MAKE YOUR HOME BEAUTIFUL.

Make your home beautiful-bring to it flowers Plant them around you to bud and to bloam Let them give life to your loneliest hours— Let them bring life to enliven your gloom; Make your own world one that never has sorrowed-

Of music and sunshine, and gold summer air, A home-world, whose, forehead care never has furrowed

And whose cheek of bright beauty shall ever be fair.

Make your home beautiful-weave round its portal Wreaths of the jessamine, and delicate sprays Of red-fruited woodbine, with joy immortal, That blesses and brightens wherever it strays Gather the blossoms, too-one little flower, Varied verbena, or sweet migmonette, Still may bring bloom to your desolate bower,

Make your home beautiful—gather the roses, That hoard up the sunshine with exquisite art; Perchance they may pour, as your darkness clo-

Still may be something to love and to pet.

That soft summer sunshine down into your If you can do so. O! make it an Eden

Twill teach you to long for that home you are That heaven of beauty beyond the blue skies.

Of beauty and gladness-remember, 'tis wise:

Make your home beantiful- sure, 'tis a duty-Call up your little ones : teach them to walk

Hand in hand, with the wandering angel of heauty; Encourage their spirits with nature to talk : Gather them round you and let them be learning Lessons, that drop from the delicate wings

Of the bird and the butterfly-ever returning

Make home a hive, where all beautiful feelings Cluster like bees and their honey-dew bring;

To him who has made all these beautiful things.

Make it a temple of holy revealings,
And love its bright angel with "shadowing Then shall it be, when afar on life's billows,

Wherever your tempest-tost children are flung, They will long for the shades of the home-weep

And sing the sweet song which their mother had sung.

From the Christian Times. THOU, GOD, SEEST ME.

Harvey Lee was alone. Half an hour had passed since he dropped his pen and bowed his head upon the desk to think. It was a season of temptation, such as they only know who have yearned for a forbidden pleasure, until life seems nought but a long, weary conflict. Harvey was an orphan with but one tie in the wide world to make him feel that he had something to live for : his gentle, suffering sister. In childhood she had been his playmate, in after years the sharer with him of every enjoyment, and in affliction his comforter. He loved her devotedly, and since the death of his parents had never permitted her to know any want that it was in his power to supply. But there had come a time when her cheek grew pale, and her step feebler, and a pang went through his heart, lest she, too, should be taken

The physician said that she must travel, that a year in the South would bring new life into her frame, and restore the bloom of health to her cheek. From that time Harvey Lee strove to think of some plan by which it could be accomplished. Alas! he was poor. The salary he received as a clerk had supported them, but it was not sufficient to defray the expenses of a journey so he saw her growing feebler day after day without being able to prevent it.

As he sat there thinking of these things, the tempter suggested how easily he might take some money from his employer without being discovered. At first it startled him, but gradually he began to excuse himself; to reason that he might some day replace the sum taken, and that it would be right to do thus for the sake of one whose life it might save. It cost a severe struggle before he determined to yield to the temptation, but the evil conquered; and rising he opened the drawer in which several hundred dollars had been placed a few hours since, when suddenly there flashed across his mind, a recollection of the words learned in his childhood: "Thou God, seest me." Had he forgotten that there is an eye fixed upon as when no other is nigh? Ah! he remembered now the lesson learned in the Sabbath School when a pure-minded boy Though his sin should never be found out by his fellow men, he knew that all through life he would be haunted by the thought that it was known to One from whom nothing can be hid-

The tempter was vanquished; he turned from the drawer, and would not yield to his whisperings. But conscience was awakened. Time passed, yet the shadow still rested upon his brow and his aching heart found no peace. The words seemed continually sounding in his ear : " Thou. God, seest me." He reviewed his past life, and despair almost seized upon him, as he saw how little he had thought of God, or striven to acknowledge him in all his ways. Was there no rest for the weary, sin-sick soul?

" Harvey, can you leave home this summer? I want some one to go South and act as my agent there for a few months. If you will go, I will double the salary you receive now."

Ah! God had looked in pity upon him, and listened to the feeble cry for help. Harvey bowed his head upon his hand, and remained silent for several moments before he could master his emotion enough to reply.

"Mr. Wilson, you are too kind," he said, at. " This is just what I have been wishing

"Well, get ready, then. I shall want you to start next week. I should not send every one in that place," continued Mr. Wilson, "but you have been with me a long time, and I know L can will help if it is in my power."

