The Fenian Quarrel. If we are to accept the opinions of the Examiner and Chronicle, the days of Fenianism are numbered. Our esteemed contemporary speaking on this subject,

The most amusing event of the past week was the quarrel between the "Fenian Senate" and their President, Mr. O'Mahony. Instead of fighting England, or invading Canada, and still spoiling for a fight, they have fallen out among themselves, and by mutual criminations justify all that was ever said against them by their severest critics. In spite of the warnings of the press, these fellows had gathered, it is said, over a million of dollars into their treasury, by the sale of their bonds;" and as it was evident that this fund would never be used for warlike purposes, the disposal of it became a matter of some interest to the parties concerned. President O'Mahony and his assistants had it all in their own way for a time. But, after allowing them full swing for several weeks, long enough to dispose of an immense amount of Fenian obligations, the "Senate" passes resolutions declaring that the present issue of the bonds of the Irish Republic is "invalid and illegal," and a "fraud on the organization." "President O'Mahony "rejoined by denouncing the "Senate" as "dishonest persons," and "enemies of the Fenian Brotherhood." To this manifesto the "Senate" replies by impeaching and unseating O'Mahony, and calling a new Convention of the order.

We think this ridiculous farce must now be about played out. The utter failure of the attempt to create a revolution in Ireland, combined with the quarrel between the President and the Senate of the Order in this country, must convince even the Irish that the "Emerald Isle" has nothing to hope for from their efforts. But we question whether the authorities ought not to interpose at once, and close up the concern. The dismal joke has been carried quite far enough. An "Irish Republic" has no right to exist, even in name, in this country; and it is not only an absurdity but a source of dauger. Any number of annoying complications with Great Britain may arise from permitting them to carry on their scheme. The act of raising money to assist in revolutionizing Ireland may be very laudable in an Irishman, but it is an offence against our laws, and ought too, should be subjected to rigid scrutiny; and if it Frazer's River to connect with the Russian line. be true, as they say of each other, that money has been procured on false pretences, let them be punish us into a war with England; but permitting the Order to have any foothold here at all must be a source of vexation and embarrassment to the Government in its negotiations with that country. The nuisance ought to be abated without delay.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The Watchman and Reflector, a very judicious paper, says of this important document that-

"No message, for many years, has given such general satisfaction to the nation. All parties, in all sections of the country, unite in awarding to it the merit of eminent ability, honesty and directness. It deals frankly and plainly with all the great questions at issue, and those who differ most widely must respect the sincerity of the President, and his singleness of purpose to promote the national interests.

Christians will recognize gratefully the religious spirit of the document. It breathes a Christian tone throughout, acknowledging the judgments that have fallen on us as a people to be from God, and our deliverance also to be due to His mercy. The President confesses his own need of enlightenment and guidance from a Divine power, and his responsibility to the Ruler of nations.

In regard to the re-admission of the rebel States. and the guaranties of protection to the freedmen, the President does not take so high ground as a majority of Northern men could wish. But he is frank in the expression of his views, and remands the whole subject to Congress, as the court of arbitrament, by whose decision these great question must be settled. With the known sentiments of the majority in Congress, backed by public opinion as expressed in the late elections, we imagine no fear need be cherished of a hasty or injudicious adjustment. " Hasten slowly" is the spirit of the country, and this will direct the legislation at Washington.

With this exception the views of the President will receive a general endorsement at the North. They are wise, manly and patriotic."
