HARVEST HYMN.

BY GRORGE D. PRESTICE.

At Carmel's mount the prophet laid His effering on the altar-stone, And fire descended from the skies, And round the holy altar shone; And thus, when spring went smiling past, Our offerings on the earth were cast, And Ged's own blessing has come down, Our sacrifice of faith to crown.

No conqueror o'er our fields has gone, To blast with war our summer bowers And stain with blood of woe and guiit The soil that gives life to the flowers; But morning dews and evening rain Have fallen on our beauteous plains, And earth, through all her realms abread, Gives back the image of her God.

Freighted with Autumn's richest tints, Each hill lifts up its head on high, And spreads its fruit and blossoms out, An offering meet beneath the sky; And hill and plain, and vale and grove, Join in the sacrifice of love; and wind and stream, and lake and sea. Lift high their hymns of ecstacy.

It is the festival of earth-The fiame of love o'er nature burns, And to the holy heavens goes up Like incense from a thousand urns; And oh, let man's impassioned voice, With Nature's self, in song rejoice, Until the blended notes of love Ring from the temple arch above.

The Bearl of Orr's Island

A Story of the Coast of Maine.

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Continued.

When the three arrived at the house, tea was waiting on the table for them. Mara fancied that Moses looked sad and preoccupied as they sat down to the teatable, which Mrs. Pennel had set forth festively, with the best china and the finest table-cloth and the choicest sweetmeats. In fact, Moses did feel that sort of tumult and upheaving of the soul which a young man experiences when the great crisis comes which is to plunge him into the struggles of manhood. It is a time when he wants sympathy and is grated upon by uncomprehending merriment, and therefore his answers to Sally grew brief and even harsh at times, and Mara sometimes perceived him looking at herself with a singular fixedness of expression, though he withdrew his eyes whenever she turned hers to look on him. Like many another little woman, she had fixed a theory about her friends, into which she was steadily interweaving all the facts she saw. Saily must love Moses, because she had known her from childhood as a good and affectionate girl, and it was impossible that she could have been going on with Moses as she had for the last six months without loving him. She must evidently have seen that he cared for her; and in how many ways had she shown that she liked his society and him! But then evidently she did not understand him, and Mara felt a little womanly selfpluming on the thought that she knew him so much better. She was resolved that she would talk with Sally about it, and show her that she was disappointing Moses and hurting his feelings. Yes, she said to herself, Sally has a kind heart, and her coquettish desire to conceal from him the extent of her affection ought now to give way to the outspoken tenderness of real

So Mara pressed Sally with the old-times request to stay and sleep with her; for these two, the only young girls in so lonely a neighborhood, had no means of excitement or dissipation beyond this occasional sleeping together-by which is meant, of course, lying awake all night talking.

When they were alone together in their chamber. Sally let down her long black hair, and stood with her back to Mara brushing it. Mara sat looking out of the table. It is not one time in a hundred window, where the moon was making a wide sheet of silver-sparkling water. Everything was so quiet that the restless dash of the tide could be plainly heard. Sally was rattling away with her usual gaiety. .

next Thursday. What will you wear?"

"Well, I shall try and finish my blue merino for the occasion. What fun it will perfectly splendid!"

"But does n't it sometimes seem sad to to be gone so long?"

"What do I care?" said Sally, tossing back her long hair as she brushed it, and then stopping to examine one of her eyelashes. "Sally dear, you often speak in that way," said Mara, " but really and seriously, you do yourself great injustice. You could not certainly have been going on as you have these six months past with a man you did not care for." "Well I do care for him, sort o'

said Sally, " but is that any reason I should break my heart for his going ?-that's too much for any man."

" But, Sally, you must know that Moses leves you."

"I'm not so sure," said Sally, freakish-as I know they must sometime love some one better than they do me."

