PRAYER FOR RAIN.

O, for rain! the gentle rain ! For the sweet, refreshing rain ! For the gushing, rushing, patt'ring, dripping rain, Let us pray !

O, to wake up in the night To the music of the rain ; To its liquid fingers beating On the hot and dusty pane ! And to listen to the showers Through the dark and sultry hours Come and go! And to know That the drooping little flowers Have not fixed their patient eyes On the brazen, burning skies All in vain For the rain !

And to know that in the valley, In the forest and the plain, Are a thousand thousand famish'd things Rejoicing in the rain.

That the meadows will be seen In their livery of green, As though sweet May awhile Had returned again to smile ! And no more the shrunken river Is through dusty channel creeping ;

But, with langhing eddies dimpled, To its mother-wave is leaping !

And to know this blessed night, There are hearts of humble trust Thanking him who sends his rain On the evil and the just : And that now from many an eve Are drops of gladness shed On little lips that whispered last. And to feel that on the morrow,---With the first flush of the day,---What a cloud of anxious sorrow, With the clouds will pass away!

For the rain, the gentle rain, For the sweet, refreshing rain, For the gushing, rushing, patt'ring, dripping rain, Let us pray !

----ANGEL COMPANIONS.

Could you have peeped into the large, cool sitting-room of Farmer Gilbert's house, at the close of a pleasant day last summer, you might have seen little Amy sitting at her mother's feet. She was very quiet, and her little black-and-white kitten, which lay drowsily winking in her lap, was very quiet too. Kitty, I guess, was thinking very complacently about a lively, bright-eved monse which she had eaten for her supper; but Amy was thinking about the words which her mother had just been saying.

Mrs. Gilbert had told her little daughter about the beautiful belief which some of the people in Turkey have. She said that they think that an angel walks on the right side of all persons wherever they may go, and records everything ip his thoughts, words or deeds which may be pleasing to God. Another walks on the left, and whenever a bad action is performed he is sorrowful; but he waits, and it it is repented of before night, then he does not record it. If the sun sets and there is no penitence for it, he sadly puts it down. And as the twilight shades gather over the earth, they silently rise through the blue told the boy-that he had better go and see him, and have it all settled. He went, and matters were all arranged, and he soon returned to live with me.

One day, at the examination of the school in our district, the chairman of the committee, who was a clergyman, came to me with the inquiry, What I was going to do with that boy ? Oh, said I, 'I suppose he will learn some trade.' 'He ought'nt to do that,' said the committee. 'He'll never be contented. He loves his books too well. 'These few words set me to thinking, and I finally said to Johnnie : 'Wouldu't you like to tit for college ? If you would, I will help you.' Johnnie said he should like it very much, but he had no means, after being fitted, to take him through. 'Well,' said I, 'if you do not wish to study you had better learn some trade.' Johnnie selected a trade, and I found him a good master in L -----, with whom he served his time.

'Finding that he kept at his books at the close of his apprenticeship, I said to his master, 'If you will take hold with me, we will send that boy through college.' My proposition was agreed to. After a year or two in the high school, Johnnie was admitted to college, and in due time, graduated with credit to himself and friends, and I am not ashamed to call him my boy.'

Boys, I have written these few lines so that this fact may not be lost -that at least one boy has become an educated, highly respected, and promising young man, because he was known as a boy who didn't need speaking to but once! I know this young man well, and I regard him with great esteem. Nor do I believe he will ever be left to disgrace his kind benefactors. Will you uot try and be like him ?

THE HARD LESSONS.

'Why, my dear brother, what are all these books doing on the floor ?' asked Alice Vernon. 'Doing what I want them to do,' was the sullen reply, ' If I could, I'd fling them to the world's end.'

'What is the matter, Walter ?'

'Matter enough! Here, Will is excused long ago, and I've got to sit here all day-yes, and all night too, I suppose. And I don't care if I do either. They're such hard lessons.'

'Come, come, Walter. Affairs cannot be as bad as you think. Perhaps I can assist you. Which lesson shall we take first?'

'There's plenty to choose from, I'm sure; but believe my translation is the worst. I flung that over in my portfolio, in hopes that I'd never find it again.'

' Well, pick up your books and papers, brother, and we'll see what can be done. Come?"

'Oh, it's of no use,' groaned Walter. 'I can't get them. At any rate, Will is off riding before this time. Father said we should be ready to go at three o'clock, and it is after four now.'

' But you will never succeed with your studies brother, if you give up so easily.'

'Oh, yes, Alice it is very easy to talk, when you haven't a cross teacher to scold you every "Well, I know too," said his sister, smiling, Come, get your pencil. Now commence.'