That night Harveo Lee knelt for the first time, to utter a prayer of thanksgiving, and yow that henceforth he would consecrate himself to the Searcher of all hearts.

Ten years rolled away. There had been many changes in that time. Gentle Marion Lee had regained her health under the influence of the calmy Southern air; had found a manly heart which cherished her as its life companion, and in her happy home, the name of "brother" was one which called forth love and gratitude.

In a large mercantile establishment in B , bearing the name of Wilson, Lee & Co., moved one whom we should scarcely recognize as the young man of our former acquaintance. Every one in B. knew him, and knowing, loved him for his kindness, his forbearance with the erring, his generosity and cheerfulness. Immersed in kindness, he still found time to attend the prayermeeting, assist the needy or speak a word of endirect many a one who was wandering in the paths of sin, to the Lamb of God.

One evening a minister of the gospel, whose locks were frosted by time, came to his house and requested an interview. He was endeavoring day, at the bleak end of Fishkill Landing, we to obtain funds for the erection of a church in the far West, and begged him to contribute something toward it.

"Do you not often become discouraged Pt asked Mr. Lee, after complying with his re-

"Yes, it seems as if I accomplish very little

"Yet you have the assurance that our Heavenly Eather does not forget us, and often stretches out his arm when human efforts fail." " I am afraid I walk too much by sight, and too little by faith;" said the stranger. " I am not always content to wait God's own good time." " In due time we shall reap if we faint not. I think that promise is fulfilled more frequently than we realize. Some of the lessons I learned years ago, did not make any impression upon my mind until I had reached the age of manhood; but may never know, perhaps, how much good they have done. I remember that once when I was a small boy, the Sabbath School which I attended was addressed by a stranger. He spoke very earnestly of the omnipresence and omniscience of God, but in such a simple manner that my childish attention was fixed. After the services, when coming down the ai-le, he met me, and laying his hand upon my head, he said, Little boy did you listen to me? don't forget, thou God seest me.' I never did forget it, and it was the means long afterwards, as I trust, of leading me to Christ."

"Mr. Lee, I am that man;" said the stranger with emotion. " I recollect the incident to which you allude, but did not recognize you until you mentioned it. Providence directed me here to entirely learn a lesson of faith, and to receive encouragement which will sustain me in many dark hours."

Are there other fainting couls? Let them remember that " at evening time there shall be light." If there be any other who is almost ready to yield to temptation, let him look up-

MAN THE LIFE-BOAT.

The writer recollects, with mournful vividness even after the lapse of many years, a calamity at one of our summer watering-places. It was the quiet Sabbath; the morning had been bright; the sheeny waves danced in the sun's warm smile. In the spacious offing were gallant ships of many nations riding at anchor. Glad notes resounded from many sylvan songsters. It was a lovely scene,-like Eden ere the serpent Sin blighted its Suddenly the wind changed-" flew into the north-east," as sailors say ; and a hurricane commenced, the waves mounting, crested with foam, scathed by the lashing wind. The vessels pitched and tossed heavi y, and one or two slightly moored small craft were dashed on the beach near the spectators who were guthered to watch the grand and terrible storm.

From one of the vessels abruptly rose the piercing cry " Man overboard!" In a moment all eyes were turned to the spot, and a human form was seen manfully breasting the furious elements, in the direction of the shore; but the dominant waves bore the struggler rapidly outward, and, ere the boats could be lowered, a fearful space sundered the victim from help.

Above the shriek of the storm and roar of the waters rose his piercing cry. It was an agonizing moment. With bated breath and blanched cheek, every eye strained to the struggling man No one asked if he were a Churchman or Dissenter; the universal spirit of sympathy was there leaving no room for many thoughts.

Manfully did the brave rowers strain every nerve in that race of mercy. Right carnestly did their brawny arms pull to near their sinking fel-

" Blessings on the dauntless spirits, Dangers thus who nobly brave; Ready life and limb to venture,

So they may a brother save." But all their efforts were in vain. One wild shriel of despair, and the victim went down.

