OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river they becken to me,-Loved ones who've crossed to the further side.

The gleam of their snowy robes I see,

But their voices are lost in the dashing tide.

There's one with ringlets of sunny gold, And eyes, the reflection of heaven's own blue He crossed in the twilight grey and cold, And the pale mist hid him from mortal view We saw not the angels who met him there, The gates of the city we could not see,

Over the river, over the river,
My brother stands waiting to welcome me!

Over the river, the boatman pale, Carried another, the household pet;
Her brown curls wave in the gentle gale,
Darling Minnie! I see her yet. She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands, And fearlessly entered the phantom bark, We felt it glide from the silver sands, And all our sunshine grew strangely dark; We know she is safe on the further side, Where all the ransomed and angels bc; Over the river, the mystic river, My childhood's idol is waiting for me,

For none return from those quiet shores, Who cross with the boatman cold and pale, We hear the dip of the golden oars.

And catch a gleam of the snowy sail; And lo! they have passed from our yearning heart,

They cross the stream and are gone for aye-We may not sunder the veil apart That hides from our vision the gates of day, We only know that their barks no more May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea; Yet somewhere I know on the unseen shore, They watch, and beckon and wait for me.

And I sit and think when the sunset's gold Is flushing river and hill and shore, I shall one day stand by the water cold And list for the sound of the boatman's oar I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail, I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand, I shall pass from sight with the boutman pale, To the better shore of the spirit land; I shall know the loved who have gone before, And joyfully sweet will the meeting be, When over the river, the peaceful river,

The Angel of Death shall carry me! Springfield Republican.

Family Circle.

THE SACRIFICE.

"There, Mary-now don't you think,"I deserve to be called a pretty good husband?" laughed the young man, as he dropped down in the lady's palm half-a-dozen gold pieces.

"Yes you are, Edward, the very best husband in the world," and she lifted up her sweet face, beaming with smiles, as a June day with sunshine. "Thank you, thank you, for the very flattering words. And now, dear, I want you to have the cloak by next Christmas. I'm auxious to see how you will look in it." "But Edward," gazing seriously at the shining pieces in her rosy palm, you know we are not rich people, and it really seems a piece of extravagance for me to give thirty dollars for a velvet cloak."

"No, it is not, either. You deserve the cloak Mary, and I have set my mind upon your having it. Then it'll last you so many years, that it will be more economical in the end than a less expensive article."

It was evident the lady was predisposed to conviction. She made no farther attempt to refute her husband's arguments, and her small fingers closed over the gold pieces, as she rose up, saying, "Well, dear, the supper has been waiting half an hour, and I know you must be

Edward and Mary Clark were the husband and wife of a year. He was a book-keeper in a large establishment, with a salary of fifteen hundred dollars. His fair young wife made a little earthly paradise of his cottage home in the suburbs of the city, for within its walls dwelt two lives that were set like music to poetry, keeping time to each other. And here dwelt, also, the peace which God giveth to those who love Him.

Mrs. Clark came into the sitting room suddenly, and the girl lifted her head, and then turned it away quickly, but not until the first glance told the lady that the foir face was swollen and stained with tears.

Janet Hill was a young seamstress whom Mrs. Clark had occasionally employed for the last six months. She was always attracted by her young, bright face, her modest yet-dignified manners, and now the lady saw at once that some great sorrow had smitten the gir!. Obeying the promptings of a warm, impulsive heart, she went to her and laid her hand on her arm, saying softly, "Wont you tell me what is troubling you, Janet?"

" Nothing that any body can help," answered the girl, trying to avert her face, while the tears swelled in her eyes from the effort which she made to speak.

"But perhaps I can. At any rate, you know, it does us good sometimes to confide our sorrows to a friend, and I need not assure you that I sincerely grieve because of your distress."

And so with kind words, and half-caressing movements of the little hand, laid on the seam stress's arm, Mrs. Clark drew from her lips her sad story.

She was an orphan, supporting herself by her daily labors, and she had one brother, just six teen, three years her junior. He had been for ome time a kind of under clerk in a large olesale establishment, where there was every prospect of his promotion; but he had seriously ured imself in the summer by lifting some heavy bales of goods, and, at last, a dangerous fever set in, which had finally left him in so exhausted a state that the doctor had no hope of

" And to think I shall never see him again. Mrs. Clark," cried the poor girl, with a fresh hurst of toars. "To think he must die away there among strangers, in the hospital, with no loving face to bend over him in his last hours, or brush away the damp curls from the forehead which mamina used to be so proud of. O-George -my darling, bright faced little brother George-" and here the poor girl broke down in a storm of sobs and tears.

"Poor child, poor cilhd," murmured Mrs.

heart of the seamstress.

The lady went up stairs and took the pieces hands in idleness ? out of her ivory porte-monaic. There was a brief out to select the velvet this very afternoon. But of their display than of the improvement of her then, there's that dying boy lying there with strange faces all about him, and longing, as the slow hours go by, for the sight of the sister who loves him, and would not this thought haunt me every time I put on my new cloak? After all, my old broadcloth is not so bad, if it's only turned. And I'm sure I can bring Edward over to my way of thinking. No, you must go without the cloak this time, and have the pleasure of knowing you've smoothed the path going down to the dark valley of the shadow of death, Mary Clark." And she closed the porte-monie resolutely, and went down stairs.

" Janet, put up your work this moment-there is no time to be lost. Here is the money. Take it and go to your brother."

The girl lifted her eyes a moment, almost in bewilderment, to the lady, and then, as she comprehended the truth, a cry of such joy broke from her lips, that its memory never faded from the heart through all the after years of Mrs. Clark's

"George! George!" The words leaped from her lips, as the sister sprang forward to the low the tapering slenderness of the fingers or the bed where the youth lay, his white, sharpened face, gleaming death-like from amidst his thick vellow curls.

He opened his large eyes, suddenly-a flush passed over his pallid face. He stretched out his thin arms : " O Janet! Janet! I have prayed God for the sight of you once more, before I die."

" His pulse is stronger than it's been for two weeks, and his face has a better hue," said the doctor, a few hours later, as he made his morning visit through the wards of the hospital.

" His sister came yesterday, and watched with him," answered an attendant, glancing at the young girl, who hung breathless over the sleeping invalid. " Ah, that explains it. I am not certain but quick tears leaped into her eyes. "You know she's been with him ever since that time, and she wrote me last spring saying, that he'd obtained an excellent situation as head clerk in the firm. What an exquisite gift, and how I shall value it. Not simply for itself, either."

"Well, Mary, you were in the right then, though I'm sorry to say, I was half vexed with you for giving up your velvet cloak, and you've No Musical Instrument is more quickly learnnot had one yet."
