THE ANGELS IN THE HOUSE.

Three pairs of dimpled arms, as white as snow,
Held me in soft embrace;
Three little cheeks like velvet peaches soft,
Were placed against my face.

Three pairs of tiny eyes so clear, so deep,
Looked up in mine this even;
Three pairs of lips kissed me a sweet "good night,"
Three little forms from heaven.

Ah! it is well that "little ones" should love us
It lights our faith when dim,
To know that once our blessed Saviour bade them
Bring "little ones" to him.

And said he not "Of such is heaven," and blessed them,
And held them to his breast?
Is it not sweet to know that when they leave us
'Tis then they go to rest?

And yet, ye tiny angels of my house,
Three hearts encased in mine,
How 'twould be shattered if the Lord should say
"Those angels are not thine!"

THE HAPPY FAMILY.

George was in the High School. One day, after he had learned his lessons, he took out the Bible and began to read it. His next neighbor leaned over and asked him "if he was going to be a parson." He did so several days, and the boys laughed and called him "serious." That is one way the devil takes to hinder the young from thinking of their souls. He sets their companions to make fun of them, and he tries to make them afraid of it. But it did not make George afraid.

"I am serious," he said. "I feel I have heaven to gain and hell to shun, and I feel anxious about it." The boys looked sober at that, and never said any thing more.

George heard a sermon upon this subject: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve," and he saw several persons choosing. Stanley Miles chose; Robert Sharon chose; yes, and many others had chosen to serve God. George thought he ought to choose. He wanted to be a Christian; he wanted to find his Saviour.

"How do you feel, George?" asked his minister, when he went to see him.

"I feel, sir," said George, "as if seeking after something I've lost; and I want above all things to find it."

George in fact was lost. That is the way the Bible speaks of us. It tell us we are lost; and it says the Lord Jesus "came to save that which was lost." George was beginning to feel this, and he was seeking that very Saviour. His soul was reaching out after God. And as God promises every soul that seeks shall find, George set himself in earnest about finding what his soul needed—a Redeemer from his sins, a Helper to the right.

In reading his Bible, George found this prayer of good king David: "Mine eyes are unto Thee, O God my Lord; in Thee is my trust; leave not my soul destitute;" and he made it his prayer. He liked the words. It spoke for him, he said. His minister prayed with him, his Sabbath-school teacher prayed with him, and his mother prayed with him; but he did not find.

A holiday came. A party of boys were going to the sea-side, and they came and asked George to go with them. His aunt told him to go. His mother said, "Let George do as he thinks best. George thought it was not best. "I cannot go, mother," said he, "until I have found God." So he stayed at home. It was a beautiful morning. He got up early and went into the barn. Falling down on his knees, he cried, "Mine eyes are unto Thee, O God my Lord; in Thee is my trust; leave not my soul destitute." When he drove the cows to pasture, he knelt down on a rock and there called upon God. George felt he could not take No for an answer. Like Jacob of old, he wrestled with God for a blessing. In the forenoon George went to walk alone. When he came home his mother was in the door. "Mother," he said, "mother, mother, everything looks so beautiful. I see God everywhere and in every thing, mother," said he. "I know I have found Him;" and a sweet, soft grateful, happy look spread over his whole face. It was indeed the look of one who had found "the pearl of great price." The next day he said, "O mother, I have got it. I have got forgiveness, and love, and comfort, and all that my soul needed. If this is religion, why does not everybody try for it? for they that seek shall find, and I know it."

What George found then he has never lost. More and more he finds "it better than riches; and all things that may be desired are not to be compared to it."

THE TWIN PRECEPTS.

Mr. Wordsworth was an intelligent Christian farmer of some means, and with his gentle wife, sought to bring up their children wisely and well. He had been a teacher, and, accustomed to enforce a strict discipline in school, was unconsciously too stern and exacting in the government of his family. The three eldest were good, obedient children; this was true, also, of the fourth child until about fifteen, when a strange perverseness came over him. He was a noble-looking, manly boy, of large frame and great physical strength, the pride of the neighborhood, and efficient in whatever he attempted to do. Of late, his will had risen in strong opposition to his father's, and he boldly determined to submit no longer to the paternal control which had become a servile yoke. The father relaxed not his commands, and expected to conquer the rebellious spirit of the son, if need be by force. An opportunity soon presented itself in some act of disobedience. The son was unyielding. The father decided to administer corporal punishment.

"Take off your coat, sir!" said he, in a tone not to be mistaken.

