CHILDREN. Come to me, O ye children ! For I hear you at your play And the questions that perplexed me Have vanished quite away.

Te open the eastern windows, That look towards the sun, Where thoughts are singing swallows And the brooks of morning run.

In your hearts are the birds and the sunshine, In your thoughts the brooklet's flow, But in mine is the wind of autumn, And the first fall of the snow.

Ah ! what would the world be to us If the children were no more? We should dread the desert behind us Worse than the desert before.

erivanti to araomi) da What the leaves are to the forest. With light and air for food, Ere their sweet and tender juices Have been hardened into wood-

That to the world are children ; Through them it feels th- glow Of a brighter and sunnier climate Than reaches the trunks below.

Come to me. O ve children ! And whisper in my ear What the birds and the winds are singing In your sunny atmosphere.

For what are all our contrivings, And the wisdom of our books, When compared with your caresses, And the gladness of your looks ?

Ye are better than all the ballads That were ever sung or said ; For ye are living poems, And all the rest are dead. -W. H. Longfellow.

(From the Congregationalist.) ANNIE'S VISIT TO HER GRANDMAMMA

A LITTLE STORY FOR LITTLE PEOPLE. "Do you fink it will rain to-morrow, mamma ?" How many times did the red lips open sorrowfully to ask that question, and how at last, did the sweet voice almost tremble into tears. But the rain heeded neither lip nor voice, and came madly down, beating the window pane against which Anne was flattening her little nose, drenching the ducks in the pond, who liked nothing so much as to be drenched, and pelting away at the old straw hat of a barefcot boy, who stood in the road squeezing the mud up between his toes, and minding the rain not a bit more than the ducks.

And so it rained, and rained, and Anne lay down with a heavy heart on her white bed, and just did not cry. But what do you think was the first thing she saw when she awoke in the morning? Was it a bread yellow ribbon that lay | Loots. cross her bed ? No, indeed, it was real, bright, golden sunshine, and Anne jumped up and looked out of the window, and the dear oid sun winked and blinked at her, and said, "Hurry up, little girl, and put on your pink muslin and your new gaiter b ots, and go to see your g andmamma who is waiting to see you."

happier than ever. Her little feet dinted the soft grass all about the yard, and then they went through the gate, and down the hill, and into the woods. Here were plenty of flowers, and Anne wanted to cut them herself, but she soon found that her cubby hand ; could pull up the vio- Cherry Bitters, lets by the roots far easier than they could han- Neuropathie Drops, dle the scissors, so she gave them back to Miss Mary, and contented herself with holding the flowers that Miss Mary gave her. But though her hands were still, her torgue was rot. "O, ats a noble one, M ss Mary." "O, Miss Mary, don't at smells eledant ?" " O, I shall gave that to mamina, and two, free, to grandmamma." Not till both hands were full was she willing to trot home. Then she went into the house very eager to give away a part of her flowers, and to put the others into a vase. " Dear Anne," said her grandmamma, "how warm you are, aren't you ?" "Feel of me, and see," said Anne, putting up her chin to have her hat untied. "You have been out too long, I am afraid.',

"No, course. Tan I have this fan ?" and Anne sat down on her cricket, while Miss Mary arranged the flowers, and whisked her fan about, though I don't think she was much co ler.

"Tan I have this fan a long wh le ?', "You may have it till you go home," said Miss Mary, and the whisking, and opening and shutting of the fan went on again quietly for a few minutes.

"There! there goes my thread again," said her mamma, as the spool went rolling across the floor and under the sofa. "I wish I had a little bag to put it in."

" I'll make vou one, mamma," said Anne, runuing to pick up the spool.

"O, it is no matter about it now," said mam-

" I make you one in a minute." persisted Anne. Miss Mary gave her a bit of calico, and a needle and thread, and she sewed and sewed, and made the strangest looking beg you ever saw. There ing, and there wasn't any room to put anything cess. in, if there had been one and the stitches went all over it, and were of all sizes, but it was a very good beg for all that. Before Anne went home I am sorry to say she became a little cross, and yet 1 don't know that she was very much to blame, for I suppose she she knelt that night she said :--

"Now I lay me down to sleep,

I pray the Lord my soul 'o keep"- and then the long lashes drooped the he wy eyes, it is designed. ans the little head rested on her mamma's knee. So her mamma finished the prayer in her heart, and laid Anne in bed sound asleep.

