THE LITTLE SHOE.

BY MARY NEAL. I found it here—a worn-out shoe, All mildewed with time, and wet with dew. 'Tis a little thing; ye would pass it by With never a thought, or word, or sigh; Yet it stirs in my spirit a hidden well, And in eloquent tones of the past doth tell.

It tells of a little fairy child That bound my heart with a magic wild, Of bright blue eyes and golden hair, That ever shed joy and sunlight there-Of a prattling voice, so sweet and clear, And the tiny feet that were ever near.

It tells of hopes that with her had birth, Deep buried now in the silent earth; Of a heart that had met an answering tone. That again is left alone-alone! Of days of watching and anxious prayer-Of a night of sorrow and dark despair.

It tells of a form that is cold and still-Of a little mound upon youder hill. That is dearer far to a mother's heart Than the classic "statues of Grecian art." Ah, strangers may pass with a careless air, Nor dream of the hopes that are buried there.

O ye, who have never o'er loved ones wept-Whose brightest hopes have ne'er been swept, Like the pure white cloud from the summer sky, Like the wrath of mist from the mountain high, Then melting away to its native sphere ;

Like rose-leaves, loosed by the zephyr's sigh-Like that zephyr wafting its perfume by -Like the wave that kisses some graceful spot, Then passes away—yet is ne'er forgot;
If like these your life-hopes have never fled, Ye cannot know of the tears I shed.

Ye cannot know what a little thing From Memory's silent fount can bring The voice and form that were once so dear. Yet there are hearts, were they only here. That could feel with me, when, all wet with dew. I found it this morning—this little shoe. ----

ALWAYS IN THE WAY.

"Rain, rain, rain, will it never stop?" thought little Amy Howard, as she pressed her small face close to the window-pane, in the vain attempt to see farther round the corner, whence sister Anna must come from school. It was not one of those fall steadily and cheerily, and one feels sure that they are completing their mission as rapidly as possible, in order to treat us to a rainbow. It was a cheerless, mizzly, drizzly rain, that seemed unwilling to leave cloudland, and Lent upon making everybody sympathize with its ill-humor.

Poor little Amy looked the embodiment of forlornity as she watched the long, pendulous branches of the elms sway hither and thither in an uncomfortable manner. She wondered what made had an attack of lung fever; at the end of six the rain fall, and if the poor little doves felt it months she was barely able to leave her chamthrough their glossy feathers; but she knew it ber, only to find herself suffering with all the was quite useless to ask her mother, for she would more prominent symptoms of confirmed consumpto keep out of the way.

Mrs. Howard loved her child; but she was an falling away. energetic woman, whose chief care was to keep a derstand the delicate nature of the little Amy, dow-sill to listen to a serenade. Next morning stood sadly in need of loving and tender sympathy. She was not beautiful; but for those who loved her, there was a depth of love in her little heart, which only needed answering sunbeams to wan face with the beauty of contentment.

This had been such a sad day. In the mornrising sob, she left the table, and essayed to play dry. In all weathers, if you have to walk and confine white Lily, the kitten. But kitty, impa- Journal. tient at such close imprisonment, made vigorous efforts to free herself, and, as she succeeded, scattered the blocks in every direction.

"What a looking room!" exclaimed Mrs. H. "I declare, it's no use to clean up, you get things in the way so."

No more house-building for Amy after that ; so she walked up and down the room, singing softly to the kitten in her arms, until it was time to look for Anna's return from school-Anna, the dear sister who loved and petted the little one. and never told her to keep out of the way. At last, her patient waiting was rewarded by a glimpse of Anna's bonnet, and with a cry of joy Amy bounded to open the hall-door, to greet her sister with outstretched hands, and the words. "I thought you would never come."

"What ails my pet?" said Anna, as she took the child in her lap, and parting the dark hair from her pale face, remarked the look of weariness in her eyes."

"Nothing," answered Amy, "only my head aches so, and I can't play without troubling mother."

Anna sighed, for she knew the little heart had sore trials; so, far into the dusky eve she sat with Amy's head upon her shoulder, telling of the older time, when the fairies danced by moonlight upon the greensward, when every hill and dale, every river and tiny streamlet, was haunted by unearthly beings. Then she told of heaven, made glorious by God and the angels, and as Amy listened, her heart swelled with joy, her eyes beamed with delight, and she exclaimed, raising her head with animation :

"Anna, I must go there, I must; is it such long way?" Suddenly a shadow darkened her face, as she said, sadly, "Perhaps, though, I should get in the way of the angels-I am so

" Never, darling," said the sister, clasping more closely the little form, which an almost prophetic sense told her was too surely fading away. At midnight there were hurried steps and anxious questions, as the household was awakened by Anna's cry that Amy was very ill. After days of anxious watching, a weeping group surrounded the bed of the dying child.

