernment in Wisconsin. Her brothers, some older and some younger than herself, one by one drooped and died; and soon the mother, calling in agony upon her long exiled daughter, joined her boys in a happier clime.

None were now left but the father and this poor girl. He too was humbled and stricken by that slow and certain disease which lights up the cheek, and fires the eves with the brilliancy of health, even when its victim is on the confines of eternity; he would sit and tell to his surviving child the acts of winning love and sacrificing devotion, which had made his Lizzie the very object of life. He would talk of her sweet smiles and her happy disposition, until memory would lead him to the hour when he had bid her depart. and not let him see her face again. His decline was rapid, and this one child saw the first flowers which the warmth of spring had called from the soil of her mother's grave, disturbed, uprooted, and thrown aside, that his ashes might mingle with those of the mother of his children.

At his death, he charged her to pay off, as far as she might be able, the debts incurred to procure the necessaries of life; the land, A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, which for want of culture, had not increased in value, was sold, and left her but a few dollars. These she expended in rearing a few boards to mark the spot where she had seen buried, one after another, her beloved kindred. She had heard that in this city there to start. There are no ifs nor ands about it, suiting were offices where strangers wishing employment, could find work. She had on foot knows the effects of it in every case. It has already travelled many miles, until she reached Milwaukee, and thence by the kindness of a poor sailer, who had seen her day by day on the dock, watching the steamers depart, and inquired and ascertained that she wished to and had told her that by crossing the bridge she could find one of those places where situations were given to worthy applicants. Such was her story. She had mentioned no name except that of father, mother, and the endearing appellations of brother George. Willie, &c. Both of the women were crying

These two beings, children of the same parents, how different have been their paths, and how deep their sufferings! We have seen them together in "Lizzie's" carriage, driving along Lake Street. They are doubtless as happy as their bereavements, relieved only by the consciousness of duty faithfully performed, can permit. But while the suffering of that father and mother may be faintly known from the constitution of the same Damiel Bri gs, Salmon River, Q. C., C. Burpie, Chipman, H. & B. Babbitt, Coal Mines, Q. What must have been her grief, when her letters written from a prosperous city, from the house of her wealthy and kind husband, telling them of her success, and the birth of her children, were unnoticed and unanswered? She must have fel indeed, that the hearts of that father and mother, her sister and brothers must have been hardened against her. We will say no more. That scene will live in our memory while we can remember the holy love of father, mother, and kindred. - Chicago Times.

Missionary Ruminiscences.

Concluded from last week's Visitor. Moses did hear it, indeed. His whole soul quivered with excitement at every syllable. What could he do? To bow in calm submission was equal to a sacrifice of his principles, and a denial of his Lord. He knew his entire innocence of even the thought of rebellion; but all his protestations would be counted worthless, if not accepted as aggravations of sup-posed guilt. So, suddenly raising and clasp-ing his hands, he kneeled down upon the earth, immediately beneath the martyr's head, saying in solemn voice,-LET US PRAY!"

Immediately the whole circle knelt in prayer. What though David had, so cruelly and causelessly, been put to death! What though the furious persecutors were all present there! What though their imprecations and threatencauselessly, been put to death? What though the furious persecutors were all present there! What though their imprecations and threatenings were both loud and deep? The whole throng kneeled down in prayer. And now, before the masters could recover their surprise, the twoice of the poor slave in the centre rose clearly over the scene of death-like silcuce. He prayed that God would "bless all the massa buckra—and make them to know the Lord Jesus Christ,—how he came into the world to save poor sinners,—that they might wash all their sins away in 'his precious blood;' that so their souls might be saved at last," &c. With such fervour, and unction did he pray for them, that they were all disarmed. They calmly listened. Defiance and love they had never seen in such firm fellowship before. What could men do who had never prayed for themselves? There was not one who could cast the first stone. The prayer ended, they themselves? There was not one who could cast the first stone. The prayer ended, they turned away. Perhaps they were now satisfied that such religion was no sham Perhaps they felt that men who could pray for them so, would rather die than injure a hair of their heads. Perhaps they were assured, by the dauntless unanimity they had seen, that blood-shedding would never repress Christianity. Or, the whole of such thoughts and feelings might at once pervade their minds. However that may be, the good man, the living martyr, who, though ready to die, they had not the heart to slay, continued his holy enterprise. The sounds of prayer and songs of praise still continued to abound; nor did those masters ever more attempt to stay the