COMPOUND SAESAPARILLA. Messrs B. O. & G. C. Wilson.

The following interesting case came under my own observation. A lady, between sixty and seventy years of age, efflicted with general debiity, uneasiness, and pain in the stomach, loss of appetite and great emaciation, applied to me for Her attending physician prohibited cathartics, because she was to weak to endure the operation. She had Ettle hone of recovery, and her righbors said "her work was done." I ordered a teaspoonful of your Compound Sarsaprilla three times a day. On the third day she was en-tirely relieved, and has continued so six months, during which time her appetite became good, her strength increased, and her bowels became reguler. She is now managing her domestic affairs, and nursing a sick husband. I have prescribed it in many other cases, and it has never disapno nted me.

I recommended the Neuropathic Drops in case of nervous prostration, with nausea, flatulence, and internal pains. The patient derived more benefit from is than from all other remedies, recommends it heartily to her neighbors, and is never without it. Anne rushed to her mother's room. Her mother was not there, but Letty lay on the bed playing with her fat toes. Anne climbed up beside her, and poked her finger under the lumpy ch n, and cried, "Letty, sun shines, and we are going to grandmamina's." Letty did not understand very much about, but she felt the sunlight dancing in Anne's eyes, and her heart was brim full of baby joy ; so she began to crow as loud as she ceu'd, and kicked her soft feet round in all kinds of twisty ways. Then mamma came, and Anne was put into the pink muslin and gaiters and lumpy Letty was rolled up into the funniest little bundle of cambric. and ribbons, and white merino, and they all went away to see grandmamma.

If you had seen Anne ten minutes after she had kissed her grandmamma, you would not have supposed it could be the same girl who, hefore she left home could not stand still long enough to have her dress fastened. There she sat in a little chair, straight and prim, with both hands tolded on the pink muslin, and perfectly satisfied with herself. By and by, a lady who was there, saw how still she was, and said, "what is your name, my dear ?"

"Anne Daly March," said she at once. "And how old are you ?"

"I am-I am-just as old as-the bars of the clothes-horse." Then they all laughed. You must know that Anne had been greatly pleased a few days before because her curly head just touched the second har, and she had forgotten whether she was as tall or as old as that.

"And what do you all day, at home ?" asked the lady.

"O, I take care of the baby," ans "ered Anne "My,I should think you were a baby, yourself." This remark did not please Anne very greatl . and she did not deign to answer.

"No, indeed," said her mamma, "Anne is not a baby. Anne goes to school this summer with

- Saran Miles."
- "And do you study at school ?"
- "No, ma'am," said Anne.
- "What do you do there ?"
- "O, I say about the bug."
- "What do you say abuot the bug ?"

" B-u-g." Then they laughed again, thoulg Anne could not tell why.

"Do you like to go to school ?" continued the lady.

- "Yes, ma'am."
- "What do you like to go for ?"
- Anne thought a moment, and then said, "Because I have a good time at cre-ses."

By and by Anne became tired of setting still,

They consume a barrel of solid Pills, about 50. 000 doses, and 20 barrels of Cherry Pectoral 120,000 doses per diem. To what an inco: ceiv able amount of human suffering does this point! 170,000 doses a day ! !/ Fif.y millions of doses per year! !! What acres and thousands of acres of sick beds does this spread before the imagination! And what sympathies ard woe! True, not all of this is taken by the very sick, but alas, not all of this is taken by the very sick, but alas, much of it is. This Cherry Drop and this Su-gared Pill are to be the companion of vain and anguish and sinking sorrow—the inheritance our mother Eve bequeathed to the whole family of man. Here the infant darling has been touchpowerful in his exhibition of the divine Word. The volume is ready for the trade, and their orders solicited.
