cer's enthusiastic exclamation was moreemphatic than becomes ears polite. The The guard were for turning out to greet him with a cheer, and could only be repressed on being told that the King would take the honor to himself. They passed up that magnificent deserted street to the Palace gate, where Captain Hodson met the civil officer (Mr. Sanders,) and formally delivered over his royal prisoners to him. His remark was amusing, "By Jove! Hodson, they ought to make you Commander in Chief for this."

General Wilson, when he saw Hodson, exclaimed-" Well, I'm glad you have got him, but I never expected to see either him or you again !" while the other officers in the room were loud in their congratulations and applause. The captain was requested to select for himself from the royal arms what he choose, and chose two magnificent swords, one of which he intends to present to the Queen.

FRANCE.

THE EXECUTION OF ORSINI AND PIERRI.

The following extract from the London Freeman gives a full account of the execution of Orsini and Pierri, the Italian exiles.

The appeal of Orsini, Pierri, and De Rudio having, as was expected, been rejected by the Court of Cassation, their execution took place on the Place de la Requette on Saturday morning at seven o'c'ock. The sentence of death passed upon Carlo de Rudio has been commuted into that of hard labour for life. It is stated that he is to be sent to London to give evidence against Bernard.

Since their condemnation (says the Times' correspondent) it was judged proper to employ the strait-waistcoat with the three convicts. The reprieve of De Rudio rendered. that restraint no longer necessary, and the governor did not delay a moment in giving orders to free him from it. When the turnkeys, who were charged with the duty, entered De Rudio's cell they tound him buried in sleep. They shook him once or twice before he awoke; when he opened his eyes and sat up on his pallet he stared fearfully at them. He thought they came to announce that his last moment had arrived. "Don't be afraid," they said, "we are not going to injure you; far from it; we bring you good news; you are to have a commutation of punishment, and we are going to take off your camisole de force (strait-waistcoat)."-You need hardly be told what the feelings of the poor wretch were. It is said that he hummed an air during the operation. . . . For the last two nights the Place de la Roquette and the streets contiguous were covered with a multitude, who braved the intense cold and wet to witness the execution; the crowds that held vigil the whole of Friday night were almost beyond calculation. On Saturday morning the weather was bitterly cold, and the ground wet, from the snow which had failen. The sky was covered with clouds of a slate colcur, and under that dismal dark canopy grey mists, transparent I crape, were drining about. streets in the more distant part of the city were deserted; but, as you neared the quarter contiguous to the prison, detached squads of Sergens de Ville migh: be seen moving towards the same direction, the occasional flash of bayonets in the gaslight was discernible, add nearer still the vague mass, without form or outline, and heaving to and fro, showed that the awful moment was approaching. Many of the spectators had brought grave and serious, and spoke in a low tone of voice; others jested and laughed, and many observed that the prisoners well deserved their fate. About fifteen paces from the gate of the prison the scaffold was erected. und on it rose the guillotine. All presented a most hideous spectacle. At five o'clock the sound of bugies and drums were heard. In a few minutes several squadrons of cavalry were heard advancing, the dragoons' helme's gloeming in the lamplight. They wheeled round, and, separating into several detachments, swept the Place and the streets close to it, and quietly but firmly compelled the multitude to fall back. In less than half an hour numerous detachments of infantry, preceded by squads of Sergens de Ville to clear the way, took possession of all the points of the Faubourg St. Autoine, issuing on the Roquette. The armed force was calculated at over 5,000 men. Precisely at six o'clock Orsini and Pierri were awoke from their sleep by the governor of the prison. The Abbe Hugon and the chaplain of the Coaciergerie were present .--I do not profess to give particulars of what passed within the walls of the cell, but I may observe that the wretched men appeared calm when the news, which could not have taken them by surprise, was announced to them. I am assured that they heard Mass and received the Communion with respect, if not devotion. Soon after they were taken to the room for the change of dross. It is not large. On the present occasion it contained, besides the chaplains and the governor of the prison, about thirty persons. When the con-victs entered the chambre de la toilette, they were placed at different extremines of it, with their backs turned to each other.