

Up the Ladder; or, Striving and Thriving. (Continued.) CHAPTER VIII. HARRISON LEAVING SCHOOL.

"The Lord ... , blesseth the habitation of the just."

Though we had made rather a long digression, yet we think, the reader will be interested to know more of the family in which our hero was to reside.

As his children grew up Mr. Cowles endeavored to instil into their minds the principles which had governed his own life.

One evening, Warren, the oldest boy, was her bed side. trying to write a composition. He had finished his caption, and was leaning his head on his hand, puzzling his brain as to how he should be-His father came and looked over his gin. shoulder, and read, "Honesty is the best policy."

"Honesty is the only policy, for the matter of that," he exclaimed. "If you had seen as many persons as I have, try to work by some other, and try cheating or lying as the best policy, you'd be convinced they had no policy at all. Men don't want to be fooled more than once. When they see you have overreached them, they are shy of you ever afterwards. Or, if you are skilful at the business, and they don't find you out for a little, why then it's so much the worse for you; for you're just clapped into jail, and there's the end of your story." "But, after all," continued the old man, "policy is neither here nor there. Policy isn't the rule we're required to go by. We've a higher rule than that. We've the plain com-mands of God, right up and down. You can't leap over them nor crawl under them. There they are, and there they'll stand, strong as the everlasting hills."

Mr. Cowles, in his earnestness, had arisen, and was walking back and forth across the room.

"I wish you wouldn't say it so fast, father." called the boy ; "I can't write half of it."

The mother smiled ; but the father turned to his son and asked, "What are you doing, Warren?"

"Writing a composition, sir."

"And what shall you do with it when it is done !"

"Write my name at the bottom, sir, and give it to the master."

"Write mine, you mean, my boy. Don't you see that if you write down what I say, it will be my composition, not yours; and the master wont thank you for the job of correcting mine, I reckon. No, Warren, that's downright cheating, though I don't suppose you thought it."

"Come, boy !" said he, as the child began to cry, "there's no harm done yet. You're welcome to all my ideas, only put 'em into your own words. Isn't that it, wife ?"

In this way, and under such discipline, Mary Jane, Warren, and John grew up to be an honor to their parents, and a blessing to all connected with them.

These worthy persons first formed the acquaintance of Mrs. Danforth at the time of her sore affliction. Mr. Cowles was one of the committee of the church to attend to similar cases of distress, and his kind consideration for her at that season had won her entire confidence and grati-tude. They were, therefore, the first persons to whom she applied for advice, after leaving the base value of the following -Queen's Boquet, Prince of Wales, Jockey Club, Bridal Souvenir, West End, Spring Flowers, Frangipanni, Patcould not shake off the fear that his beloved mother was to be removed from him by death. Fortunate, indeed, was Mrs. Danforth, to be HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. placed in the midst of such kind friends. Everything was done for her comfort as tenderly and cheerfully as if she had been a mother or a sister. Then, Harrison seemed suddenly gifted with the skill and experience in nursing for which his mother had been so distinguished. He could scarcely be persuaded to go from the room, and never left her to sleep. He lay upon a couch at her side, and at her slightest call was on his feet, wide awake, ready to administer to her comfort. Ladies whom she had nursed constantly sent baskets of provisions-dainty little dishes to tempt her appetite --- while others came in person to inquire for her, and to sit for a few hours by house of Mrs. Haven, and it was with great willingness that they consented to her proposal to take Harrison into their family.

John Cowles was nearly Harrison's age, but not as far advanced in his studies. This the latter much regretted, as he had just commenced algebra, and found it taxed his intellectual powers to the utmost. Several times he was on the point of asking to be excused from this lesson, but the thought that his mother would be disappointed checked him. He knew if he were to ask her consent to this course, and tell her. "I can't understand it, mother," she would say as she had often said before, "I know you don't, my dear. If you did, it would be unnecessary for you to attend school. That is the very object you go to school for, to learn to understand it."

Sometimes, however, Harrison puzzled a long time over the sum, because he did not understand the principle involved. Then Warren would come to his assistance, and explain the rule by which the result could be gained.

One special advantage which the boy derived from being in this family, was the privilege of attending, with his young friends, a course of public lectures on scientific subjects. While Mr. Cowles was exceedingly strict about many things, which he considered of hurtful, or even of doubtful tendency, he spared no expense within his means to afford them gratification in what he thought would be of permanent benefit. He even allowed them many innocent amusements. fect fits warranted. Since he had been able, he had, every year, hired a substantial carriage and taken his entire country. These were occasions of jubilee to the reprinted household Mr. Cowles often said he oct 21.--vwpi Apothecaries' Hall, King Square. reunited household. Mr. Cowles often said he went back to the city strengthened for any duty after feeling his mother's trembling hand resting on his head, while she pronounced her fervent blessing.

It was Harrison's duty in this well-ordered family to cut kindlings, carry coal, go to market, sweep the steps and side-walk, or perform any of those multitudinous duties always necessary in a family of six. These services had formerly been rendered by John, who now assisted his father at the store.

