A long paragraph might be occupied in considering the condition of our Denomination in this State; but there is not room now. They have gained much during the last fifty years and are working on though amidst many discouragements. The principal of these is emigration to other parts of the ceuntry. The population of the rural districts remains nearly stationary. It is becoming a serious question how three evangelical societies can prosper in a town of a thousand or fifteen hundred inhabitants. It is evident that no one can become very strong except on conditions that one of the others gives up the ground or is converted and absorbed by one of its rivals. The first change no one wishes to contemplate: the second each would like to bring about, but it is not found easily to accomplish it. July 18, 1857. Α.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT .-- On Wednesdy morning last, about 11 o'clock, as two men. named John Mawhinney and Joseph Morrison were c rossing the flats on their way, from the St. Andrews road to Mace's Bay Settlement, in a wagon, the water being too high the fore wheels of the wagon parted from the body and both men were precipitated in the water. The owner of the wagon (Mawhinney) held on to the reins, and was dragged ashore by the borse-the other man floated away on the wagon seat, and although Mawhinney at once gave the alarm and made every effort to save him, he was drowned. His body was found a short time afterwards floating out of the Channel; it was carried to the house of James Ellis, where an inquest was held before Dr. Thompson, Coroner, and a verdict returned of "accidental death by drowning." The deceased was a schoolmaster in Mace's Bay-a single man-and much respected for his uprightness and faithful discharge of his duties as a teacher. His age was about 50.-Ccurier.

and other Bills, have, after a tedious examination, been fully committed for trial, and it is thought, will be removed to Fredericton by Habeas Corpus to-day. Their names are Savage, Waters, and Davenport, alias Barton. Watters is the man who brought the horse and wagon to the Yorkshire Tavern, and when he heard that the police were on his trail, disappeared so suddenly. He was some days afterwards arrested in Amherst, N. S. on suspicion, and was there fully identified by Mr. Grieves of Fredericton, as the party who put up at his house on the Sunday of the robbery. It was also proved that he hired the horse and wagon in St. Stephens, stating that he wanted to go some 20 or 30 miles; that he had with him at the time a travelling bag, which, when he laid down, many remarked made a sound as if some iron tools were in it. He was seen on the road between St Stephens and Fredericton, and by many in Fredericton. He put his horse up at Ormsby's Livery Stables, and took them away on Sunday night when he left the city. The other men, Savage and Davenport, had been in Fredericton for some days about the end of May, and one of them frequently went into the Bank for change and on one occasion staid there a long time. They were both in Fredericton again on the Sunday of the robbery, and disappeared suddenly.

On the Sunday night or Monday morning, Mr. Harding, the Speaker, going to Fredericton, met three men near the Oromocto, driving in such a wagon as the one hired at St. Stephens, and it was proved they crossed the Oromocto Ferry, and were very careful of the wagon, which they took off the horse and drew on board the scow themselves. It is thought that on leaving the Oromocto they mistook the road and lost much time, and that it was in consequence of this they did not reach Saint John in time to take the boat to Boston. The telegraph line between St. John and Fredericton was cut, probably by the burglars, some twenty-five miles from Fredericton .-- Freeman.

A terrific storm of thunder and lightning visited Woodstock and its locality on Tuesday night last, which proved destructive to a large amount of property; although we have only had the particulars of a few cases, as follows: Mr. William H.