— There were two assistant-executioners-one, from Rouen, the other from Caen-besides him of Paris. These lost no time in p eparing the convicts for the scaffold. During the dreadful operation Orsini remained calm; and, though he was not so loud or contradictory as during his trial, Pierri was somewhat excited. The strait-waistcoat interfered with his gesticu'ations, but he hardly ceased talk. ing for a moment. When the excutioner was pinioning him he asked that the fastenings should not be drawn too tight, as he had no intention of escaping. The cold touch of the steel on his neck when the sissors cut off his hair, so as not to interfere with the guillotine, for an instant appeared to thrill through him; but he recovered himself when he found that his beard was left intouched. He thanked the executioner for letting him die with his face uncovered as became a man When the hood, 'a , hich the weil which covers the hands of a valet dressing for a party, with the words, "Be calm, be calm, my friend." Pierri's tongue ran on, however. The assistant proceeded to str p him of his shoes, for, in pursuance of the sentence they were to County. proceed to the scaffold barefooted. The man appeared to hesivate, but Pierri encou raged him to proceed, and assisted him as much as he could, still talking. The operation being over, and the toilette complete, he turned towards the turnkey and asked to be allowed to embrace him. This request was complied with. The moment of moving now came, and the Abbe Hugon cried out, · Courage !" " Oh ! I am not afraid-I am not afraid,' he said, " we are going to Calvary," and in a sort of feverish excitement he repeated to himself, " Calvary, Calvary." Orsini was, on the other hand, as calm and tranquil as his fellow convict was excited .---He spoke little; but when the governor of the prison and some of the officers approach. ed him he bade them in a low tone of voice farewell. The turnkey of his cell announced with their Saviour. to him in a tone of regret that h's last moment was come. Orsini thanked him for his sympathy. His hair was also cut away from his neck, but he underwent the operation without and eight days. flinching. At the moment when the hood was put on his head, his face, which up to that moment was calm and impassible, became flushed for a moment, and his eye lighted up. The prison clock struck seven; before the last sound diel away, the door leading to the scaffold opened as of itself .-The Abbe Hugon entreated Pierri to profit thoughts and assume a calmer attitude. He promised to be calm, but said he would chant a patriotic hymn! and it is suid that he actually began to sing the well known "Mourir pour la Patrie." Leaning on the Abbe Hugon he mounted fifteen steps of the scaffold, still repeating the verses of the song. Conciergerie, and his calmness never abandoned him for a moment. When he appeared on the platform it could be seen, from the movement of his body and of his head, though covered with the veil, that he was looking out for the crowd, and probably intended ad. dressing them. But they were too far off .--The greffier then directed the usher to read the sentence of the court condemning the prisoners to the death of parricides. The usher, who was an old man, over sixty, was evidently much moved at having to perform this duty, and he trembled as much from emotion as from cold as he read the document, which no one listened to. After this formality was terminated, Orsini and Pierri embraced their spiritual attendants, and pressed their lips on the crucifix offered to them. They then gave themselves up to the headsman. Pierri was attached to the plank in an instant. He was executed first. The moment his veil was raised, and before his head was laid on the block, it is affirmed that he cried "Vive l' Italie - Vive la Republique !" Orsini was then taken, in hand. His veil was raised, and his countenance still betraved no emotion. Before he was fastened to the plank he turned in the direction of the disant crowd, and, it is said, cried "Vive la France !" It was but five minutes past soven when the second head fell into the basker .--A cold shudder ran among those whose attention was fixed upon what was passing on deep silence. It passed off, however, very soon. When all was over men weat to their work, and parties who had gone together to was becoming clearer every moment. The troops began to move as if about to leave the ground. The guillotine was lowered and taken off; the crowds gradually thinned; some few groups still lingered about the spot ; but the cold was bitter, and the snow began to fall, and in a few hours the place was o'click, A. M. deserted.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Martha Constantine, who died at New Rnmley, Ohio, on the eleventh day of March last, aged 53 years and six months.

She made a profession of religion 38 years ago, and was bapt zed by Father Crandall at the time of a reformation at Salisbury in 1822, and beby the few moments still left to collect his came a member of the Baptist Church at that plane. She was united in marriage to Henry Colpitts, of Pollitt River 'n Oct. (1830 ; he died in July 1832, (in less than two years,) from injurious received from the falling of the limb of a tree; on the 25th of Dec. 1834 she was again married, to Mr. Charles Constantine of Salisbury, and in the month of May 1841 she was again bescaffold, still repeating the verses of the song. reft of a kind husband by the cold messenger of Orsini was supported by the chaplain of the death, and left with a family of four children, (one by the first husband, and three by the second

On the 19th day of October 1846 she removed with her family in company with her brother Mr. Titus Beck, to New Rumley, Harrison County, Ohio.