'I feel like saying I won't ; but I can't to you, Alice.' And, despite his stubborn feelings, he was soon busily at work. One difficulty after another was surmounted, till, a last, one lesson remained to be learned. "Shall I explain this one now, brother?"

'No, thank you, Alice. The globe will give me all the help I need; so I shall get on first rate with that.'

The following startling and emphatic statements can be seen at our office :-Letter of Kev. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain of the 107th New York Regiment :

Near Acquia Creek, March 4, 1863. Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave me immediate re-lief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * 1 have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes 1 know of othing like them.

REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa. : Gentlemen-You were kind enough, on a former occasion, to send me half a dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3.00. My wite having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six boules more for the money enclosed. 1 am very truly yours. N. E. GLDS, Pastor Ger. Kef. Church.

ether, pass the portals of the golden city, and bear their record to the King of kings.

As Amy sat there so quietly, she firmly resolved that her angel companions should have nothing but good to bear from her to heaven.

Pretty soon she kissed her mother a loving good-night, put kitten in her snug little bed. which was in an old flour barrel out in the woodhouse, and then went to her own room.

It was a dear little room, and Amy thought that there couldn't be another in the world quite as nice as hers; there might be others which were almost as nice, but she knew that they didn't quite equal hers. Could there be mother library filled with books like her books? or another carpet with roses and green leaves like those in her carpet ? or another cosy white bed as soft as her hed? O no ! Of course not.

But Amy didn't think about this to-night. After she had said her evening praver, she laid her head, brimful of beautiful thoughts of the angels, on her pillow, and not many minutes went by before she was sound asleep.

Soon she seemed to be walking to school as she did every morning ; but the chubby little brother and sister who usually walked with her were replaced by two shining angels, so very beautiful that it seemed a feast to gaze at them ; and in their gentle companionship she thought that no unkind words could be spoken or wicked deeds done. In their hands were waxen tablets, and one held a rose colored pencil, with which he continually wrote. The other sweetly and thoughtfully smiled on Amy.

"All the day long she sirove to be kind and gentle, and when the night came, she penitently prayed to be forgiven for any wicked thing which she doue during the day. Then the angels lovingly blessed her, and disappeared.

As they went, they seemed to call, " Amy, Amy !" and at the sound she opened her blue eyes, and found Aunt Emily standing by her bed. "It's time to get up, Amy-you must hurry ; the sun rose long ago." As Amy arose, and dressed herself, she smiled to think of the call which she thought came from the angels. She humbly asked her heavenly Father for His help through the coming day, so that the angels might bear a pleasing message to him at night.

And Amy did strive to obey her heavenly Father's will in all things ; and though sometimes cross words and angry looks escaped her, she asked God to forgive them for Christ's sake. You know he has promised to forgive those who are penitent, and so he must have forgiven Amv.

And, dear children, don't you think that if you could see the angels watching you all the while, that you would be more careful that every little deed should be one which the dear Saviour would smile upon and bless ?

mile upon and bless ? Then, at the awful judgment day, we shall be very happy that we have tried to do right, and when our loving Father shall place sparkling crowns on our brows, a greater joy shall fill our hearts than any we have ever known on earth. Perhaps angels do not always accompany us; but yet we read in the eleventh verse of the 91st Psalm, "He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways."-Standard Bearer.

A STORY FOR BOYS.

Two gentlemen were riding together in a hack the other day, when the name of a young lawyer of good talents and promise was mentioned, of good talents and promise was mentioned, upon which the elderly gentleman said : 'That is one of my boys.' 'Yea,' was the reply, 'I have understood so.' The elderly gentleman resumed : 'Some twenty years ago, I was visiting my brother in Worces-ter county, and just as I was about returning home he said to me : 'Don't you want a boy f' 'Yea,'I said, 'If I can get a good one.' 'Well,' said my brother, 'I've got one, if there ever was one. I've got a boy that doesn't need speaking to but once.'

' Very well, then; I will leave you now. 'I got them, every one, sister Alice,' said Walter, that evening, as he came in from his sports. 'I knew you could if you only tried.'

'I couldn't, though, if you had not helped me. did not get my ride : but I've had some grand sport with Frank Clark, for all.' 'And did you have a very happy time ?' asked his sister in a serious tone. 'Why, yes-middling. But, to tell the truth, could not help thinking how sullen I was when vou wanted to help me.' "Well, brother, think over that seriously tonight when you go to your own room. If you do, it may spare you many an hour of deeper sorrow. And remember, 'he that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.""
