SAILES FOR HOME.

BY T. S. ARTHUR. "Take that home with you, dear," said Mrs.

Lewis, her manner half smiling, half serious. "Take what home, Caddy ?" And Mr. Lewis turned towards his wife, curiously.

Now, Mrs. Lewis had spoken from the moment's impulse, and already partly regretted her

"Take what home?" repeated her husband. "I don't understand you."

"Mr. Lewis slightly averted his head, and walked on in silence. They had called in at the store of Mr. Edwards to purchase a few articles, and were now on their way home. There was no smile on the face of Mr. Lewis now, but a very grave expression instead-grave almost to sternness. The words of his wife had taken him altogether by surprise; and, though spoken lightly, had jarred upon his ears.

The truth was, Mr. Lewis, like a great many other men who have their own business cares and troubles, was in the habit of bringing home a sober, and, too often, a clouded face. It was in vain that his wife and children looked into that face for sunshine, or listened to his words for tones of cheerfulness.

"Take that home with you, dear." Mrs. Lewis was always repenting this suggestion, made on the moment's impulse. Her husband was sensitive to a fault. He could not bear even an implied censure from his wife. And so she had learned to be very guarded in this particular.

"Take that home with you, dear! Ah, me! I wish the words had not been said. There will be darker clouds now, and gracious knows, they were da k enough before! Why can't Mr. Lewis leave his cares and business behind him, and let us see the old, pleasant, smiling face again. I thought this morning that he had forgotten how to suile; but I see that he can smile, if he tries. Ah! Why don't he try at home?"

So Mrs. Lewis talked to herself, as she moved along by the side of her husband, who had not spoken a word since her reply to his query, "Take what home?" Block after block was passed, and street after street crossed, and still there was silence between them.

"Of course," said Mrs. Lewis, speaking in her own thoughts. "Of course he is offended. He won't bear a word from me. I might have known, beforehand, that talking out in this way would only make things worse. Oh, dear! I'm getting out of all heart!"

"What then, Caddy?" Mrs. Lewis almost started at the sound of her husband's voice, breaking, unexpectedly, upon her ear, in a softened tone.

"What then? he repeated, turning towards her, and looking down into her shyly upturned

"It would send warmth and radiance through the whole house," said Mrs. Lewis, her tones all a-tremble with feeling. "You think so?"

"I knew so! Orly try it, dear, for this one evening."

"It isn't so easy a thing to put on a smiling face, Caddy, when thought is oppressed with Imida't seem to require much effort just now," said Mrs. Lewis, glancing up at her husband with something of archess in her look. Again a shadow dropped down upon the face of Mrs. Lewis, which was again partly turned away; and again they walked on in slience.

"He is so sensitive!" Mrs. Lewis said to herself, the shadow on her husband's face darkening over her own. "I have to be as careful of my words as if talking to a speiled child." No, it did not require much effort on the part of Mr. Lewis to smile, as he passed a few words lightly, with Mr. Edwards. The remark of his wife had not really displeased him; it had only set him to thinking. After remaining gravely silent, because he was undergoing a brief selfexamination, Mr. Lewis said-

"You thought the smile given to Mr. Edwards came easily enough ?"

"It did not seem to require an effort," replied

"No, not much effort was required," said Mr. Lewis. His tones were slightly depressed. "But this must be taken into the account; my mind was in a certain state of excitement, or activity, that repressed sober feelings, and made smiling an easy thing. So we smile and are gay in company, at cost of little effort, because all are smiling and gay, and we feel the common sphere of excitement. How different it often is when we are alone, I need not say. You, Caddy, are guilty of the sober face at home as well as your husband." Mr. Lewis spoke with a tender reproof in his voice.

"But the sober face is caught from yours oftener than you imagine, my husband," replied Mrs. Lewis.

"Are you certain of that, Caddy?"

"Very certain. You make the sunlight and the shadow of your home. Smile upon as; give us cheerful words; enter into our feelings and interests, and there will be no brighter home in all the land. A shadow on your countenance is a veil for my heart; and the same is true as fespects our children. Our pulses strike too nearly in union not to be disturbed when yours has lost

Again Mr. Lewis walked on in silence, his face partly averted; and again his wife began to fear that she had spoken too freely. But he soon dispelled this impression, for he said-

"I am glad, Caddy, that you have spoken thus ploinly. I only wish that you had done so before. I see how it is. My smiles have been for the outside world—the world that neither loved not regarded me-and my clouded brow for the dear ones at homes, for whom thought and care are ever-living activities." Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were now at their own door, where they paused a moment, and then went in. Instantly, on passing his thresho'd, Mr. Lewis felt the pressure upon him of his usual state. The hue of his feelings began to charge. The cheerful, interested exterior put on for those he met in business intercourse, began repidly to change, and a sober hue to succeed. "Take that home with you, dear," whispered Mrs. Lewis, as they moved along the passag an instructive consciousness that her husband was in danger of relapsing into his usual state.