About the first of February last she took a severe cold, from which she had nearly recovered when she took a fresh cold, Typhoid Fever accompanied with Diarrhœa set in, which relieved her spirit from the tenement of clay; she talked of the happy charge she was about to make, and even sung while in the cold embraces of death. The last time she sung she filled the time to the length of two verses, while she was so far gone that but few of the words of the hymn could be understood by those in attendance. She died in the triumphs of that faith which had been her stay and support tbrough life.

A remarkable co-incidence in connexion with her death, was manifested to her sister Mrs. Colpitts, who resides in Elgin, Albert County, N. B. by a dream. She dreamed that she was in company with her sister Martha, they were at the old place where the latter formerly resided near Salisbury Corner, that they entered the house and saw a female laying in what appeared to be a box covered with a white cloth, that the person looked pale and death like, and spoke in answer to some publi uiry respecting s ed to be in search of, that they left the house when she saw a white horse attached to a carriage which her sister seemed to have under her control, as she stepped in the carriage and took the reins, but seemed not to be able to hold the horse long enough for herself to get in, but that the animal seemed to bound off leaving her standing among the rolling waves and quicksands the scaffold, and for an instant there was with which the ground seemed covered, and what is most striking is that after hearing of Martha's death, she has traced back the time she had the dream and found that it was as near as could be ascertained, on the same hour of the the spot from distant quarters, of the town same night that her sister's spirit took its flight hastened nome to breakfast. The morning from the tenement of clay .- COMMUNICATED. Salisbury April 6th, 1858.

Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry The Editor of the International Journal says:-"Of all the specifics offered for the cure of Lung Complaints, we have the greatest faith in Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Free from those narcotic ingredients which enter so largely into the composition of some other patent medecines, it acts without injury to the Nervous System. We speak of this valuable medicine from personal knowledge of its effects. Scarcely two years have elapsed since a member of our family was raised from the very brink of the grave through its use; and in several subsequent cases where it has been administered in our household, it has never o ce failed of the desired effect. We cheerfully comment it to our friends in the British Provinces and among the 'rest of mank ind,' as a certain remedy for Inci pient Diseases of the Lungs." None genuine unless signed I. OLD! GOLD! GOLD! Health! Health T Health !-- Which will you Choose .-- The above is a serious question to answer. Gold is the God of the world, It is to be feared there are many men who would risk their health and even their live to procure it. How very few there are who take care of that better gift of God-good health. To such l would say, learn wisdom from the things you have suffered. A well known author and journalist, before the execution of Orsini, addressed a letter to the Emperor of the French, which savs :-

"Sire,-A man named Orsini is condemued to die on the scaffold for an attempt on your imperial life. Acquainted with him for years, I could not at first credit, when I saw the account in the newspapers, that the assassin could be the Orsini of my esteem and triendship. His life belongs to your Imperial Majesty. Englishman, stranger, private individual, as I am, man to monarch, citizen to emperor, God inspires me to say that which is in my heart. May it please your Imperial Majesty to pardon that man? Why do I say this? It is greater to forgive him than to command armies. An act so sublime will light a page of history. It will endear your Majesty to millions. It will fence your Imperial person from the future fanaticism of bad pardoned thus? Pardon this man, sire, and there shall spring from it the admiration of mankind, hope for Italy, ay, and a better safeguard around your Imperial person than a nation of soldiers and an army of police agents. An injury like this forminen and the solution of the soluti agents. An injury like this forgiven will stamp Napoleon III. the greatest of his name. His imperial son shall say, 'The Emperor, my father, knew how to pardon.' Great heaven! what a sublime opportunity ! To send for the baffled assassin-to ask from hun a pledge, an cath, a simp'e pomise, not to plot against forgivenness-to give him liberty to depart from France, mutely attesting with his life your Majesty's conquest over a king-dom wider than the earth-the region of sublime mercy !"