I have examined them with much satisfaction, am prepared to express my congdent opinion, that they are the most perfect Instruments of the kind manufactured, so far as I know. Messrs. Mason & Hamilin,—Gents,—I heard with pleasure of your commencing the manufacture of Messrs. Mason & Hamilin,—Gents,—I heard with pleasure of your commencing the manufacture of Melodens, feeling assured that you would be able from your practical skill, ample facilities, and peculiar advantages, to effect important improvements in the construction of these Instruments. Having now had an opportunity of examining a number of your instruments, I am by no means disappointed in the result. You are certainly producing Melodeons, which, in all desirable characteristics are, so far as I can perceive, faultless. An Instrument possessing so many beauties, is admirably adapted to the parlor and the church and I am satisfied that so soon as the public become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.

"After having carefully examined the Melodeons of Messrs. Mason and Hamiin, I am enabled to say, that, in my opinion, they are decidedly superior to any others with which I am acquainted."

Here is a case of ASTHMA CURED.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 20th., 1855.

For about eight years I have been severly afflicted with the last two years I have suffered beyond all my powers of description; months at a time I have not been able to sleep in a bed, getting what rest I could sitting in my chair. My difficulty of breathing and my sufferings, were so great at times, that for hours together in the past six years I have suffered beyond all my powers of description; months at time I have not been able to sleep in a bed, getting what rest I could sitting in my chair. My difficulty of breathing and my sufferings, were so great at times, that for hours together in the past six years I have suffering and my sufferings, were so great at times, that for hours together in the past six years Hygean Vapor, and Chrery Syrup. At the time I first obtained it, I was suffering under one of my most vio lent attacks, and was in great distress, almost sufficating for want of breath. In less than ten minuites from the time Iapplied the inhaler to my stomach, and took a teaspoon full of the Cherry Syrup I was relieved in a great measure from the difficulty of breathing, and had a comfortable night. I have since continued it with the greatest possible benefit, and am now comparatively well. God only knows the amount of suffering this medicine has relieved mc from. My advice to the suffering is—TRY IT. MARGARET EASTON.

CONSUMPTION CURED.—New York, Dec. 27td. 1863.—I came to New York in the ship Telegraph my native place is St. John, New Brunswick, when I reached the city, my health was very poor, had a very bad cough, raised a good deal of matter, which was frequently mixed with blood, bad pain in my left side, and was very weak and emaciated. My friends and physician pronounced my case consumption, and beyond the reach of medicine. I accidentally heard of Dr. Curtis's Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup, and obtained a package, which I verily believe was the means of saving my life. Soon after wearing the Inhaler, I found it relieved the Cherry Syrup as directed, and continued to do so, my cough gradually growing better until it entirely left me, and I now consider myself cured. I still wear the Inhaler, as the use of it is rather pleasant, and believing it strengthening and purifying to the lungs, I feel unwilling t present to dispense with it. believing it strengthening and purifying to the lungs I feel unwilling t present to dispense with it.

DEAR SIR:—I am happy to be able to certify to the efficiency of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and to the truth what it is represented to accomplish.—Having a little boy suffering greatly from teething, who could not sleep and at night by his cries would not permit any of the family to do so, I purchased a bottle of the Soothing Syrup in order to test the remedy.—and when given to the child according to the directions, its effect upon him was like magic, he soon went to sleep, and all pain and nervousness disappeared. We have had no trouble with him since; and the little fellow will pass through with comfort the excruciating process of teething, by the sole aid of Mrs. Winstow's Soothing Syrup. Every mother who regards the health and life of her children, should possess it.
