The Duke of Newcastle thought that when the circumstances of the commercial treaty with France were known, the House would be prepared to support her Majesty's Government.

Lord Normanby thought it would be better to postpone the discussion on Chinese affairs until the papers on the subject were before the House. Lord Brougham, Lord Derby, and Lord Granville having spoken,

The amendment was negatived and the Address

HOUSE OF COMMONS. In the House of Commons the Address was moved by Mr. St. Aubyn (member for West Cornwall). who briefly passed in review, as customary, the principal topics adverted to in the speech from

The motion was seconded by Lord Henley. Mr. Disraeli took notice of the attempt made by Lord Henley to raise, he said, a question of confidence. He did not intend, he observed, to move an amendment to the Address: but there were topics of much importance referred to in the Roy I Speech which required explanation. The prospect of increased commercial relations with France was, he admitted, a subject of congratulation; nevertheless, the nature of the commercial treaty (supposing it to be based upon a principle of reciprocity) required some explanation. Another subject which demanded explanation was the condition of Italy and the relations of our Government with that country. The conclusion to which he had come was that the less we meddied with the affairs of Italy the better. A country in the present state of Italy was far beyond the management and settlement of Courts, Cabinets, and Congresses; the problem could only be solved by the will of the population, though this country might do great good by laying down principles of sound policy.

Lord Palmerston, in reply to these inquiries, observed, with regard to the Treaty of Commerce, that although, as a general principle it was not desirable that this country should enter into conventions regarding tariffs, peculiar circumstances prevented our obtaining from the French govt.a security for future arrangements, unless they assumed the character of a convention, the stpiulations of her Majesty being conditional on their receiving the assent of Parliament. He declared that this government was entirely free from any agreement with any foreign government as to the affairs of Italy. The principle which our government asserted, and upon which they would enter into Congress, was that the people of Italy should be left to settle their own affairs, and the government had taken pains to make this known. It would have been impolitic on the part of this country to refuse to enter into Congress; but we were free from any engagement, and we avowed the principle on which we were prepared to act. The policy of the Government had never varied -namely, that it was not fitting for foreign Courts to interfere with the Italians on the subject of their affairs, but that they should be left to settle their own concerns.

The motion was then agreed to. The House adjourned at half-past 7 o'clock. AUSTRIA.

VIENNA, Monday Night. "The following is everal Vienna papers have published the NAPLES.

NAPLES, Jan. 21, (via Marseilles). It is stated that General Filangieri has tendered his resignation, after being present at a Council of Ministers, where the question was put by the King whether armed assistance should be given to the Pope in certain emergencies.

Should the resignation of the General become definitive, it would occasion a complete change in the Ministry." GENOA, Jan. 24. Letters received from project of the King to order the Neapolitan troops to enter the Papal States. THE PAPAL STATES.

Rome, Jan 21 (via Marseilles). The city is quiet. Should the French garrison evacuate the place, the Papal Government intends to concentrate at Rome 5,000 soldiers of the Line, in addition to the Carabiniers.

SWITZERLAND. BERNE, Jan. 23. According to letters from Vienna, the Emperor of Austria has expressed to the Swiss Charge d'Affaires has satisfaction at the impartial manner in which Switzerland observed its neutrality during the war of I859. ITALY. The ministerial appointments in the Sardinian Cabinet have now been made, with Count Cavour Minister for Foreign Affairs, and, ad interim. Minister for the Interior. The Gazette also contains a decree dissolving the chamber of Deputies, and ordering some new arrangements in the composition of the electoral lists. The Governor of Modena, by a special decree, publishes the Sar-dinian electoral law; fixes the number of deputies to be elected, and establishes the districts and assemblies for electoral purposes. Every-where, it is said, the change in the Sardinian Cabinet has been received with rejoicing, and as an evidence of the triumph of Liberal principles in Italy.

The Austrian Government has given an official denial to the report of the desertion of Hungarian soldiers from the garrisons of Venetia. The result of an inquiry by the Governor of Verona shows, says the official statement, that not one Hungarisays the official statement, that not one Hungarian soldier has deserted his colours since the peace of Villafranca. A good many secret agents had, however, been arrested for tampering with the Hungarian regiments. The Ost Deutsche Post, remarking on the policy of the Austrian Government says the only part which Austria can play for a long time to come is that of resignation. She may protest before the world, but to support that protest with what material power to support that protest with what material power remains to her would be a fatal policy.

The Official Gazette of Parma publishes a note, in which the facts relative to the arrest of Father Felletti, who ordered the abduction of the child Mortara, are rectified and stated more precisely. Mortara, are rectified and stated more precisely. The arrest only took place at the demand of the Mortara family—[this has been contradicted in England]—and the imprisonment was not ordered until it was shown to be clearly impossible for Father Felletti to clear himself from the charge of carrying off the child, supported as it was by numerous witnesses. The prisoner is treated with the greatest attention in the prison of the palace where he is confined while waiting for his trial.

The Moniteur publishes the following most imortant letter addressed by the Emperor to the linister of State:—

"PALACE OF THE TUILERIES, Jan. 5.
"Monsieur le Ministre,—Despite the uncertainty which still prevails on certain points of foreign policy, a pacific solution may confidently be looked forward to. The moment has there-

"I address to you with that object the bases of a programme, some portions of which will have to receive the approval of the Chambers, and upon which you will concert with your coldustry, and to commerce.

