THE CHILD'S PRAYER.

God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty.

I saw upon a dying bed A prayerless man and old : His life was ebbing fast away, The flying minutes would not stay; And hope shed but a chilly ray, And his heart was icy and cold.

A fair child knelt beside his bed, And low she bent her little head, And a sweet prayer of faith she said; And raised her eve of trust above To look for mercy and for love.

Then Heaven's gate was opened wide, And an angel fluttered through. And on a swift and noiseless wing Down to the earth he flew.

He touch'd the heart unused to feel The eye that saw no light, And plumed again his joyful wing And took his unward flight.

He reached the golden gates of light, Self-moved they let him in: And then he told the spirits there A soul was saved from sin :

Unclasped the golden Book of Life, And on a snowy nage He wrote how Heaven's light had shone Unon the night of age.

The feebly whisper'd thought of faith-The sorrowing for sin-He wrote it there in lines of light.

And deep engraved it in. That night the sinner breathed the air

The Summer air of Heaven, Close shelter'd from those storme winds. That blest the unforgiven.

LYMAN BEECHER'S COURTSHIP.

An eminent divine, who is as well known as he is universally respected, many years since was led to the conclusion that "it is not well for a man to be alone." After considerable nondering he resolved to offer himself in marriage to a certa'n member of his flock. No sooner was the resolution formed than it was put in practice. and getting out his cane, he speedily reached the dwelling of his mistress. I chanced to be on Monday morning, a day which many New England readers need not be told is better known in the house as washing day. Unconscious of the honor that was intended her, the lady was standing behind the tub in the back kitchen, with her arms immersed in the suds, busily engaged in an fully rehearsed. "Tell your mistress!" said Parson B.' "that it is very important that I "Tell him to call in the afternoon," said the lady, and I will see him." But it was unavailing. "I must see her now," said the minister.-

So saying, he followed the servant into the kitchen, to the great surprise of her mistress. "Miss-, I have come to the conclusion to marry will you have me?" was the minister's opening " Have you?" replied the astonished ladv.

This is a singular time to offer yourself. Such an important step should be made a matter of prayer and deliberation."

"Let us pray!" was Mr. B.'s only response, as he knelt down beside the tub and praved that a union might be formed which would enhance the ed, has sprung's family remarkable for talent including Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, of Brooklvn. N. Y' and Mrs. H. B. Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

TREES AROUND BARNYARDS.

Much attention has been paid in your valuable paner lately to the management and cultivation of fruit trees. The subject is one of importance and one worthy of our consideration, as well as of more attention among farmers than it generally receives. Now, Messrs. Editors, I am willing to do what I can to call more attention to this subject, and would therefore suggest a plan in which a few dollars might be profitably invested by every farmer who has a barnvard; it is this, to set out as many apple or other fruit trees around the barn and yard as the room will permit.

Trees so planted will throw out their roots under the barn and vard, where they will find an abundance of nourishment, which has soaked downward from the surface of the yard, and which did they not save, could not be made available in any other way. In consequence of their proximity to the yard and barn, they will not reed any manuring or further attention, save to protect them from cattle, till they get out of their reach. which they will soon do and come into bearing.

The fruit from trees so planted is large and well developed, and they almost always hang full. One of my neighbors who has a row of apple tress on one side of his yard, has two trees of the same kind, one near his yard and the other has ever appeared in this market that can comsome distance off; the one near it produces ap- pare with this new invention for chasing out the ples of twice the size, and more than four times distempers that fasten and grow upon us.
