For the Christian Visitor.

"A time to Dance." Shall it be at the dawning of early day, When nature is clothed in robes of gray? Or shall it be in the noontide sun Ere yet the work of the day is done? Or in twilight's soft and dewy hour? Or when night's dark clouds around us lour?

Shall we dance on the day that Jehovah blest, And gave to us a day of rest? Shall we lay by our task in the midst of the week, And in dancing our pleasure and pastime seek? Shall we dance on the eve when the God of the Proclaimed a rest from fatigue and toil?

In youth, in age, or in manhood's prime, Shall we dance to the sound of the merry chime When sinners are roused by the chastening rod. Or the ransomed spirit ascends to God? By the infant's grave, by the old man's bier. Shall the gay and giddy crowd appear?

There's a time to pray, and a time to repent, For these each hour of the day is lent; A time to hear, and a time to preach, A time to learn, and a time to teach; But though we may never our duties neglect, Yet I cannot the time to dance select. St. George, Feb. 12, 1857.

A-TALE LITERALLY OF TRUTH.

" I was moved, I almost relented, but pride soon changed my half formed resolution could I present the fallen Elizabeth to my companions as my wife ? No, thought I, that is impossible !" She watched my countenance with trembling emotion. "Elizabeth I replied, "I would be ashamed to request any clergyman, to marry us in your present situation, but I will insert a notice in the papers purporting that a marriage between us has taken place this will restore your fair fame, while the omission of the date and the clergyman's name will put curiosity at fault. "But Robert," said the poor unfortunate, "that will have no effect in reconciling me to myself, nor will it restore my self-esteem, for I will not then be a wife in the sight of God." "Well then Elizabeth, I replied, soon as you are recovered, we will remove to some part or the country where we are unknown, and there be legally married, we can then conceal from every one the time when our marriage really took place." This did not satisfy the poor girl, but she was forced to acquiesce.

We first heard of this medicine during a visit to the New England States, and being struck with the novelity of the title, were induced to make some inquiry about it; and we were surprised to learn that it was kept constantly in the houses of most of the inhabitants of the cities and villages where we stopped, to be used in cases of sudden attacks of pain, burns, scolds, & c, and we heard it spoken of in terms of high commendation, both by druggists and physicians. — Philadelphia Eagle.

Had you any intentions of fulfilling you promise ?" enquired Mrs. Truman.

"Nothing was further from my purpose," he replied, " but I desired to soothe her as much as possible. I then hired a more comfortable apartment, and procuring some necessary furniture, Elizabeth removed to it the next day. It was also requisite to renew her wardrobe, these expenditures made a great diminution in my finances, which were not very flourishing. Elizabeth then continually reminded me of my promise to insert our pretended marriage in the paper, I believe she considered this a pledge that I would ful fil my engagement. I at length vielded to her entreaties, but not wishing to answer the enquiries to which I knew this would subject me, I applied for, and obtained some commissions to execute in St. John N. B., and after making a division of my funds with Elizabeth, I left Halifax.

Elizabeth knew not that my absence was voluntary, she thought that business absolutely required my presence in St. John, and expected me to return in a fortnight, but nothing was further from my thoughts, the sight of her was painful to me. I remained in New Brunswick as long as was possible without risking the displeasure of my employers. At length I could no longer make any excuse for delay, I was recalled, and was travelling towards Halifax, when as I have already informed you, I was overtaken by the storm."

"Have you not written to the young woman?" enquired Truman. "I have, said Robert, and received frequent answers to my letters, but a month has elapsed since I last heard from her." "Did you remit her any money," enquired Mrs. Truman.

"No, for I received no more than sufficed for my own expences, for I am fond of social pleasures, and I thought she might economise what I had left her."

"Young man, said Mrs. Truman, "I feel very anxious concerning your victim, and feel the same impression as yourself, that something fatal has occured, if you repent sincerely, and truly desire to make amends for your cruelty, and to repair your crime as far as now lies in your power, then hasten to depart with the morning daws, nor delay a moment until you arrive at Halifax."

