CHRISTIAN LOVE AND LOYALTY; OR. THE REBEL RECLAIMED.

THE LONELY DWELLING. Charity envieth not.

Happy they who have never felt the serpent fang of envy! As the eye dazzled by looking on the sun sees, when turned away from it, dull spots blotting every thing that it rests on; so envy, from the very brightness of its object, draws the dimness that oppresses and almost blinds it. The envious cannot rejoice with them that do rejoice; the pleasure or honor of another seems to be so much taken from themselves. With just cause, indeed, are envyings counted amongst those works of the flesh which are opposed to the fruits of the spirit, and incompatible with Christian love. Envy carries its own punan instinct of fraternal kindness might have love and joy, for love and joy I need. Well did stirred within him, and led him to aid a brother in need; but to find the Captain possessed of what he most coveted for himself-independence -honor-a historical name-was as gall and wormwood to Braburn.

"Let them shout, the senseless rabble! let them shout ! muttered Jaspar to himself, as he strode through the shrubbery, "none but fools care for the vain breath of popular applause! They shall one day also know me; they shall watch my going forth, not perhaps with joynot with looks of welcome-I would not stoop to court their favor! but they shall find that I am not the cipher that they deem me-that I will leave my mark on the age; better to be hated than despised,-better to be feared than forgot ten!" Jaspar fancied that there was greatness of mind in this thought, being too much blinded by self-love to perceive that it was nothing but the expression of mortified vanity, and the envy of a frivolous soul.

"Oh! what are the people cheering for ?" ex claimed Liberia, running from the shrubbery walk at the back of the Castle, followed by Grace, who, like herself, was attracted to the front by the sound. She met her father on the gravel path, and eagerly repeated her question. "Your uncle is riding away," said Jaspar,

"Riding away-oh! no - I hope not!' cried Liberia, with a look of disappointment. "I thought that he would stay with us for days. Grace and I were just gathering flowers to form a triumphal arch for our hero! Surely, surely he has not left us so soon, and without even bidding me good bye!"

"He left a a message of love for you, Liberia. Remember that your uncle is not his own master; his time is not at his disposal; he wears the king's livery, and must do his work."

"I am sure that it is an honorable livery, and a glorious work!" cried Liberia. "My uncle may well be proud of the service—and the service proud of my uncle!"

Jaspar was little pleased at the enthusiasm of his daughter, but he rarely showed anger towards her. If there were anything noble and tender in the nature of Braburn, it was his affection for his motherless child. Not that even paternal love was unmixed with selfishness: Jaspar was proud of Liberia-he regarded her as superior to all other girls, chiefly as being his own: the daughter of Jaspar Braburn must be a different being from the children of ordinary men. Thus her pride was in his eyes "high spirit," her selfwill " decision of character," and when she showed talent or quickness of perception, the self-complacent comment of the parent was ever, "How much that child takes after me!" Jaspar, therefore, instead of showing any symptom of displeasure at Liberia's admiration for an uncle who held ideas so contrary to his own, only resolved by more than ordinary indulgence to make her forget her disappointment, and fix her gratitude upon himself. He must have his daughter's exclusive devotion, and this, Jaspar thought, could only Le secured by peculiar marks of affection.
"Liberia, my child," said Mr. Braburn, laying his hand caressingly on his daughter's shoulder, as they entered the porch, while Grace followed unnoticed and forgotten, "you are now of an age to know the value of a privilege reserved for my girl alone. In this cabinet"—they were now in the spacious saloon-"I keep what I regard as most precious. In this drawer, the silver key of which I now place in your hands, are some of my unpublished manuscripts; of them it would not become me to say more than that I have enshrined in them some of my favorite thoughts, and I believe that their perusal may afford some gratification to a mind like yours."

"O papa !" exclaimed Liberia, greatly flattered by this proof of confidence, "I shall delight, I am sure that I shall, in reading anything written by you!"

"And I will give you another, and a different token of my affection," said Braburn, looking fondly at the beaming countenance of his girl, as he drew from his finger a diamond ring of which Liberia had often admired the beauty. "This was your mother's, my child, and has never left my finger since I lost her; this shall now be yours," and tenderly the father placed the bright gem on the finger of the delighted Liberia.

"Oh! how can I thank you enough! how I shall prize my precious ring!" cried Liberia, embracing her parent again and again. Is it not beautiful?" she asked, turning with an air of triumph to Grace, and proudly holding out to her gaze the hand adorned with the diamond

"It is beautiful indeed," said Grace Vernon, "Ah! it will be a long time before any thing like that falls to your lot!" laughed Liberia; "you won't pick up jewels like that in the dirty cottages of the poor. While you are twirling your fingers to deaf Widow Welling, I shall be deep in the valuable papers—they are only for my eye, you know! How rich and happy I am, with an uncle so famous by his sword, and a father so glorious by his pen!"

