THE HEAVENLY HOME.

Dear heavenly home! How pants the soul to reach thy peaceful shore...

No sin is there! For in that holy city, there are seen None, save the just, ransomed souls...

No sorrow there! The bitter tear from anguish' heart to wring; To angelic choir unceasingly do sing...

No discord there! No unkind word, or harsh shall'er in; No unkind words fall on the spirit's ear...

No sickness there! No sleepless vigils by the couch of pain; No weary visits to our anxious care...

No death is there! The Reaper hath no work in that fair land; The flowers bloom brightly on you heavenly strand...

Family Circle.

A RIPT IN THE CLOUD.

Andrew Lee came home at evening from the shop where he had worked all day, tired and out of spirits...

"A smiling wife and a cheerful home—a what a paradise it would be!" said Andrew to himself...

Not a word was spoken by either. Mrs. Lee was getting supper, and she moved about with a weary step.

"Come," she said at last, with a side glance at her husband. There was invitation in the word only, none in the voice of Mrs. Lee.

Andrew arose and went to the table. He was tempted to speak an angry word, but controlled himself, and kept silence.

"This is purgatory!" said Lee to himself, as he commenced walking the floor of their little breakfast-room...

After removing all the dishes, and taking them into the kitchen, Mrs. Lee spread a green cover on the table...

"I should like to find some occasion for praising mine," how quickly his thoughts expressed that ill-natured sentiment.

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her."

Lee struggled with himself a while longer. His own ill-nature had to be conquered first; his moody, accusing spirit had to be subdued.

"My shirts are better made, and whiter than those of any other man in the shop," said Lee, encouraged to go on.

"Yes, Mary," he answered, softly; "and I've heard it said more than once, 'What a good wife Andrew Lee must have!'"

"Do you think so?" she asked quite soberly. "What a question!" ejaculated Andrew Lee, starting up, and going around to the side of the table where his wife was sitting.

"Do you?" It was all she said. "Yes, darling," was his warmly spoken answer, and he stooped down and kissed her.

"How strange that you should ask me such a question!" "If you would only tell me so now and then, Andrew, it would do me good."

And Mrs. Lee arose, and leaning her face against the manly breast of her husband, stood and wept.

What a strong light broke in upon the mind of Andrew Lee. He had never given to his faithful wife even the small reward of praise for all the loving interest she had manifested daily.

He wondered that her face grew clouded, nor that what he considered moodiness and ill nature took possession of her spirit.

"You are good and true, Mary. My own dear wife, I am proud of you—I love you—and my first desire is for your happiness."

"How precious to me are your words of love and praise, Andrew," said Mrs. Lee, smiling up through her tears into his face.

"How easy had been the work for Andrew Lee. He had swept his hand across the cloudy horizon of his home, and now the bright sunshine was streaming down, and flooding that home with joy and beauty."

"No God to go to!" How dreadful the condition; and yet there are so many among the chosen list of friends on whose heart the name of the God who made them and loves them with pitying tenderness is not engraven.

HOW TO BANISH DISCONTENT.

An excellent clergyman, possessing much knowledge of human nature, instructed his large family of daughters in the theory and practice of music.

"Which to choose." A young man asked Whitefield whether he should marry a young lady, a professor of religion with a bad temper, or another who had an excellent disposition but was not a Christian.

"The sin of murmuring." Ob, the precious time that is buried in the grave of murmuring! When the murmurer should be praying, he is murmuring against the Lord.