The son, now grown to be as tall as his sire, stood with folded arms, his full, dark eye flashing defiance.

"Take off your coat, sir!" repeated Mr. Wordsworth. Arthur still stood gazing at his father with a hard, daring, passionate look, ominous of serious trouble. The mother was in the door of the room, and feared she knew not what. Would Arthur be provoked to strike his own father? Would he scorn his authority and forsake home and wander in paths of sin as other angered, hardened children had done? She was a woman of ready tact, and stepping quickly in, interposed between the irate father and wrathful son.

"Your father tells you to take off your coat, my son," said she smoothly, "surely, you can do so small a thing as that."

"Of course," replied he, softened, "if that is all, I can take off my coat; it was a flogging to which I objected!" and off went the coat, and the father, willing to let the matter pass, accepted the half-way submission brought about by the influence of the mother.

But the trouble was not all over. One day soon after Arthur had shown his spirit of insubordination, his little brother came in from the hay-field, for it was in summer time, and complained that Arthur had hung his scythe on a tree and gone fishing.

"Gone fishing!" exclaimed Mrs. Wordsworth, in alarm. "Who did he go with, my son?"

"Mr. Baker's boys came along with their gun and fishing tackle, and he went right off," said little Henry.

"Gone with Mr. Baker's boys!" repeated Mr. Wordsworth, as he heard the evil tidings! "I would not have him go on any account. What could induce him to take such a course?"

The parents were plunged in perplexity and grief by this strange conduct of their boy. But the late scene had taught a lesson, and, as was their wont in affliction, they betook themselves to prayer. They wept and prayed together, and all through that sorrowful day humbled themselves before the Lord, and earnestly sought his favor. It was late at night when the truant returned; they said little, and suffered him to go to bed without reproaches.

"God must reach him, we cannot," said his mother. "I devoted him to God from his birth, and surely the Lord is a covenant-keeping God."

As for the father, he could not sleep, for sorrow of heart; he feared, too, that his stern treatment of his son, had brought about this reaction, and that never again would he render him willing obedience.

The prospect was indeed dark. From disregard to his father's authority, Arthur grew to have a distaste for industry. Home and its restraints were irksome; farm-work was unendurable; the once smart, ambitious, energetic boy liked to idle away his time, or spend his hours with a rough gang of boys who scourged the place. The father and mother saw that he was only irritated by expostulation, and that punishment provoked the evil.

What could they do? They treated him kindly, made home as attractive as possible, and constantly prayed God to interfere. But their faith was tried when, instead of any visible answer to their prayers, he again left the field work, and in the most critical time, when it was all important that the hay be housed, as rain was coming on. His father was at work with him; both were getting the hay ready for the cart, when Arthur seeing a waggon load of his companions drive up, threw down his rake and joined them. The father, in speechless grief, went on with his labor. Was this an answer to prayer? Would God permit his son to go to ruin before the father's eyes, in face of his strong crying and tears?

That evening, as the burdened father and mother went to the mercy-seat with their sorrow, a new thought struck them. Said the wife,—

"Something decided must be done to get Arthur away from the evil associates who are leading him to destruction."

Mr. Wordsworth assented, and asked if she could think of any plan. She could not.

"Work is drudgery to Arthur now," said she; "suppose we send him to S—— to school. It would be a pleasant change to him, and give him fine advantages. The religious influence also, is good there. It may be that God will hear us and bless Arthur, for it is a present sacrifice to spare him from the farm-work."

Mrs. Wordsworth readily agreed to the project, and, by dint of great industry and late nights, she had Arthur's wardrobe ready, and, as a new term was commencing, the father accompanied his son to the seminary, fifteen miles distant, and putting him in charge of the teachers, bade him a loving farewell.

Two weeks had passed, and Mr. and Mrs. Wordsworth were sitting by their cheerful fireside after their children were quietly in bed. The mother was busy with her needle, while the father read aloud from the weekly paper. They heard the click of the gate, a quick tread, and the door opened, and to their surprise, Arthur stood before them.

"Oh, mother," cried he, his face pale with emotion, "I've come home to ask you and father to forgive me for being so wicked and disobedient."

"Welcome, my son!" replied the father, with choked utterance.

"Can you forgive me, father?" said the penitent, humble son,—"can you forgive me?"

"With all my heart, Arthur; but I want you to pray for God to forgive you!"

"I have, father, and I hope he has. I believe he has forgiven my sins, and if only you can forgvie me, I shall be happy!"