"For a long time this truth has been proclaimed, that the means of exchange must be multiplied prohibitive duties, to render commerce flourishing; that without force in July, 1861. competition industry remains stationary and maintains high prices, which are opposed to the pro-gress of consumption; that without a prosperous tween the Moors and the Spaniards have come is bound up in the successive development of the State ought to favour these diverse interests, and what order of preference it ought to grant to

"Thus before developing our foreign commerc by the exchange of produce, it is necessary to improve our agriculture, and to liberate our industry | Spanish side we have exaggerated accounts of the om all internal impediments which place it in conditions of inferiority. At the present day, not only are our great enterprises impeded by a host of restrictive regulations, but even the 1,500. welfare of those who work is far from having attained the development which it has attained in a neighbouring country. There is, therefore, only a general system of good political economy which can, by creating a national wealth, spread comfort among the working classes.

"In that which relates to agriculture, you must make it share in the benefits of the institutions of credit, clear the forests situated in the plains, and replant the hills, devote annually a considerable sum to the great works of drainage, irrigation, and clearage. These works, transforming the uncultivated districts into cultivated lands, will enrich the districts without the impoverishsale of a portion of those lands restored to agriculture.

To encourage industrial production you must liberate from every tax all raw material indispensable to industry, and allow it, exceptionally, and at a moderate rate, as has already been done for agriculture on drainage, the funds necessary to

One of the greatest services to be rendered to the country is to facilitate the transport of articles of first necessity to agriculture and industry. With this object, the Minister of Public Works will cause to be executed as promptly as possible the means of communication, canals, roads, and railways, whose main object will be to convey coal and manure to the district where the wants of production require them, and will endeavour to reduce the tariffs by establishing an equitable competition between the canals and railways.

The encouragement to commerce by the multi-plication of the means of exchange will then fol-low as a natural consequence of the preceding measures. The successive reduction of the duty on articles of great consumption will then be a necessity, as also the substitution of protecting duties for the prohibitive system which limits our commercial relations.

By these measures agriculture will find a market for its produce; industry, set free from internal impediments, assisted by the Government, and stimulated by competition, will compete advantageously with foreign produce, and our commerce, instead of languishing, will receive a new

Desiring, above all things, that order may be maintained in our finances, observe how, without disturbing the equilibrium, these ameliorations might be obtained :-

The conclusion of the peace has allowed us not to exhaust the amount of the loan. There remains disposable a considerable sum, which joined to other resources, amounts to about 160,000, 000f. In asking from the Legislative Body permission to apply this sum to great public works, and by dividing it into three annuities, it would give about 50,000,000f annually to add to the considerable sums already annually carried to the

This extraordinary resource will facilitate to us not only the prompt completion of the railways, canals, means of navigation, roads, and ports, but it will also allow us to restore in less time our cathedrals, our churches, and worthily to encourage science, letters, and the arts.

To compensate for the loss which the Treasury will for the moment suffer by the reduction of duties on raw materials and on goods of great consumption, our budget offers the resource of the sinking fund, which it will suffice to suspend until the public revenue, increased by the augmenta-tion of commerce, allows the sinking fund to be again brought into play.

"Thus, to resume :- Suppression of duty on wool and cotton:

" Successive reduction on sugar and coffee; " An energetic improvement in the means of communication ;

"Considerable works of public utility;

" NAPOLEON." The Emperor's free-trade letter has been received with enthusiasm in the sea-port towns of France, and deputations are said to be on the eve of coming up to Paris to thank Louis Napo-leon for his communication to M. Fould. In leed, several of the leading manufacturers of the king-dom have already arrived in the capital for the purpose of presenting addresses to the Emperor; and an inquiry into the operation of the present laws on the commerce of France was to open on Tuesday, under the presidency of the Emperor. At Havre, it is said, the houses were decked with flags when the imperial letter was received. with flags when the imperial letter was received. Orders are stated to have been sent to embark 30,000 French troops for Leghorn, and the Mediterranean Railway Company have received directions to hold themselves in readiness to convey that number to the place of embarkation.

The Poys of Friday night states that the Emperor has terminated the free-trade inquiry which was opened in consequence of the imperial let ter written to M. Fould on the 5th inst. A "corres ondent" gives an account of the deputation which waited on the Emperor, and the mode in which the inquiry was taken, and he adds that one manufacturer, celebrated for his wealth and liberal opinions, declared that he was ashamed of the immense profits made by his brother mo-nopolists. The Emperor is reported, by Le Nord, to have been particularly explicit in his remarks to some manufacturers who had an interview with

They contain the active principles of well known drugs, isolated from inert watter, which plan is chemically speaking, one ofgreat importance to their usefulness. It not only gives the concentrated virtues of medicines, but insures great activity certainty and uniformity of effect.

Your use of "Ricinie," the active principle of the easter bean, is new to me, and your course of procuring it by chemical analysis from the bean is certainly valuable.

Your Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virues of vegetable remedies in skilfuit combination.
