The conquest of India by British arms has been attended with the happiest results in reference to the progress of civilization and religion in that great country. Whatever may be said of the errors inflicted by the conquerors, it must be acknowledged that the couquered have been immense gainers:

A modern writer, who appears to be both candid and weil informed, and was himself for many years a resident in India, gives a summary of the condition of that vast coun- also announced his intention of increasing the try be ore it fell into English hands, the facts of which he has substantiated by unquestionable authorities. His summary is substanally this :- The property of no man was with them, permitting them to plunder on condition of sharing the spoils. No man dare live in a lonely house. No village dare leave itself unfortified. Families were at all times liable to have their female members carried off for the harems of princes or their officers. Bribery of the judiciary was habitual. There was no confidence between the princes and their subjects, or between man and man. Every court had its treasons, plots, and murders, and each territory was in urn ravaged by the armies of its neighbor. Horrible cruilties, practised by the conquerors upon the conquered, were universal.

In fine Marauding bands had swollen into marauding nations. All men in power, feel ing the uncertainty of their tenure, scraped together immense wealth, and left the people scarcely anything, and no security for even that. Widows were burned; in many provinces infants were murdered; old, sick persons were hurried to death. In the hill tribes human sacrifices were offered, with ferocious rites; and in all countries, volun-tury immolations were numerous. No man could change his religion without civil or personal punishment, unless it was in a Mahommedan State to become a Mahomusedan. Men were mutilated in timbs, noses, eyes, and other members, by command of magistrates."

But how changed the whole scene!-" Every man's life is now secure from arbitrary authority. The Courts have been purged of their corruption, and so arranged that the poorest individual can sue the East India Company, with the certainty of having justice done him The acquisition of weath involves no danger. Villages are no longer fortified. Marauding chiefs and internal wars are unknown. Thugism is des royed; and freedom of person, of conscience, of association, of the press, and of labour have been everywhere established, while the conquered princes themselves have been liberally pensioned simultaneously with their subgation.'c

England is undeniably accomplishing for India stupendous works of internal improvement. The Ganges canal has already cost £722,556, and will be completed at an additional cost of some £900,000. The whole length, trunk and branches included, will be one hundred and eighty miles. Another canal, four hundred and fifty miles long, is in progress in the Punjaub. Three great trunk roads are far advanced, viz: from Calcutta to Peshawur, 1422 miles; from Calcutta to Bombay, 1002 miles; from Bombay to Agra, seven hundred and thirty-four miles. One railroad is built; others are projected. A line of telegraph, now extending eighty-two miles, will soon be increased to 3,150

Siege of Delhi-The Mutiny Spreading-Arrest of the King of Oude. The steamer America arrived at Trieste on on Tuesday, having left Alexandria on the 23rd of July The India mails were to leave Alexandria that morning with intelligence from Calcutta to the 21st of June; from Madras to the 18th; from Cevlon to the 1st of July; from Bombay to the 1st of July; and from Hong Kong to the 10th of June.

The mutury had continued to spread among the troops of the Bengal army. The Ex King of Oude has been arrested, and, with his minister, imprisoned in Fort William. Government has obtained proof of his complicity in the conspiracies. At Delhi, up to the 17th of June, General

Barnard had repulsed several sorties, with heavy loss to the insurgents. He was waiting for reinforcements. From Madras it is positively stated that

Delhi has been captured; but this intelligence is not confirmed from Bombay, and seems to be premature. An act has been passed by the Bengal Legislature, placing the Indian press under a licence system. The native troops at Calcutta and the Brigade at Barrackpore had been quietly disarmed. An uneasy feeling prevails at Madras, but the army of that presidency, and that of Bombay, are both without the slightest sign of disaffection.

At Calcuita, business, both in exports and imports, was almost at a standstill. The money market was rather tighter. Government securities had Jeclined.

At Madras the import market had continued brisk; the money market was becoming less easy. Government securities had suffer-

The following is the despatch which has reached our Foreign Office from the British Vice Consul at Trieste:

The Indian mail brings no authentic accounts of the capture of Delhi. It was not taken on the 10th ult., when General Barnard having repulsed two sorties, was waiting reinforcements, which must have since joined. A letter from Bunny & Co., dated Madras, the 27th of June, states positive y that official intelligence had reached Madras the previous day of the fall of Delhi; but this is not confirmed from Bombay on July the 1st. The mutiny had spread considerably in the Bengal army, though it is not even now so general as might have been expected. At Benares in attempting to disarm the 37th Native infantry, the greater part of the Sikhs and the 13th Icregular Cavatry joined the mutineers. On June 14, the ex king of Oude, implicated in the conspiracy by intercepted papers, was lodged in the Port William, and his followers disarmed. English troops are a riving fast An Act has been passed by the Legislative Council for placing the Indian press under license to be withdrawn at pleasure. In the Madras and Bombay p esidencies all remains quiet; the only disturbances being a mutiny of the 1st Nyanisa (qy. Nizams) Cavalry at Turungabad (qy. Furunabad), proinpily put down by a Bombay column.

The Neapolitans, on seeing the French setting up posts for their hydrographic works, fancied they were going to invade the country, and cried, " We will have no revolution!" The question of the principalities still continued the leading subject of interest, and the matter appeared to be getting more complicated than ever. On Reschid Pacha being informed that the representatives of France, Russia, Sardinia and Prussia, refused positively to hold a conference with the ambassadors of England and Austria, he immediately called a meeting of the council of ministers; but when the packet left nothing nad transpired as to the result of their deliberations. Some idea of the importance of the discussion may be formed when it is stated that the council did not break up until three o'clock in the morning. received from Madagascar. A revolt had burst out in the province of Immerino, and upwards of 4000 insurgents had made their appearance at Tamatave before the Queen, claiming protection against the acts of brutality of her delegates in the provinces. It appears that Prince Rakoute, learning this decision of the Queen, formally protested against so sanguinary an order, and affirmed that the execution should not take place. He add d, that already too much blood had been shed by his mother's Government, and that it was his firm intention for the future to see that a more humane and more suitable system of administration should be acted on with respect to the Hova people. This declaration, made publicly, in the presence of the Queen, of her ministers, and of the whole court, had produced an immense sensation, and grave events were expected, in case the Government ventured to proceed to the execution of the prisoners. M. Lambert (the F ench agent) had quitted Tamatave on the 17th May, to proceed to Immerino, followed by the precious objects which he was charged to convey to the Queen and to Prince Rukoute. This latter had sent five of his aidesde-camp to meet him, and the Queen had placed at his orders a numerous escort. It was supposed that he might reach Tamatave in about a dozen days, in time to be present at the great fetes of the Bath.
