And when the soul hath grasp'd Thee right,

A glory o'er the world I see, And Paradise returns to earth, And blooms again for us in Thee.

Theu strong and loving Son of Man, Redeemer from the bonds of sin, 'Tis thou the living spark dost fan That sets my heart on fire within. Thou openest heaven once more to me, The souls true home, Thy kingdom, Lord, And I can trust and hope again, And feel myself akin to God.

THE DIVINE PRESENCE.

What had I been if thou wert gone ?

What had I been if thou wert not?

Anguish and fear were then my lot, In this wide world I stood alone :

Whate'er I loved were safe no more,

If Thee my laden heart should miss?

Beneath thy warm and living light

But when Thou mak'st Thy presence felt.

The future were a dark abyss. To whom could I my sorrows pour,

How fast the dreary shadows melt

In Thee I find a nobler birth.

Brethren, go forth beside all ways, The wanderer greet with outstretch'd hands, And call, him back who darkly strays, And bid him join our gladsome band, That Heaven hath stooped to earth below, Proclaim the glad news everywhere, That all may learn our faith, and know They too may find an entrance there. Lyra Germanica.

WHAT ARE TEARS. Little pearls from out the valley Where the fount of feeling flows : Little dew-drops softly resting On the petals of the rose.

Little diamonds from life's ocean Sparkling in the sunshine bright, Helping guide our fairy vessels Through the gloomy, cheerless night

Little emblems of repentance In the hardened sinner's eye; Telling of a love long buried. Which though crushed, may never die.

Little rain-drops falling earthward When the cloud of sorrow lowers: Freeing it from half its burden As the clouds are freed by showers. ELLIE HILL.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

During late years the public have been misled by large During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretensing to give a quart of extract of S.rsaparilla for one dollar. Most of those have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little if any Sarsaparilla, but often no curative proportions whatever. Hense bitter and painful dissippointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name of itself is justly despised, and has become synchymous with imposite a and chest. Still we call this compour d Sarsaparilla, and intensite saying such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obligny while it rests upon it. And we think we have ground for heleiting it has virtues which are irresistables by the ordidary must of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete etadication from the system, the remedy should be indiciously taken according to the directions on the bottle.

cup of tea with my niece, Clara Whitford."

Having completed my household arrangements. I accordingly set out, after an early dinner, and the shopping done, made first call .-- Mrs. Ashburton's warm welcome, pleasant talk, and cheerful fireside, would have proved strong temptations to induce me to accept her invitation to remain for the evening, had I not felt anxious to see my niece, whose residence was much nearer to my own.

On arriving at Clara's door. I was a little surprised to see no light in the front part of the house. "I am afraid they are not at home," thought I, with a regretful mental glance backward at the pretty home picture I had just left. But I was mistaken. A servant came, in answer to my ring at the door-bell, and ushering me into the dining room, lighted the gas, and went to summon her mistress. I had ample time to look about me before Clara made her appearance, and could not help admiring the perfect order and good taste which prevailed in both the spartment and its furniture. I was the more pleased to note this, as my niece, when unmarried, did not promise to become very notable as a housewife.

I was beginning to tire of waiting-as, my brisk walk over, I felt chilly in the fireless room -when Clara entered, fastening a little article of dress, evidently just assumed. Her greet ng was most cordial; yet there was a shade of regret in her tone when, our first salutations over. she said :-- "Why my dear aunt, did you not let me know you were coming, and I should have been better prepared to receive you ?"

"Surely, Clara," I replied, " no preparation is needed before you can bestow a cup of tea on so near a relative as I am. Pray do not make my friendly call into a ceremonious visit ; or I shall be tempted to run away again, in place of waiting for tea, and begging Mr. Whitford's escort home."

" Pray, dear aunt, do not think of such a thing. I will light this fire in a moment, and the room will soon be warm and comfortable."

So saying, Clara was about to apply a light between the bars of the grate, when I stopped her.

"You must have a fire somewhere, my dear, I said ; " and where you were sitting when] arrived, will, 1 am sure, suit me the best. If 1 am to disturb any of your arrangements, I will leave you forthwith."

"Then, if so, aunt, you will have to excuse my taking you into the nursery."

"Anywhere to a warm fireside Clary; but is Mr. Whitford from home ?"

" No aunt, he is here," replied my niece, her color tising as she spoke.

I laughingly congratulated her on her husband's liking for the company of his Erst-born ; but, perceiving no evidence of pleasure on her countenance, I ssked if the baby was well.

" Oh yes, quite so, thank you aunt. To say the truth, it is my doing that we are in the nurserv to night, and Frederick is not too well pleased about it ; but it saves so much trouble, and Besides these, it was impossible not to feel the thorough comfort diffused around us.

"My neice," said I to Mrs. Ashburton " was afraid of causing you inconvenience by coming unawares, and taking two places at your tea table by storm."

A cheery laugh from Ashburton and a bright smile from his wife, tollowed my words. "Mrs. Whitford." said the gentleman, "I am the most fortunate fellow in the world, for nothing ever practice, consequently we are always able to welcome a friend, however unexpected the guest may be."

[From Rev. Henry Wood, formerly Editor of the Congregational Journal, Concord, N. H., more recently American Consul at Beyroot, Syria, and now Chapla in in the Navy.] CONCORD, N. H., March 2. Messrs. SETH W. FOWLE & CO. — Gentlemen : Two years ago, a sudden and violent attack upon my lungs confined me to my bed for several weeks, and when I recovered, I was so much oppressed by difficulty in breathing, that I was often unable to sleep or rest upon a bed by night. The suffering was extreme, and judging from the inefficacy of the remedies used, I supposed the disease incurable. Being persuaded to try a bottle of WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, without con-fidence in its efficacy, I found the difficulty almost en-tirely removed before one bottle was used up. Sympathy with my fellow-sufferers induces me to make this public statement, and recommend the article to others similarly afficited. CONCORD, N. H., March 2.

With respect, yours truly, HENRY WOOD.
