LIFE'S CHANGES.

By Mrs. M. L. BAILEY.
A little child, on a sunny day,
Sat on a flow'ry bank at play—
The gentle breath of the summer air,
Waved thro' the curls of her golden hair,
And ever her voice rang merrily out
In a careless laugh or a joyous shout.
Beautiful was she, as early morn,
When the dew is fresh on the blossoming thorn,
And methought as I looked on her fair young face,
Beaming with beauty and truth and grace,
How cold and heartless the world must be
That could soully such spotless purity!

Years rolled on—in her maiden pride
She stood, a gentle and trusting bride—
How beautiful still! tho' a softening shade
O'er the dazzling hue of that beauty played,
While the tender glance of her soft blue eye
Told of a love that could not die;
And I prayed as I gazed on her placid brow,
Pure as a wreath of new fallen snow,
That sorrow, the sorrow that comes to all,
Lightly and gently on her might fall.

Again I saw her—Time had been there,
Tipping with silver her golden hair—
He had breathed on her cheek, and its rose hue
Was gone, but her heart was pure and true,
As when first I met her a budding flower—
O a gentle maid in her bridal hour.
As a mother and wife, she had borne her part,
With the faith and hope of a loving heart;
And now when nature, with years opprest,
Looks, and longs, for her quiet rest,
With holy trust in her Father's love,
Awaiting a summons from above;
She lingers still with us, as if to show
To the faint and weary ones below,
How oft to the faithful soul 'tis given
To taste on earth the joys of Heaven.

Family Circle.

THE HIDDEN GRIEF.

Soon after engaging in business, Mr. H— married the woman on whom his affections had long been fixed. His ardent attachment was fully reciprocated. The union was a happy one. The parties enjoyed as much domestic happiness as was compatible with estrangement from Grd; neither the husband nor the wife was a professor of religion.

The happiness of Mr. and Mrs. H— was often the subject of remark among those who knew them. They were prosperous in their affairs. Their mutual affection was very strong. Perfect confidence existed between them. Every joy and every sorrow was shared by each. The cause of the anxious countenance or of the sunny smile on the part of the one was immediately confided to the other.

After a while, the watchful wife noticed a change stealing over her husband. He became reserved, especially in the evening, when he had been wont to converse with her most freely. In regard to matters on which he was accustomed to speak freely there was no change; at least he gave prompt and full answers to her questions: it was only when he inquired related to the cause of his thoughtful and sad appearance that he gave evasive replies.

These replies gave her exquisite pain. She saw that there was a hidden grief, which she was not permitted to share. Was he depressed or pained by anything she had done? He assured her he was not. Had he troubles in his business? It had never been so prosperous. Had he been treated unkindly by any one? He was not aware that he had an enemy in the world. Whence then the cause of the concealed sigh and the anxious brow? Why did he, once so fond of her society, seek to be alone?

One day he left his place of business much earlier than usual, entered his dwelling without observation and went to an unoccupied room. His wife, accidentally entering it, found him on his knees weeping, with an open Bible before him.

To her quick intelligence the hidden grief was revealed. Kneeling by his side, with her eyes streaming with tears, she exclaimed: "Husband! why did you not tell me of this? The subject is one on which I have long desired to speak with you."

"Why did you not do so?" was his reply.
"Because of the reserve with which you have treated me of late."

"And now you know the cause."

"We have suffered much needlessly, and lost time for the great work which we desire to do." The barrier of reserve being thus broken down, they spoke freely upon that subject which had for weeks been fretting with unusual weight upon their minds. They did not leave the room until they had mingled their prayers, and strengthened each other in the resolution to seek first the kingdom of God.

In a few days, Mrs. H— was rejoicing in hope, and was of material service to her husband, whose early religious instruction had been less perfect than her own. Ere long they were united in love to Christ, as well as in love to each other.

No husband or wife should ever carry a hidden grief—and least of all, the grief for sins committed and a Saviour slighted. The endearing relation between husband and wife, parents and children, brothers and sisters, was not designed to be a hindrance but a help to salvation.—Sunday School Times.

MILTON AT TEN YEARS OF AGE.

The circumstances mentioned by Aubrey, that the scrivener and his son's portrait painted when he was but ten years old, is worth noting. The facts are these:

About the year 1618, Cornelius Jansen, a young Dutch painter, came over from his native city of Amsterdam, with the hope of finding employment in England. He took up his residence in Blackfriars, London; and, being really an able artist—"very clear and natural in his coloring," say the connoisseurs, "and equal to Van-dyke in all except freedom of hand and grace"—he soon had as much work as he could do, at painting portraits at five broad pieces a head. He painted usually on small panel with black draperies.

Among his works that survive are several portraits of James I. and his children, and not a few of noblemen and ladies of the Courts of James and Charles I. But one of his first works in England, if the connoisseurs are right in pronouncing it his, was a portrait of the scrivener's son of Broad Street, painted in 1618. The portrait still exists, containing a far more life-like image of little Johnny Milton, as he used to look in his neat lace frill, and with his black braided dress fitting close around his little chest and arms, than any of the ideal portraits of the poetic child.