Arthur, a true penitent, had walked home fifteen miles that day after school, to make his confession. It was a joyful hour in the house of the Wordsworth's. God had heard prayer. The perplexity and sorrow of the parents were turned into gladness. They saw that God was faithful to his promises.

"And," said Mr. Wordsworth, narrating the happy event, "I saw how blessed it is to remember all of God's commandments. I had for years thought only of this one addressed to my child, 'Honor thy father and thy mother,' but had forgotten that other which God has joined to it, 'And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, lest they be discouraged.'"—Home Monthly.

Warnes' Imperial ONGUENT, for Bald Heads and Bare Faces.

Behold I bring glad tidings of great joy,
To every bald man and beardless boy—
Yea, to all old women and maidens fair,
Who—by whatever cause—have lost their hair.

THE ONGUENT, or Stimulator, the great discovery of the celebrated Doctor J. E. McNeir, is universally acknowledged to be as far ahead of all other preparations before the public for making the WHISKERS, MOUSTACHES, or HAIR grow luxuriantly, as if by magic—as day is ahead of night, for the ordinary toil of man. For the truth of this assertion, I do not merely ask you to take my word, but shall furnish the most satisfactory proof.

That in order to controul the trade and check most of the impositions heretofore practised, I have procured the receipts for making all preparations pretending to make Hair grow before the public, and can certify that the Onguent contains five times the forcing power of all the other preparations put together.

The Onguent is perfectly harmless, and will not stain or injure the Skin, and will force the Hair to Grow on Bald Heads from eight to ten weeks, and Whiskers in six weeks.

TIMOTHY SEED.—96 Bushels Timothy Seed, for sale.
may 25. T. B. BARKER.

The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the matter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening, health restorer ever discovered. It requires but a single trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied upon. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover Buds, Orange Peel, Snake Root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock.

S.—T.—1860—X. &c.

They are especially recommended to clergymen, public speakers, and persons of literary habits and sedentary life, who require free digestion, a relish for food, and clear mental faculties.

Delicate females and weak persons are certain to find in these Bitters what they have so long looked for.

They purify, strengthen, and invigorate.
They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome the effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.
They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers.
They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.
They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.
They cure Diarrhœa, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.
They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.
They are the best Bitters in the world. They make the weak man strong, and are exhausted nature's great restorer.

The following startling and emphatic statements can be seen at our office:—

Letter of Rev. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain of the 107th New York Regiment:

Near Acquia Creek, March 4, 1863.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa.:

Gentlemen—You were kind enough, on a former occasion, to send me half a dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3.50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles more for the money enclosed.

I am very truly yours, N. E. GILDS,
Pastor Ger. Ref. Church.

Soldiers' Home, Superintendent's Office,
Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15th, 1863.
* * * * * * *

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvellous and gratifying.

Such a preparation as this I heartily wish in every family, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field.

G. W. D. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the 10th Vermont Regiment, writes: "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."

Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C., May 22, 1863.

Gentlemen—We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house.

Respectfully, SYKES, CHADWICK & Co.

PROSPECTUS.
THE PATRIARCH OF WESTERN NOVA SCOTIA!

MEMORIALS of the Life and Times of the late Rev. Harris Harding, of Yarmouth, N. S., prepared by the Rev. JOHN DAVIS, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., with an Introductory Notice by J. W. Nutting, Esq., of Halifax; accompanied by a Portrait of Mr. Harding, with other Pictorial Illustrations.

Subscription—$1, due on delivery.

Two of the Nova Scotia Baptist Associations have recommended the publication of the above work. It will, therefore, be put to press as soon as subscriptions have been obtained for 500 copies, of which more than one half have been already secured.

The work will comprise sketches of the religious history of Western Nova Scotia before the days of Mr. Harding. It will supply details of Mr. Harding's personal life, labors, and usefulness. Mr. Nutting's Introductory Notice will relate to the religious condition of Nova Scotia generally, to the revival of religion which commenced towards the close of the last century, and to some of the leading agents in that revival.

A copious Appendix will be subjoined. This will be illustrative of persons and events introduced into the work, and include a selection from Mr. Harding's correspondence, giving letters written by him some 70 years ago.

The Pictorial Embellishments will add to the interest of the work. The whole will be neatly got up, and will supply, it is hoped, a valuable contribution to the religious history of Nova Scotia, more especially in connection with the Baptist denomination.

The work will be published by subscription, in order to protect its compiler from pecuniary loss in his enterprise. So large a proportion of the amount required for this purpose having been already secured, the issue of the work may be expected in the course of the current year.