In order to have time for a morning review of his lesson, our hero arose early, so as to get through as much of his work as possible before breakfast. Then he was by no means unmindful of his personal appearance; and he liked to rub the door-plate, sweep and scrub the steps before he should be likely to be recognized by any of his acquaintance who might chance to pass. Then he could dress for school, and go to market habited like a gentleman. When Mrs. Danforth first noticed this trait in her son, she was much distressed by it. She knew that he must be aware that he was uncommonly attractive in his appearance, but she did not wish him to attach any importance to the fact. She feared that he might be led on by it, as his father had been, to consider honest labor beneath him. Yes, as she reflected more upon the subject, she could see that of late Harrison had appeared less humble, more proud and selfreliant. She prayed earnestly that God would protect her boy from sin, that he might see the folly of attaching importance to mere outward appearance, and that his heart might be kept pure and humble like that of a child.

Perhaps the peculiar circumstances of her own lot made her over sensitive on this point; cer-tainly it is a duty to be neat and tasteful in dress, if we do not devote too much time and thought

Collated and edited by B. F. EDMANDS, Esq.

The PSAIMIST is unquestionably the best collection of Hymns or public worship in the English language. It was originally pre-ared with great care and expense. It was edited by brethren wledged poetical taste, doctrinal soundness and pas-nee qualified them preëminently for the work. The toral experience qualified them preiminently for the work. The hymns were also submitted for critical examination and revision to a large Committee, composed of pastors and literary men of distinc-tion in every section of the Union, to whose judicious labors the work owes much of its remarkable perfection. It has been wel-comed by pastors and churches everywhere as the best book for while every blue action blue her book for public worship ever published.

public worship ever published. Such has been its unparalleled popularity that it may now be said to have become fue sook of the BAPTIST DENOMINATION, being almost universally used in the churches throughout the United States and also in the British Provinces. It contains nearly THIRTERN HUMPERD HYMES, about one-fourth of which are by Watts. Among the other prominent authors, will be found Dodd-ridge. Steele, Montgomery, Cowper, Kelly, Newton, Wealey, Top-lady, Heber, Barbauld, Bowring, Sigourney, Scott, Hemans, etc. etc., numbering in all nearly three hundred different authors? The whole field of English sacred literature has been explored, and the choicest appropriate productions culled, to form this admirable collection. Pastors in Boston and vicinity, in New York and Philadelphia, Professors in the various Theological Seminaries, and a great num-ber of Clergymen, of Churches, Associations and Conventions, in every State of the Union, have, unsolicited, given their most un-qualified testimony to the high character of this work. Among the vast number of testimonials which might be given, -- sufficient, in all, to form a good-sized volume, -- is the following: --REV. GEORGE B. INE, D. D., says of the work, with character REV. GEORGE B. IDE, D. D., says of the work, with characteristic energy of thought and beauty of expression, " Such another collec-tion of hymns for public worship, so beautiful in its execution, so natural, clear, and perfect in its arrangement, so varied, copious, and appropriate in its list of subjects, so lyrical in its structure, so devotional in its spirit, so exciptural in its sentiments, so sweet, pure, and elevated in its poetry. I do not believe the world can fur-nish, and I am certain the English language cannot! It is a work, in every respect, of such surpassing excellence as to leave nothing in its department to be desired." This strong, emphatic language of Dr. Ide has been fully an in its department to be desired." This strong, emphatic language of Dr. Ide has been fully ap-proved and endorsed by Dr. Hague, Dr. Brantley, and other eler-grmen of note. Candid judges of other denominations have commended the Paslmiat as having no superior, if any equal, in character and fit-ness for public workhip. The Paalmist, with Music, involving a large outlay of time ness for public worship. THE PSALMIST, WITH MUSIC, involving a large outlay of time and money, was undertaken to meet the growing desire on the part of many churches to adopt CONGREGATIONAL SINGING. This Manual embraces ALL THE HYANS OF THE PALLENST, with one or more tunes adapted to each hymn. The tunes have been selected, with great cars and rare judgment, by H. F. En-MANDS, Esq., a gentleman of fine musical tasks, a chorister for many years in one of our largest churches, and an active manager of several of our leading musical sociation. They are chicfly taken from the approved standard tunes, whose long use and popularity in the ohurches attest their fitness for congregational singlay. The convenient size of the Manual, its cheapness, its judicious arrange-ment, as well as its ADMIRALES SELECTION OF TUNES, give it im-portant advantages over every other Manual for public worship. Churches aircady using the Pasimist—which is almost universal — can introduce this new edition, wirth MUSIC, at very trilling expense. No change of books will be reguired for those who de not join in the singing. The numbering of Ayana is the same in all editions, and the full and perfect LYDEXES enable minister or people to refer from one edition to the other without difficulty. Only those who wish to sing, and to have the tunes before them, will need the new edition with Music, and the great expense inci-

Only those who wish to sing, and to have the tunes before them, will need the new edition with Music, and the great expense inci-dent to an entire change of hymn-books will thus be avoided. 32 All the various editions are now printed from new, clear, handsome electrotype plates, on good paper, and bound in a great variety of styles, in the most substantial manner. And although, in consequence of the unparalleled advance in paper and all other book materials, the price has of necessity been somewhat advanced, it is still the cheapest work of the kind published.