"Mother, said Amy's feeble voice, "I didn't mean to be naughty, and get in your way so much. I hope I shan't trouble the angels—goodbye, my darlings, I am going to sleep." And little Amy was dead.

Long years the grass had grown on Amy's grave, and harebells have rung their fairy chimes above it, while the birds sing requiems in the shadowing trees; but nightly as she lays her head upon her pillow, Mrs. Howard sees the pale, weary face of her child, and hears a sweet voice say, "Mother, I did not mean to get in the way."
Not all in vain was the lesson taught by those dying lips. Seeds of gentleness and patience were sown in the mother's heart, which, watered with the tears of repentance, give promise of an abundant harvest of peace.—Little Pilgrim.

CHECKING PERSPIRATION.

lived, while in a state of perspiration in vellow fever, the certain sign of recovery, left his bed, went into another room, became chilled in a moment, and died the same night!

If while perspiring, or while something warmer than usual, from exercise or a heated room, there is a sudden exposure to a still, cold air, or to a raw, damp atmosphere, or to a draft, whether at an open window or door or street-corner, an inevitable result is a violent and instantaneous closing of the pores of the skin, by which waste and impure matters, which were making their way out of the system, are compelled to seek an exit through some other channel, and break through some weaker part, not the natural one, and harm to that part is the result. The idea is presented by saying that the cold has settled in that part.

A lady was about getting into a small boat to cross the Delaware; but wishing first to get an orange at a fruit-stand, she ran up the bank of the river, and on her return to the boat found herself much heated, for it was summer; but there was a little wind on the water, and the clothing soon felt cold to her; the next morning she had a severe cold, which settled on her lungs, and within the year she died of consumption.

A stout, strong man was working in a garden in May; feeling a little tired about noon, he sat down in the shade of the house and fell asleep; he waked up chilly; inflammation of the lungs followed, ending, after two years of great suffering, in consumption. On opening his chest, there was such an extensive decay, that the yellow matter was scooped out by the cupful.

A Boston ship-owner, while on the deck of one of his vessels, thought he would "lend a hand" in some emergency; and pulling off his coat, worked with a will, until he perspired freely, when he sat to rest awhile, enjoying the delicious breeze from the sea. On attempting to rise, he found himself unable, and was so stiff in his joints, that he had to be carried home and put to bed, which he did not leave until the end of two years, when he was barely able to hobble down to the wharf on crutches.

A lady, after being unusually busy all day, found herself heated and tired toward sundown of a summer's day. She concluded she would rest herself by taking a drive to town in an open vehicle. The ride made her uncomfortably cool. but she warmed herself up by an hour's shopping, when she turned homeward; it being late in the evening, she found herself more decidedly chilly than before. At midnight she had pneumonia rainy days which every one loves, when the drops (inflammation of the lungs), and in three months had the ordinary symptoms of confirmed con-

A lady of great energy of character lost her cook, and had to take her place for a few days; the kitchen was warm, and there was a draft of air through it. Multitudes of women lose health and life every year, in one of two ways; by busying themselves in a warm kitchen until weary, and then throwmake it bear sweetest blossoms, and light up her ing themselves on a bed or sofa, without covering, and perhaps in a room without fire; or by removing the outer clothing, and perhaps changing ing she had climbed into a chair, to watch her the dress for a more common one, as soon as they mother's proceedings at the pastry table, when an enter the house after a walk or a shopping. > The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the matter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening, health restorer ever discovered. It requires but a single trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied upon. They are composed of the celebrated Calisava Bark, Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover Buds, Orange Peel, Snake Root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock.

S.-T.-1860-X. &c. They are especially recommended to clergymen, public speakers, and persons of literary habits and sedentary life, who require free digestion, a relish for food, and clear men-Delicate females and weak persons are certain to find in these Bitters what they have so long looked for. They purify, strengthen, and invigorate.

They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome the effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.

They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers. They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach. They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation. They cure Diarrhea, Cholera and Cholera Morbus. They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache. They are the best Bitters in the world. They make the veak man strong, and are exhausted nature s great re-

The following startling and emphatic statements can be Letter of Rev. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain of the 107th New York Regiment:

Near Acquia Creek, March 4, 1863. Near Acquia Creek, March 4, 1863.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Anttetam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Ur. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appointe. To my great surprise they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment.

* * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain. Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa.: Gentlemen—You were kind enough, on a former occasion, to send me half a dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3.50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I uesire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles more for the money enclosed. I am very truly yours, N. E. Gilds, Pastor Ger. Ref. Church.

Soldiers' Home, Superintendent's Office, Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15th, 1863.

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soluters who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvellous and gratifying

Such a preparation as this I heartily wish in every is ly, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field. G. W. D. Andatws, Superintenden Dr. W. A. Childs, Surgeon of the 10th Vermont Regiment, writes: "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."

Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C., May 22, 1863. Gentlemen—We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house.

Respectfully, SYKES, CHADWICK & Co.