"Were can I procure a horse ?" said Coldham.

"I will lend you mine," replied the old man, "you can leave it at the next tavern where you can hire another,—pause not on the way, and if your victim be yet alive, strive to rescue her from the grave."

Harrassed by remorse, and exhausted with fatigue, Robert arrived in Halifax, having travelled night and day, he hastened to the lodgings of Elizabeth, he met his sister Mrs. Montrose at the door. "You have then arrived," she exclaimed, " to see the close of the tragedy, walk in and view your work." He entered trembling with apprehension; extended on a bed stead, wrapped in a shroud lay the lifeless form of the unfortunate Elizabeth; on a pillow, near its dead mother, reposed a on a pillow, near its dead mother, reposed a poor little sleeping babe. Robert uttered a cry of horror, and fell senseless on the floor: The remedies applied by his sister, restored him to life, but his peace of mind was fled, horror and remorse with their scorpion stings lacerated his bosom; while brooding over the pale form of his helpless victim, he was told the particulars of her fate. The poor unfortunate had endeavoured to eke out the

My Mother's Portrait.

We make the following extract from a lefter, as presenting, a beautiful portraiture of a Christian mother's character :

Your letter, my dear sister, had, in a measure, prepared me for the sad intelligence that your mother is numbered with the dead ; and yet I did fondiy hope that I might once more see my dear mother in the land of the living. I feel, however, that it is all right.

She has gone down down to the grave in a good old age, and has, during a long life, giving the most delightful evidence and satisfactory assurance, that if Christ lives, she shall live also forever in his presence, among the blessed and sanctified in heaven. I have often felt and sometimes said, that to me my mother was the best exemplification of a Gospel Christian that I have ever known.

During all her life, that my memory can dwell upon, from my early childhood, there is not a single dark outline that can impair the beautiful symmetry of her Christian character. Even while a child, her patience and faithful perseverance instructing her children, often excited my surprise and admiration.

I have often known her in worldly prosperity when all was bright and joyous. I have known her in adversity, when the heavens were overcast with gloom and sadness, and the storms raged with a power, such as few are called to encounter. I have known her when the wants of a family were to be met by years of patient industry and economy t have known her when these clouds were passing away, and the evening of her days was calm and serene; and in all the vicissi-tudes of her long and eventful life, she has even illustrated the sublime principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

"Blessed," indeed, are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.-Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Bles-

Deacon John Macgregor, in the 17th year of and throws over e'en the darkest scenes the her age, leaving a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

In her last hours she called upon all who stood around her dying couch to prepare to meet her in that blissful land, where " the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are forever at rest." She then bade them all of life, and looks beyond the vail towards farewell feeling that she would soon mingle with the bright and unfading glories of that world, where parting is unknown.

Her sickness was protracted, and severe, but she bore all her sufferings with perfect resignation to the will of God, and met her end with patience, and full confidence that she was about to be crowned with glory and honor in God's everlasting kingdom.

In one of our conference me tings she related her christian experience, and manifested a wish to follow her Saviour in his appointed way, but was unable to do so, on account of her illness.

She was buried on Tuesday 3rd inst. The writer addressed a solemn congregation from Eccles. 12, 7. How true the words "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Whooping Cough, and all complaints tending to Consumption.
 It is particularly, recommended to the attention of Public Speakers, Singers, and all persons who use the Voice freely.
 Its enface for clearing the Voice is truly astonishing !
 There has been so much humbug practised under the pretence of furnishing the public with superior Medicines, that the inventor of a GRNUNE ARTICLE only begs that each one would try for himself, for society demands that GOOD ME OTTINES should be made public. Even those which do possess some virtue are held at such everthint prices that they do not come within the reach of the poor; while they, above all, are the most liable to suffer from the consequences of neglect and exposure.
 Do not the poor suffer daily? It is true they do, for the proprietor of the Vegetable Cough Candy has obviated this diminish and sold at a price which will place it within the reach of twenty nine different ingredients, but when combined with others are highly subtry.