The most practised self-control must fail some time, and Mara's voice faltered on these last words, and she put her hands over her eyes. Sally turned quickly and looked at her, then giving her hair a sud-den fold round her shoulders, and running to her friend, she kneeled down on the floor by her, and put her arms round her waist, and looked up into her face with an air of more gravity than she commonly used. "Now, Mara, what a wicked inconsistent fool I have been! Did you feel lonesome ?-did you care? I ought to have seen that; but I'm selfish, I love admiration, and I love to have some one to flatter me, and run after me; and so I've been going on and on in this silly way. But I did n't know you cared-indeed, I did n't -you are such a deep little thing. Nobody can ever tell what you feel. I never shall forgive myself, if you have been lone some, for you are worth five hundred times as much as I am. You really do love Moses. I don't."

"I do love him as a dear brother," said

Mara. "Dear fiddlestick," said Sally. "Love is love, and when a person loves all she can, it isn't much use to talk so. I've been a wicked sinner that I have. Love? Do you suppose that I would bear with Moses Pennel all his ins and outs and ups and downs, and be always putting him before myself in everything, as you do? No. I could n't; I have n't it in me; but you have. He's a sinner, too, and deserves to get me for a wife. But, Mara, I've tormented him well-there's some comfort in that."

"It's no comfort to me," said Mara. I see his heart is set on you-the happiness of his life depends on you-and he is pained and hurt when you give him only cold, trifling words when he needs real true love. It is a serious thing, dear, to have a strong man set his whole heart on you. It will do him a great good or a great evil, and you ought not to make light of it."

"Oh, pshaw, Mara, you don't know hese fellows, they are only playing games with us. If they once catch us, they have no mercy, and for one here's a child that is n't going to be caught. I can see plain enough that Moses Pennel has been trying to get me in love with him, but he does n't love me. No, he does n't," said Sally, reflectively. "He only wants to make a conquest of me, and I'm just the same. want to make a conquest of him,-at least I have been wanting to,—but now I see it's a false, wicked kind of way to do as we've been doing."

"And is it really possible, Sally, that you den't love him?" said Mara, her large serious eyes looking into Sally's. What! be with him so much,—seem to like him so much.-look at him as I have seen you do,-and not love him !"

"I can't help my eyes, they will look so," said Sally, hiding her face in Mara's lap with a sort of coquettish consciousness. "I tell you I've been silly and wicked, but ne's just the same exactly." "And you have worn his ring all sum-

"Yes, and he has worn mine; and l have a lock of his hair, and he has a lock of mine; yet I don't believe he cares for them a bit. Oh, his heart is safe enough. If he has any, it is n't with me; that I know.

"But if you found it were, Sally? Suppose you found that after all, you were the one love and hope of his life; that all he was doing and thinking was for you; that he was laboring, and toiling, and leaving home, so that he might some day offer you a heart and home, and be your best friend for life? Perhaps he dares not tell you how he really does feel."

COOKING TOMATOES.

This delicious, wholesome vegetable, is spoiled by the manner it is served upon the more than half cooked; it is simply scalded, and served as sour porridge. It should be cooked three honrs-it cannot be cooked in one. The fruit should be cut in halves, and the seeds scraped out. The mucilage "And so the launching is to come off of the pulp may be saved, if desired, by straining out the seeds, and adding it to "I'm sure I have n't thought," said the fruit, which should boil rapidly for an hour, and simmer three hours more, until the water is dissolved, and the contents of the saucepan a pulp of mucilaginous matbe! I never was on a ship when it was ter, which is much improved by putting in launched, and I think it will be something the pan, either before putting in the fruit, or while it was cooking, an ounce of butter and half a pound of fat bacon cut fine, think that after all this Moses will leave us to half a peck of tomatoes, and a small pepperpod, with salt to suit the taste. The fat adds a pleasant flavor, and makes the dish actual food, instead of a mere relish. The pan must be carefully watched, and but little fire used, and the mass stirred often to prevent burning towards the last, when the water is nearly evaporated. The dish may be rendered still more attractive and rich as food, by breaking in two or three eggs and stirring vigorously, just enough to allow the eggs to become well > cooked. Tomatoes thoroughly cooked, may be put in tight cans and kept any length of time; or the pulp may be spread upon plates and dried in the sun or a slow oven, and kept as well as dried pumpkin, dried