The face is, indeed, that of as nice a boy as one would wish to see. The head, from the hair being cut close all around it (and here the reader must supplement what hardly appears in the engraving, and imagine the hair a light auburn, and the complexion a delicate pink or clear white and red), has a look of fine solidity, very different from those fantastic representations, all aerial and wind-blown, offered as the heads of embryo-poets. In fact, the portrait is that of a very grave and intelligent little Puritan boy with auburn hair. The prevailing expression in the face is a lovely seriousness; and in looking at it one can well fancy that those lines from "Paradise Regained," which the first engraver ventured to inscribe under the portrait, were really written by the poet with some reference to his own recollections of himself as a child:

"When I was yet a child, no childish play
To me was pleasing: all my mind was set
Serious to learn, and know, and thence to do,
What might be public good; myself I thought
Born to that end, born to promote all truth
And righteous things."

DIALOGUE ON NEWSPAPERS.

"How does it happen, neighbor B., that your children have made so much greater progress in their learning, and knowledge of the world, than mine? They all attend the same school, and, for aught I know, enjoy equal advantages."

"Do you take the newspapers, neighbor A?"
"No sir, I do not take them myself; but I now and then borrow one, just to read. Pray sir, what have newspapers to do with the education of children?"

"Why, sir, they have a vast deal to do with it, I assure you. I should as soon think of keeping them from school, as to withhold from them the newspapers; it is a little school of itself. Being new every week, it attracts their attention, and they are sure to peruse it. Thus, while they are storing their minds with useful knowledge, they are at the same time acquiring the art of reading, &c. I have often been surprised that men of understanding should overlook the importance of a newspaper in a family."

"In truth, neighbor B., I frequently think I should like to take them, but I cannot well afford the expense."

"Can't afford the expense! What, let me ask, is the value of five or six dollars a year in comparison with the pleasures and advantages to be derived from a well-conducted newspaper? As poor as I am, I would not for fifty dollars a year, deprive myself of the happiness I enjoy in reading and hearing my children read, and talk about what they read in the papers. And then the reflection that they are growing up intelligent and useful members of society. O, don't mention the expense!—pay it in advance every year, and you will think no more of it."—Printer's Letter.

LILLIE.

By Mrs. M. W. CURTIS.

"Too lovely for earth," sang the angel band,
As they gazed from the beautiful spirit-land.
"Too holy for earth, we will beckon her here;
O do not detain her when angels are near."

"Too lovely for earth," said the young mother's heart,
As she tearfully clasped her, "dear thou art,
Sweet little Lillie, our only one;
The Saviour is calling—his will be done."

The lovelight faded, and eyes grew dim,
For dear little Lillie had gone to Him.
She liveth now in a radiant home,
Where death and sighing can never come.

A NOBLE LITTLE BOY.

One day last week, as we learn from the Connecticut Journal, a party of young skaters went from that village to Springfield on the Connecticut, several of the boys drawing after them hand sleds on which were little girls. Charley Adams a son of a widowed lady, drew Emma Adams, daughter of Mr. Sylvanus Adams, agent of the Dwight Mills. On returning in the evening young Charley skated into an open place in the river, drawing his precious freight after him. Fortunately he could swim, and with great presence of mind he seized hold of the clog of Emma and kept her from sinking, although she was under water until others of the party came to the rescue. The boys formed themselves into a chain of arms and legs by lying down upon the ice, and Charley seized hold of the boots of the nearest one and was drawn out together with Emma. The little girl was much chilled and nearly insensible, but soon revived on being taken to the toll house near by. Charley and Emma were each eleven years of age, and when their companions came to the rescue, the lad with a nobleness deserving the highest praise called out to them to save Emma first! The little girl had the presence of mind to keep her lips closed while under water, having heard her mother say that persons must not open their mouths when placed in that condition. It was a thrilling experience in juvenile life, and withal a most remarkable escape.

A SUPERIOR AND GENUINE VEGETABLE COUGH CANDY. H. T. MACER'S Vegetable Cough Candy is a ready remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Irritation of the Throat, Asthma, and is particularly adapted to relieve the Whooping Cough, and all cases of Coughing. It is particularly recommended by the attention of Public speakers, singers and all persons who use the voice freely. Its efficacy for clearing the Voice is truly astonishing. There has been so much practiced under the pretence of having a GENUINE VEGETABLE COUGH CANDY, that the public are misled. The subscriber's Candy is the only one which should be made public. Even those which do possess some virtue are held at such exorbitant prices that they do not come within reach of the people. While they, above all, are the most liable to suffer from the consequence of neglect and exposure.

Do not the poor suffer daily? It is true they do, for the want of a medicine which they are unable to purchase. The proprietor of the Vegetable Cough Candy has devised this difficulty by inventing a Medicine compounded of twenty-nine different ingredients, extracted from the Vegetable Kingdom, and sold at a price which will place it within the reach of all. It is well known that many ingredients which need slight modification, but when combined with others are highly medicinal.

Macer's Vegetable Cough Candy contains the most essential ingredients of which other Cough Candy is composed, with several additional kinds; the combined power of which is sufficient to heal, in a few days, the most obstinate Cough, and to relieve the sufferer of a GENUINE VEGETABLE COUGH CANDY, which does not require the aid of a surgeon. If attended to in season.

The numerous ingredients composing this Candy have been recommended by many physicians of eminence, some of whom are among the most celebrated in the United States. The pleasantness of this medicine gives it an advantage over others, while it is unnecessary to use any powerful medicine, which would be injurious to the system.

Sold by Druggists generally throughout the City and County. General Agent, F. A. COSGROVE & CO., St. John, Dec. 18, 1857. 75 Prince Wm. St.
