CHRISTIAN LOVE AND LOYALTY

A CONTRAST.

Charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.

OR. THE REBEL RECLAIMED.

Grace Vernon could dispense very well with the company of Liberia. Delightfully sped the time in the society of Lady Laurie, whose visit seemed only too short. The peeress gave her young niece a beautifully illustrated copy of Shakespeare, and a great many kind words and kind promises, which opened a new world of hope and pleasure to the lonely orphan. When the grand carriage had been driven away, Grace returned to the saloon in a state of dreamy de light, and lingered before a French mirror, longer than she had ever done before, to look at the "soft doves' eyes" now so radiant with pleasure, and the white intellectual brow, which was thought to be like her father's. Grace started and moved from the glass, on hearing the quick step of Lileria, who entered in a manner more rough and boisterous than usual,

So the fine dame has gone at last !" she ex-

"Oh! is she not charming and kind!" cried Grace; "see what a beautiful picture she has

"You don't mean to say that's for you! exclaimed Liberia, taking the well bound volume into her hands with anything but amiable feel-Laurie is so fond of pictures! She says that she will take me to London some day, and show me the galleries there."

"Take you to London!" echoed Liberia. Grace could not avoid seeing that her words had raised jealous emotion, and with a little pride and malice she took pleasure in increasing Liberia's pain.

"That is not all that she promised. Lady Laurie has a house at Windsor, not far from the Royal Castle; and she often goes there and sees the King and Queen walking on the terrace with their children. They sometimes invite her to the Castle, and treat her quite as a friend. Lady Laurie says that when I come to pay her a visit, she shall take me with her to the terrace, and introduce me to the Princess Sophia-and perhaps to the Queen herself! Only think, Liberia, only think, what a delight and honor that will

The mind of Grace had rambled on yet farther through the fields of pleasure opening before her; even the idea of being adopted by the peeress, cast its rainbow brightness over her prospects. Liberia had never seen her companion in such elevated spirits, and she determined to "bring her down.

"How easily your little head is turned!" she said, coldly; "I daresay that fine lady is lke many others, all polish outside and emptiness within. You don't suppose that she'll trouble herself farther about you-mere promises cost her nothing."

"What two delightful visitors we have had to-day !" exclaimed Grace; "Lady Laurie and Captain Braburn !"

"Don't same them together!" cried Liberia, her temper quite giving way; "don't compare a mere titled woman of fashion with the hero of the 'Anrora.' I would not give my glorious uncle for ten thousand of your furbelowed grandees! And this reminds me," she added, as if to break off the conversation at once, "that I have not yet fulfilled my promise-I'll look out Forty Different Bright Colours-and warranted that chapter and learn it directly." So saying, Liberia rose from her seat with such rough haste, that the flounce of her dress was torn by her chair. She stamped her foot on seeing the rent, with an exclamation of impatience.

How slight an incident will sometimes suffice the samples on the sample Cards.

"What childish vanity has been mine thought Grace; "how little have I of the Charity that vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up! I have been ready to murmur and complain at being neglected, and the first attentions that I receive are more than my foolish mind can bear. Envious one moment, and proud the next, I can well see now why God has denied me pleasures that would prove temptations. His wisdom has kept me in the shade, because I could not bear the sun-

Grace no sooner detected her own folly, than she took the simplest means of humbling her pride. She had been glorying over Liberia-she would now act as her servant.

"Wait a moment till I have threaded a needle, she said, "and I will soon mend that rent in your dress."

"I wonder how the great niece of Viscountess Laurie can dream of stooping to such an office!" cried Liberia, in an ironical tone: "to think of employing those lovely doves' eves, and talented fingers, in the work of a common drudge!"

Grace only smiled in reply; and the next minute she was down on her knees on the floor, busily repairing the flounce!

The action, trifling as it was, was the one best calculated to restore the good humor of Liberia. Her jealous pride had been roused by Lady Laurie's attentions to her companion, and yet more by the self-gratulation with which those attentions had been received.

Liberia could not endure to see, as she muttered to herself, "the clerk's daughter giving herself airs," because she was noticed by a lady who happened to be the bearer of a title. But when Liberia looked down and beheld the relative of a peeress at her feet, she felt that she could almost forgive Grace the crime of being the great-niece of Viscountess Laurie. Grace also was pleased, for in this trifle she had won a victory over herself. She had tried to exercise one of those graces which belong not to fallen nature—which are parts of that Christian love which vaunteth not itself, and is not puffed up.

AN EDUCATED HOUSEKEEPER'S VIEWS.

"What are you studying?" asked a young man of a friend who was taking her last year's schooling at an academy. The common branches, physiology, chemistry, rhetoric, and natural philosophy, was the reply. "What on earth will you do with such learning in farmer G——'s kitchen?' exclaimed he, naming a man to whom she was betrothed. "I'm afraid you'll find yourself so fitted for some other sphere that your education will be a discomfort rather than a woman can mix and heat up provision without knowing anything about it, but the art; but she can make better bread, butter, roast, broil, or boil more nicely, put this and that together in her puddings, pies and cakes with greater success, if she knows the why as well as the how. Then what is a poor, broken-down wife good for? Physiology teaches us how to keep health in the family; and then when we have all finished the day's work, having applied science all the way through, we shall want to look over the papers and books which tell what the rest of the world is thinking about; and then don't you see how nicely some little knowledge of belle letters and the law of mind will come in? A higher sphere, indeed!. If those who are so anxious to fill a large place would only take pains to make the place they are now in what it might be, depend upon it there would be more comfort and less complaint, both from themselves and those depending on them. I intend to try to elevate my work to my own level."

The answer given to this proved that the young lady possessed an educated mind as well as book learning. Said she, "How little you know about housekeeping. You talk as though it were like turning a grindstone, or walking on a treadmill, needing only plenty of muscle; and the less brains to make one easy, the better. Why, my mistaken young friend, there's more room for Balmoral, I Boots, Oxford ly, than you'll ever find in your with a bank and a grist-mill quires philosophy to properly clothes, sweep a room, ventilate gulate a clock, and a hundred you never dreamed of. Cooking hed on.

"Upon my word," said the young man, "you make out a pretty strong case. I never saw the matter in just that light before, and I doubt whether many women view it thus; and that such a good lesson may not be lost I'll send it to the 'American Agriculturalist,' and here, Mr. Editor, you have the story .- Am. The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest

Offices in the kingdom.

At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:— FIRE DEPARTMENT. The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunc fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being.....£180,060 While the Premiums for the year 1558 are.... 196,148 Showing an actual increase of.....

or upwards of 50 per cent, in three years. The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

fhe amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 882, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d:, and the premium £12,354 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus :— Years. No. of Policies. Sums Assured. New Prensiums £48,764 17 0 95,650 9 11 £1,380 9 1 . . 2.627 4 190
