I AM NO WORSE THAN MY NEIGHBOURS.

Willie Thorn had been reading in his Sundayschool the first part of the fifth chapter of St. Luke. The young pupils had listened to the history of the Saviour's entering the boat of St. Peter, and commanding him to let down his nets for a draught. They had heard that so great a multitude of fishes had then been taken, after a night in which the fishermen had "toiled and caught nothing," that Peter, surprised and alarmed, fell down at the feet of Jesus, and cried, "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord !" Willie paused in his reading, and turned to the boys. "Harry," said he to one of them, "can that Peter was worse than other men?" " Oh, no, sir !" replied the child. " Roger Bond," said Willie Thorn, addressing another boy, "do you believe that you are a sinner ?" Roger hesitated, half smiled, and replied, " I am no worse than my neighbours!" "That is a dangerous sentence, my boy; that thought has, I fear, led many to destruction. When the flood came and drowned the whole world, the waters must have rolled over many who could have said. "I am no worse than my neighbours." When God rained fire from heaven upon Sodom, how many must have perished in the flame who could have cried out with truth, "I am no worse than my neighbours!" Do you think that when you die you will go to heaven?" "I hope so, sir !" " And why do you think that you will?"

Roger looked perplexed, and knew not what to "I suppose," said the teacher, "that you are afraid to repeat, 'Because I am no worse than

"Well," answered Roger, more boldly, "I try to do my best; and I dare say that I shall reach heaven at last!"

my neighbours.'

"This is by far too important a matter for us to be content with the words, 'I dare say.' Suppose, now, the case of a man obliged to take refuge in a cave, half way up a steep high rock, which he can only reach by a ladder. His fierce enemies are pursuing him, wild beasts are lurking in the thicket around, his life depends upon his ladder,-will he rest satisfied with the thought, 'I dare say that it is long enough and strong enough to save me?" "Oh, no?" cried all the boys at once.

"And suppose, when he reaches the rock, and hears the shout of the enemy, or the roar of a lion behind him, he should find that his ladder is not half high enough to reach the cave, and that every step in it is broken!" "Poor miserable man!" exclaimed Roger:

" he will be lost to a certainty!" "Such is exactly the case of every one who hopes to go to heaven only because he is no worse than his neighbours!" "I see what you mean, sir," cried Philip, a quick, intelligent boy; "by the ladder you mean our goodness. We can never go up to heaven only by that,-it is not high enough. But 1 don't know what you intend by saying that every step in the ladder is broken!

That every one of us here has broken God's laws over and over again: that not a step in our ladders is whole.'

"I don't see that," said Roger : "I know that I have not always been very particular about keeping Sunday; but I don't remember anything else that I have done wrong: I never stole a

"Have you never coveted what did not belong to you? God counts sins of thought as well as of deed. I fear that step in your ladder is broken." "I never committed murder," said Roger.

"Have you never been augry with your brother without a cause? The Bible tells us, that he that hateth his brother is a murderer." "Then, I am sure," cried Philip, "that step in my ladder is broken !" "Then," continued Willie, "only think of the sins of the tongue! It is written, 'Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment!' (Matt.

xii. 36.) Which of us, some time or other,nay, every day of our lives, -is not guilty of evilspeaking or lying, or taking God's holy name in vain; talking angrily, or foolishly, or falsely?" "O sir, that step in the ladder is broken with every one of us!" exclaimed Philip.
"To sum up all in a few words," said Willie Thorn: "we are commanded to love God with all our heart, and with all our strength, and our neighbour as ourselves; - which of us does this?" I am afraid none of us," replied Roger. "We shall be in a sad state if we trust to our ladders to reach heaven!" cried Philip. "But must we all be lost, then?" inquired Tom

"Suppose," replied the teacher, "that the poor man, pursued by his cruel enemy, finding his ladder broken and short, expecting nothing but destruction, raises his eyes in despair to the place of safety which he connect reach by himself, and sees a rope let down to him by a friend from

"Oh, how he would seize it !" cried the boys. "Such is the hope of heaven held out to us by the Lord Jesus Christ. He saw our danger; he knew our utter helplessness; he bore our punishment : he died for our sins! Now, to those who believe in him, he holds out the means of safety. Will any one be so mad as to refuse it?" "I do not quite understand," said Roger.

"You see that we are sinners, and cannot reach heaven by our own goodness?"