A piercing cry, " Save him ! save him ! rang through the hushed crowd; and into their midst darted an agitated man, throwing his arms wildly into the air, shouting," A thousand pounds for the man who saves his life !" but his starting eyes rested only on the spot where the waves rolled remorselessly over the perished. Oh, the look that settled on his face when hope lay dead. The storm went down, and, like a forgiven child when its passion is spent, nature smiled, unheeding the desolation wrought in its short but stern career. We subsequently learnt, that he whose strong cry broke the stillness of the crowd was aptain of the ship from whence the drowned man fell, and that he was his brother. This is just the feeling now wanted in the vari-

said his employer, grasping his hand as he con- him! Oh, for the moving cry to peal over the cluded. "I could have assisted you long ago, world, Save him, he is my brother! This would had I known how much you needed it. When usher in the glorious day, when " the kingdoms ever you are in trouble again, come to me, and I of the world shall becomes the kingdoms of our God, and of His Christ."

" Man the life-boat! man the life-boat! Christians ! up and succour send ; See, the shattered vestel staggers; Haste ye, haste, assistance lend !

There's a storm, a fearful tempest ; Souls are sinking in despair; There's a shore of blessed refuge Try, oh, try to guide them there !

COME!

Many voices seem to say, "Hither, children, here's the way; Come along, and nothing fear Every pleas int joy is here."

Yes; but whither would it lead ? Is it happiness indeed? Or a little shining show, Leading down to endless wee?

Children listen to the voice of Jesus. H says, "Come unto ma." He can make you hapcouragement and sympathy to the afflicted, and py now. He will lead you to heaven, where you shall be happy for ever. Come to Jesus.

SENTENTIOUS.

Obliged to wait for the ferry-boat, the other took refuge from the storm in a small oyster saloon, in the centre of which was the usual comfort,-a large stove. On the top of the iron cylinder was a shingle placard which seemed to us better expressed than any advertisement we had ever seen to the same purpose. It ran thus:

GENTLEMEN WILL NOT. AND OTHERS MUST NOT. Spit in this Stove.

The writer of that should be employed on the advertising columns of a newspaper .- N. Y. Hame Journal.

ETERNITY.

Eternity has no gray hairs. The flowers fade, the heart withers, man grows old and dies; the world lies down in the sepulchre of ages, but time writes no wrinkles on eternity. Eternity! Stupendous thought! The ever-present, unborn, they were not lost, yet those who taught them undecaying and undying, the endless chain, compassing the life of God-the golden thread, entwining the destinies of the universe. Earth has its beauties, but time shrouds them for the grave; its honours are but the sunshine of an hour; its palaces, they are but the gilded sepulchres; its pleasures, they are but as bursting bubbles. Not so in the untried bourne. In the dwelling of the Almighty can come no footsteps

Oak Grove, S. C., June 20th, 1859.

Prof. O. J. Wood—Daur Sir-Your Hair Restorative is r. pidly ga ning popularity in this community. I have had occasion to lay prejudice aside, and give your Hair Restorative is perfect est:

During the year 1854, I was so unfortunate as to be thrown from my sulky against a rock near the roadside, from which my head received a most terrific blow; causing a great deal of irritation, which communitated to the brain and external surface of the head, from the effects of which my hair was finally destroyed over the entire surface of the head. From the time of its total disappearance, I employed everything I could possibly think of, being a professional man mysell, and, as I thought, understanding the nature of the disease, but was finally defeated in every prescription advanced.

These and no other circumstances induced me to resort to your worthy Hair Restorative, which I have every reason to belive, produced a very happy result; two months after the first application, I had as beautiful a head of young hair as I ever saw, for I certainly owe you my most sincere thanks. Rest assured, dear sir, I shall use my induence which fatter everyel to say, is not a little.

You can publish this if you think proper.

Yours viry respectfully,

Office of the Jeffer-tonian, Philippl, Va., Dec. 12th, 1858.

Dear Sir—I feel it my duty as well as my pleasure to state to Jou the following circumstance, which point as a symmetry with the proper. A gentleman of this place were as a symmetry and after assured to wear a wig. He was induced to use a bottle of your "fair Restorative," which is liked very much; and after assure some two or three bottles had great to use a bottle of your fair Restorative," which be liked very much; and after assure some two or three bottles had as he severy well as great for the entire restor

ANDFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR NEVER DEBILITATES. It is compounded entirely from Gums and has become an established fact, a Standard Medicine known and approved by all that have used it, and is now resorted to with confidence in all the diseases for which it is recommended.

It has cured thousands within the last two years who had given up all hopes of relief, as the numerous unsolicited certificates in my possession show.

The dose must be adment of the individual taking it, and used in such quantities as to act gently on the bowels.

Let the dictates of your judgement guide you in the use of the LI-O Yer INVIGOR. TOR, and it will cure LIVER of COMPLAINT, Rillions at you in the use of the LIand it will cure LIVER
