M. Chevalier, President of the Trade and International Law Section of the Social Science Association, delivered his address on the 17th. It is scarcely necessary to say that this eminent economist enlarged on the blessings of peace and free trade, and availed himself of the opportunity to defend the Commercial Treaty, in the negotiation of which he played so important a part. In the course of his observation, he stated that a similar treaty will shortly be concluded between France and distance of a few yards from my pony's head.—

My wife and two children were naturally much alarmed, so I directed some hay-makers who were at work in an adjoining field to dig for it, while I drove to a friend's house close by. The pony broke out into a profuse perspiration, trembled all over, and showed every sign of the greatest terror.

On my return to the spot, after an absence of about 20 minutes, I found that the laborers had succeeded in disinterring what proved a most magnificent aerolite, of such a size and weight as I do not believe to be on record. Its shape is an irregular ellipse, the major axis being 11½ inches, the minor axis 7½ inches; the weight is 83½ lbs.

The men who dug it up informed me that it had the first and two the numbers or the disposition of our forces, but the country may be assured that an army larger than any which has hitherto been gathered in defense of the that in the disciplined, and better disciplined and strategist of his age—they will be executed under the personal lead and direction of the young and gallant. At the moment of its fall the sky was perfectly cloudless. A strong smell of sulphur was diffused immediately after the descent, and I have found several crystals of that element in the cavities on the upper surface, which have escaped abrasion from the soil. I shall deposit it in the library of the Mechanics' Institute at Lancaster.

Napoleon has gone to Biarrity. It is stated that his interview with the King of Prussia will not take place until after the latter's coronation.

The Petersburg Express of Monday gives an account of the taking of Fort Hatteras, and says a portion of the wounded escaped on a steamboat. It gives the killed and wounded at about eighty. It says that those who escaped report the magazine as having exploded, but does not believe the story, and states that at 8 o'clock on Sunday night it was known at Goldsboro' that a ormidable Yankee fleet was in sight of Fort Mason, which commands the entrance to Beaufort harbor. The latter is spoken of as the most formidable fortification on the North Carolina coast. An attack was expected on Monday morning. The garrison was well prepared for an assault, and will resist with a determination and daring

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

Charlotte Street-St. John. W E hereby announce that the Rev. W. Folyard has opened the Brunswick Seminary, in Charlotte Street, No. 76, for the instruction of Youth, in the various branches of Education taught in Parish Schools. Also—adults who wish to improve in the august study of Theology, which is the most noble of all sciences, (because it is a cure for the diseases of the soul) and shall not be charged any more than a common school fee.

Here the pupils shall be carefully fustructed in the art of composing, with ease and accuracy, which is called one of the highest human attainments. They shall be taught the practical mode of getting up Lectures. Speeches, Sermons, Addresses, &c., from the exordium to the refutation. dresses, &c., from the exordium to the refutation.

Grand Falls, N. B., Sep. 11th, 1861. PROF. M. BRENAN

THE World Renowned Medicine Man and PROMULGATOR OF HUMONOLOGY, PHYSIOLOGY and PHYSIOGNOMY, has opened an office at the Revere House, 21 King St., St. John, N.B. Where he may be consulted by both male and female, on all diseases the system is heir to, and the most implicit confidence may be placed in the Professor, as his long practice and extensive knowledge of the human character has made him familiar with the individual wants and natural disposition of men.

Prof. Brenan's extensive practice and close at tention to business has enabled him to select the best Medicines from all that is considered tention to business has enabled him to select the best Medicines from all that is considered useful, which, with his superior perceptive powers in arriving at correct conclusion as to the proper application of the invaluable remedies, as Curatives, present great inducements to the poor, broken down invalids, whose despairing hope adds the sting of misery to their already prostrate and almost irreparable forlorn condition, but there is hope. God, in his infinite wisdom and mercy, never suffered a disease to exist but what he makes a balm to cure. There is a relief bursting through the clouds of despair. There is a saviour in the all-healing power of Prof. Brenan's remedies. All that is wanting is to come and entrust your case in the hands, and to the skill of the Universal Benefactor of Humanity, and rest assured you will be perfectly satisfied with the result.

A blessing it is, truly, to be able with a certainty to procure a remedy that will cause the blood of life once more to burst through the clouds of disease, and its "sparkling" influence to be feit once more by sur friends, in the moral and social sphere.

VALUABLE QUESTION BOOKS. Sabbath School Studies on the Life of Christ. By Rev. W. S. McKenzie First and S cond Grade. Price $10 per hundred each.

This work has been prepared with the design of having a question book, where the same subject could be presented to the whole school. The first grade is for the younger portion of the school, while the second is for those more advanced. Both of them are on the same portion of Societate but one them are on the same portion of Scripture, but one is more simple than the other.

Vol. 2 do do 2 Grades.—These volumes make a complete and interesting history of the Life of Christ. It will be found of great value for a whole school to have the same lesson before them. From Prof. H. B. Hachett, D. D., of Newton In

I have examined some of the pages of Rev. Mr. McKenzie's Question Book on the Life of the Saviour. I regard the plan of the work (which differs quite materially from that of any similar work,) as excellent, the questions as eminently judicious and well suited to interest and instruct the learner. It cannot fail to prove a welcome and useful auxiliary to the cause of Sabbath School Instruction.