"Rich and happy!" repeated Grace to herself, as she quitted the room and the dwelling; "yes, Liberia is rich and happy, while I am desolate and poor. She has a father to whom she is all-in-all, who can refuse her nothing, who looks npon her as if she were perfection; and I—I whose nature is so clinging, I have lost both the parents whom I loved so fondly; I have no one who cares for my happiness while I am living, or who would shed a tear for me if I were dead! Liberia's noble uncle, he spoke kindly to me to day, his words went so warm to my heart; but even he had a message of remembrance only for his niece, Grace Vernon was not worth a thought. Oh! why are joys so unequally given!—why are some pampered with every delight, while others are born to be neglected, pushed aside, trampled under foot! Is this the care of our Heavenly Father?"

The shadow of temptation was upon the soul of Grace. In the heart of the young girl, as in that of her step-father, was fixed the rankling tooth of the serpent, envy.

But here lay the difference between the man of the world and the child of God, however erring and weak: while the one fostered the secret foe, and the child of God, however are the control of the world and the child of God, however erring and weak: er shrank from it with self reproach and trace felt that in her thoughts there was ther spirit towards her fellow-creatures, a spirit towards God. She who sought the whole law of love, remembered that practise its difficult lessons! Why should I complain because Liberia has blessings which I do not enjoy-why should I indulge a wicked desire that her cup of pleasure should not be so full! What right have I to think myself one of the Lord's faithful band, when I have not that brotherly love which is the badge of his own? How unlike I am to Him who was all gentleness, meekness and love! How shall I bring into daily practice graces so contrary to my nature and I cannot be a real Christian without them. How often have I wondered at those words, "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not Charity, it profiteth me nothing!" see more of their meaning now. It would be harder for me to put away all malice and hatred and uncharitableness from my heart, than to do much and suffer much for the sake of my Heavenly King. The rebel within is more difficult to be conquered than the invader from without, and both must be opposed, both must be subdued, Oh! the battle is too hard for me-Lord! help Had Jaspar seen Gilbert in danger or distress, me! Give me the Holy Spirit, whose fruit is that good man say that in ourselves we are nothing, be Thou my righteousness and strength Make me more than conqueror, O Lord! for my trust is only in thee!" .

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 92 Chairman of the London Board.—Samuel Baker, Esq. Chairman in Liverpoot.—Charles Turner, Esq. The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest

Offices in the kingdom.
At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being.....£130,060

While the Premiums for the year 1658 are.... 196,148

Showing an actual increase of ......... 66,088 or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.

The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT. r upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.

fhe amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 8s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:— Years. No. of Policies. Sums Assured. New Premium

Assarced Rew Frenchms ### Assarced Rew F 1856 . 703 297,560 16 8 8,850 8 11 1858 . 832 887,752 6 8 12,854 3 4 The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 per cent. upon the premiums paid.

WOULD take this opportunity of returning thanks to their friends and customers who have bestowed their patronage on them during the past eighteen months they have been in business, and would inform them that owing to their increasing trade and the small accommoda. tion afforded to their customers, they have enlarged their Store to double its former size, and fitted up the department for Gent's Wear, which will be kept stocked with every description of BOOTS, in Cong. Opera, Balmoral, and Oxford styles. Fine French Calf Boots will be kept always on hand in great variety of style and measure, to suit all who will favor them with a call.

In the Ladies Department will be found an almost endless variety of BOOTS, in Kid and Serge, made in the latest and most approved styles, such as will gratify the taste, fit the foot, and be durable as well.

To their Wholesale Customers they would say that their Manufactory is now complete, having been fitted up the past winter with new machinery of the latest and most approved pattern, such as is now being used in the States, and having received large quantities of Stock, the best afforded by the English and French markets, they will conanorded by the English and Frence markets, they will con-tinue to add their long experience as manufacturers in su-perintending every branch of labor, and by employing experienced cutters and operatives, they are determined to manufacture a class of Goods that cannot be surpassed in style, quality and workmanship, and their facilities are such as to enable them to sell at such prices as will defy competition, and which cannot fail to prove satisfactory to all who will favor them with a call.

We wish our friends to bear in mind that if any Good made at this Establishment do not prove as recommendes they can be returned, and the money will be cheerfully refunded. may 4 - vp
