MAKE HOME PLEASANT.

No greater mistake can be made by any parent than to forbid innocent amusements in the home circle, whereby home is made the dearest place on earth, and temptation to go elsewhere is removed:

If home life is well ordered, the children having, according to age, work-time, play-time, books, games, and household sympathies, they will love home, and find pleasure there.

Give the little ones slates and pencils, and encourage their attempt to make pictures. Drawing will amuse them when noisy plays have lost their zeal, or are unseasonable; and the art will be useful to them in after-life. Have them read to each other stories and paragraphs of your selection, and save the funny things, and the pleasant ones you see in papers and books to read to them at you leisure, You cannot imagine how it will bind them to you. But choose well for them; for the impressions made upon their minds new will last when the hills crum ble. Have them sing together, and sing with them, teaching songs and hymns. Let them sing all day like birds-at all proper times Have them mutually interested in the same things, amusements and occupations; having specified times for each, so that their habits will be orderly. Let them work together in the garden-boys and oirls both need out of-door work; while the paresits' eyes direct and sympathize. and the foud voices blend in the loving ac-

A WORD TO GIRLS AND BOYS-GOOD MANNERS.

Young friends are you polite, genteel, well be haved everywhere? at all times? in all societies? Good breeding is a fortune already made-an independent fortune. - Courtesy, kindness, anoble dignified, heavenly deportment paves the way to eminence, stations of honor, wealth, respectibility to glory imperishable.

Well, young reader, how is this excellence to be attained? Where is the starting point? In early life. Yes, begin at home, in the domestic circle, around the fireside. The very moment you can lisp a single syllable, audibly begin to acquire courtesy. Be kind and polite to your parents, brothers and sisters, your superiors and inferiors. See that every thought, every word and action bear their impress of a sweet, gentle, affable courtesy. Study to make every body happy. True politeness is benevolence and true benevolence is politeness. When these habits of courtesy or good behaviour are thus equired at home-exhibited on all occasions

STRANGE STRATAGEM .- Mary Couness of Orknev. was both deaf and dumb. She was married in the year 1743 by signs. Shortly after the ing, evidently full of some deep design. The can be counted, in this very trap. Countess having assured herself that the she had conceased under her shawl, and to the horror of the nurse, who was an Irishwoman, and like all persons of the lower orders in her own country, and indeed in most countries, was fully impressed with an idea of the peculiar cunning and malignity of "dummies," lifted it with apparent intent to fling it down vehemently. Before the nurse could interpose, the Countess had flung the stone not however, as the servant had apprehended, at the child, but on the floor, where it made a great noise. The child immediately awoke and cried. The Countess who had looked with maternal eagerness to the result of her experiment, fell on her kneea in a transport of joy. She had discovered that her child possessed the sense which was wanting in herself. She exexhibited on many other occasions similar proof of intelligence but none so interesting.

A MOTHER'S PRAYER.

A mother bad heard of the arrival of her sailor-boy outside of the Cape, and was awaiting his return with the anxiety a mother alone can know. With faith strong in God she prayed for his safety. News came that the vessel was lost! The father, an unconverted man, who had pre served a sullen silence, now wept aloud. The mother observed.

"He is in the hands of Him who doeth all things well;" and again the subdued and softenspirit bowed, commending her son and husband, in an audible voice, to God.

In the morning, the little gate in front of the dwelling turned on its hinges and the door opened, and their lost loved son stood before them. The vessei had been driven into one of the harbors on the coast and was safe. The them-"My dear children, I have spent my whole father rushed to meet him. His mother, hanging on his neck, earnestly exclaimed,

"My child, how came you here?"

"Mother prays; christian's prayers are answered, and I may be saved."

This reflection inspired him anew, when almost exhausted with fatigue, and with renewed courage he labored till the harbor was gained.

A ROYAL INTERVIEW

The letter of the Indian princess, Nah-ne-baand grandfather, gives a graphic outline picture of an interview with the Queen of England.

This woman, with a heroic spirit, and in spite of peculiar difficulties, left her home in Canada last winter, and made her way to England, for the express purpose of engaging for her tribe the sympathy and protection of the Queen. By the favor of Mr. John Bright, she obtained an interview with the Duke of Newcastle.

" Mr. John Bright went with me," she writes (Mr. John Bright is a Quaker, too.) The duke was very kind, asked me many questions about the Indians, which I answered as I could. So at the close of our conversation, he promised me he would let me know when I could see the Queen ; so in a few days the letter came to my friend, at whose house I was stopping."

Then came the visit to Victoria, which the Indian girl describes so well.

The duke went before us, and made two bows. and then I was left in the presence of the queen She came forward to meet me, and held out her hand for me to kiss, but I forgot to kiss it, and only shook hands with her. The queen asked me many questions, and was very kind in her manners, and very friendly to me. Then my Quaker friend spoke to the duke, and said, suppose the queen knows for what purpose my friend has come?" The duke said my papers had been explrined to her majesty, and I have her Onions; I brl PEARS; 1 box Tomatoes. For sale majesty's commands to investigate the Indian affairs when I go to Canada with the Prince of Wales. Then the queen bowed to me, and said 'I am happy to promise you my aid and protection,' and asked me my name. The queen then looked at her husband, who stood on her left side, and smiled"-probably at the length of the name. " She received me with so much kindness as to astonish me, when I caw her come

OUR CHILDREN.

Our chilnren are to fill our places in society-"Young folks should be mannerly. But how in church and state, and the manner in which to be is the question. TRUE PIETY.

THE BEST KNOWLEDGE. A very learned man, (Selden,) when about to

Much of it has been of use, but much more was not even worth the getting; and now that I am about to leave the world, of all that I have learned, nothing nothing gives me so much comfort as the little sentence, Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners,' and I would rather be ignorant of everything else, than of

IMPURE BLOOD:

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poisen, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stemash will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bife. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence, a cough—and all from a slight impurity at the fountainhead of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which ran a tiny rivulet, in a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. As quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lamp of life soon dies out. These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body; they are, therefore, unrivalled