"Yes, I see that now."
"Christ died to save sinners; he freely offers heaven to all who do not turn away from his mercy; he draws their hearts up to himself. But they cannot remain in wilful sin and be safe. The man cannot remain on the ground, and think himself secure from his pursuers, merely because he sees that there is a rope, if he does not choose to make use of it I'm and add to the

"Oh, no!" cried Philip; "he must cling tight to it,-cling for his life !" "Then let us pray for God's Holy Spirit," said Wille Thorn, "that we may indeed ever hold fast the blesssed hope of everlasting life, which God hath given us in our Saviour Jesus Christ!" CHARLEY STANLEY'S RESOLUTION.

The day had arrived when Charlie Stanley was to leave his home for the first time, to live among strangers. It was a beautiful spring morning, and everybody looked cheerful and happy. Before the sun was fairly up, Charlie had dressed himself, and made most of the preparations for his journey, without any assistance from his kind grandmother. Having been left an orphan very early, he had been taught to help himself, and therefore saved much labor and trouble to others. His clothing, books and other necessary things, had been gathered for his grandmother to pack away in his trunk and valise, when she had away in his trunk and valise, when she had finished her other duties. After it was done, and the key had been safely pinned up in the corner of his jacket pocket, he sat down to wait for the carriage that was to convey him to the cars.

Now that the time drew so near, he began to feel low spirited and and, and almost wished that it were possible for him to stay with his grandmether all his life, for he loved her dearly, and the old lady loved him still more, and could hard the faculty of parting with her darling that the faculty of the Goods which will be kept casted. boy, but she felt that it was for the best; and that, with the good foundation that had been laid, he was almost sure to grow up a good man, and be an honor to society and an honor to his name. But there was one thing she feared might ensnare him, as it had so many hopeful youths before him; and she could not think of his separating from her without a warning of the danger to which he would be exposed in mingling with the world, as he must every day.

As she took his little hand in hers and kissed it, while the tears crowded to her eyes, she

"Dear Charlie, you are now about to be thrown among strangers, and you will be subject to a good many temptations from those you do not suspect, and the one most to be dreaded, because so inviting, will be the tempting glass of wine. It has deceived so many, and led so many to vice and ruin, that, of all things else, shun it. I want you to write on the blank leaf of your Bible two pledges, and when you read your morning and evening chapters, turn over and read them also, and pray God to help you to meet and resist them with a heroic Christian courage; they

It did not require any persuasion to induce Charlie to adopt the wise advice of his grandmother, and not only on his Bible leaf, but on his character are now written those noble principles of temperance and virtue that he may safely follow as his guiding star through life. That parting good-by was then a happy one for all, as they felt that from these things at least Charlie would be safe, and there were few others so dangerous. Temperance and virtue will live forever, and be honored, while indulgence and dissipation will be held in contempt and disgrace.— Youth's Temperance Advocate.

ROGERS & CO'S. Cancer and Scrofula Remedy

Amherst, N. S., August 1865. MESSES, ROGERS & Co.-Gentlemen: Permit me o add my testimony to the great value of your preparations, and any person reading the following brief history of a cure effected by it upon my son, will not dispute my right to do so.

He first fell upon a fork handle in the barn and hurt his leg a little below the knee; he subsequently took cold, when it began to swell and pain him very much; it soon ulcerated near where it was first hurt, and continued to discharge freely until the calf of his leg seemed to be one mass of corruption; his foot and knee swelled very much, and when we commenced with your medicine, was very much inflamed, and was evidently on the eve of mortification. The pain and suffering he endured no pen can describe he grew weaker daily, nothing that medical skill and faithful attendance could accomplish was omitted; still he gradually sank, until their seemed but little hope of saving either his life or limb. As a last hope, the Doctors decided to amputate the leg; this was to have been done the next day, but just at this critical point a kind friend advised me to try your medicine; I concluded to do so, and it at once began to improve, and is now about well. He goes to school daily.

This is certainly the most extraordinary cure eve effected in this country; no person could fully appreciate the sad and suffering condition he was in without seeing for themselves; to all human appearance he could not have lived a week; there did not seem to be a ray of hope left. Doubtless there are thousands dying whose lives might be saved if they had this extraordinary medi-Hoping that God will prosper you in your work of humanity,

I am, Gents, yours very affectionately, ALLISON COPELAND. And here allow the mother of the young man whose life has thus been saved, and who for many weary months dressed and handled that leg, and who shed many many tears, and spent many sleep less nights over it; say to mothers or those similarly afflicted, get the medicine by all means.