"Thank you for the words!" said he. "I will not forget them."

And he did not; but at once rallied himself. and to the glad surprise of Jenny, Will, and Mary, met them with a new face, covered with fatherly smiles, and with pleasant questions, in pleasant tones, of their day's employments. The feelings of children more in quick transitions.

They had not expected a greeting like this; but the response was instant. Little Jenny climbed into her father's arms, Will came and stood by his chair, answering in lively tones his questions, while Mary, older by a few years than the rest, leaned against her father's shoulder, and laid her white hand suffly upon his head, smoothing back the dark hair, just showing a little frost, from his broad, manly temples.

A pleasant group was this for the eyes of Mrs. Lewis, as she came forth from her chamber to the sitting-room, where she had gone to lay off her bonnet and shawl and change her dress. Well did her husband und rstand the meaning lock she gave him; and warmly did her heart respond to the smile he threw back upon her.

"Words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver," said Mr. Lewis, speaking to her as she came in.

"What do you mean by that?" asked Mary. looking curiously into her father's face.

"Mother understands," replied Mr. Lewis smiling tenderly upon his wife. "Something pleasant must have happened,"

"Something pleasant? Why do you say that?"

asked Mr. Lewis. "You and mother look so happy," replied the

"And we have cause to be happy," answered the father, as he drew his arm tightly around her, "in having three such good children."

Mary laid her cheek to his, and whispered: "If you are smiling and happy, dear father! home will be like Heavon."

Mr. Lewis kissed her; but did not reply. He elt arebuke 'n her words. But the rebuke did not throw a chill over his feelings; it only gave a new strength to his purposes.

"Don't distribute all your smiles. Keep a few of the warmest and brightest for home," said Mrs. Lewis, as she parted with her husband on the next morning. He kissed her, but did not promise. The smiles were kept however, and evening saw them; though not for the outside world. Other, and many evenings saw the same cheerful smiles, and the same happy home. And was not Mr. Lewis a better and happier man? Of course he was. And so would all men be, if they would take home with them the smiling aspect they so often exhibit, as they meet their fellow-men in business intercourse, or exchange words in passing compliments. Take your smites and che rful words home with you, husbands, fathers, and brothers. Your hearths are cold and dark wi hout them .- Gode, 's Lady's Book.

I WILL BE GOOD TO-DAY.

"I will be good, dear mother," I heard a sweet child say;

"I will be good, now watch me-I will be good all day."

She lifted up her bright young eyes, With a soft and pleasing smile; Then a mother's kiss was on her lips. So free and pure from guile.

And when night came, that little one, In kneeling down to pray, Said, in a soft and whispering tone, "Have I been good to-day?"

Oh many, many bitter tears Twould save us, did we sav. Like that dear child, with earnest heart, I will be good to-day.

A LESSON FROM THE BIRDS.

'See how it rains, rains, rains,' said little Mary Jellie, as she gazed from the closet window of her mother's chamber, longing to see the shower cease, and the sun shine out bright again. 'O mamma, it will never stop, and I do hate rainy weather.' Just then a little bird, whose nest hung from a tree not far off, broke out in one of his swectest strains, and Mary listened wonderingly.

Hark, daughter, he .r what the bird says,' said her good mamma, who observed the fixed atten-

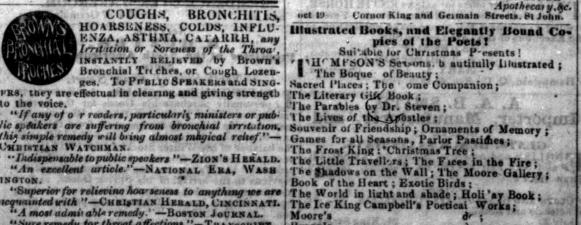

'Why it only sings,' answered Mary.

'Yes; but while you are fretting and whining in this nice large room, with all your playthings around you, and your doll waiting to be dressed. birdie sings from the dripping bushes as though he would remind you that God makes the rain fall! See how his throat swells.'

Mary looked up to the bough, and sure enough, there he was, warbling merrily; when his song ceased, she said it was because she had quit murmuring at the weather. The next morning Anna Grey came over to spend the day with her friedd, and while they played together on the green grass Anna suddenly laid by her doll and ran toward the house. ' Why do you go away?' cried Mary, surprised at her sudden freak. O! it is so hot we can't play out of doors, I
