"GOOD MORNING TO GOD."

BY MRS. HAMLIN, OF CONSTANTINOPLE. " O! I am so happy !" the little girl said, As she sprang like a lark from the low trundle-

"'Tis morning, bright morning ! Good morning papa

O give me one kiss for good morning, mamma ! Only just look at my pretty canary, Chirping his sweet good morning to Mary! The sunshine is peeping straight into my eyes-Good morning to you, Mr. Sun, for you rise Early to wake up my birdie and me, And make us as happy as happy can be."

"Happy you may be, my dear little girl," And the mother stroked softly a clustering curl, " Happy as happy can be-but think of the One Who awakened, this morn, both you and the sun."

The little one turned her bright eyes with a nod, " Mamma, may I say good morning to God ?" "Yes, little darling one, surely you may-As you kneel by your bed every morning to pray.'

Mary knelt solemnly down, with her eyes Looking up earnestly into the skies. And two little hands that were folded together-Softly she laid on the lap of her mother. "Good morning, dear Father in heaven," she said. "I thank thee for watching my snug little bed, For taking good care of me all the dark night, And waking me up with the beautiful light. O, keep me from naughtiness all the long day, Blest Jesus, who taught little children to pray."

THE PRAYER AT THE CRADLE.

A little cottage set on the outskirts of a thriving American town. Over the windows and over the doors the scarlet pendants of the prairie rose, brighter than jewels, rich with diamond dewdrops, lustrous in each leaf with the warm kisses of the sunshine. A picture that made that little corner a bit of paradise, for within sang a young mother, bending over the cradle of her firstborn.

It was a girlish face, scarcely nineteen summers old-a face of gentlest motherhood-blended red and white, with a touch of brown that made it in harmony with its surroundings, the dark hair put plainly back, the lips smiling, unconsciously, the eyes almost holy in their softened glance as they rested upon the beautiful boy before her, whose white lids drooped and then fluttered back, a baby laugh leaping out before they settled again to seeming slumber-and little fingers quivering.

These were the treasures of a hard working man -a man whose shoulders had borne the burden of honest toil from his childhood ; a man who feared God, and loved him with great outgushings of love that swayed all his soul when in his hours of happy rest his wife sat by his side, and their boy nestled against his broad, true bosom. He had gone forth that morning, fortified with prayer; strong in the faith that the mighty God he served would keep him and his from all harm.

The breath of summer stirred the leaves to music and gave a voice of melody to all the streams. It touched the tangled hair and brow of a man who came sullenly along the lonesome road. His black brows met ominously. The strong lines of his face deepened the savage-or hopeless-expression of his countenance. One hand grasped his slouched hat and nervously doubled it till its shape was lost. Some horri ble thought whitened the vindictive lips. " Lost ! Lost !" was the handwriting upon that strange face. O was there no loving angel that yct stood by that miserable man? No arm tender and strong to draw him from ruin ? No lip of sinless purity to whisper a warning ? "No," he cried, hissing the word to empty air-" no one cares for me! why should I try ? I'll make a covenant with hell, and "-He flung his cap, with an oath, fiercely into the dusty road, drew his breath hard as the sight of the little cottage gleamed upon him, then stooping, he picked up the hat and crept up stealthily towards the cottage. " I'll steal," he muttered, " I'll be the outcast men would make me ; " I'll go headlong to ruin, body and soul."

N\w, for a number of years, there had been in that Nighbourhood a huge and ferocious wolf, who had destroyed a great deal of property, and killed several persons, but was so cunning as to avoid bein; caught or killed himself. One day, as The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the mat-Mr. Ulric sai in his house, who should come walkter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening, ing in but this colf! I suppose you think that health restorer ever discovered. It requires but a single the first thing indid was to fly fiercely at trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied the man, or some of his family; but such was not upon. They are composed of the celebrated Calisava the case. The wolf walked quietly, wagged his Bark. Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, tail, rubbed his head against Mr. Tric's feet, and, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover Buds, Orange Peel, Snake in a pleasant voice, (for he could tain when he Root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock. chose), thus spoke :

" My dear sir, I know that I have a very ill name among people in general, but those who ar really acquainted with my character will give a very different account of me. Like most other beasts-and human beings likewise-the way in which I treat others depends entirely upon the way in which they treat me, and I am quite as earnest a friend as an enemy. I have taken a particular liking for you, Mr. Ulric, and I should like to settle down into your family to a quiet, domestic life. If you will take me into your house and treat me as a friend, you will find me quite as useful, attached, and faithful a creature as my cousin, the dog, can be."

Mr. Ulric listened willingly to all this, patted the wolf's head, and informed him that he should live in his house as long as he chose. When Mrs. Ulric discovered this new member of her family, she was much alarmed, and begged that he might be turned out of doors at once ; but her husband insisted that there was no danger in a wolf, if it was properly managed, and that he was one of those who knew exactly how to manage such an animal.-

The wolf, when he first came, promised to live upon the scraps which were left from the table ; but it was soon discovered that he was devouring his master's sheep every night. Yet, when this was told to Mr. Ulric, he absolutely refused to believe it, and said that people were only prejudiced against his poor pet. So the wolf grew bolder and bolder in his operations, and, being one of the most voracious animals that ever was seen, it was not a great while before he had devoured all the sheep, hogs, calves, and poultry, about the farm, besides wantonly trampling down the fields of grain when he was ranging about. In short, this destructive animal, in the space of one year, proved the min of his keeper; and Mr. Ulric's family were obliged to remove from their comfortable home into a poor little hut, which was furnished in a scanty and wretched manner. But what will seem most astonishing is, that Mr. Ulric actually insisted upon taking with him to their new dwelling place the beast who was the cause of their poverty and distress!

And now the wolf, to satisfy his own appetite, took the greatest part of the food which the family were able to procure, and often snatched from the lips of the poor children the scanty portion which they were about to eat. The only person who saw, without any pity, the miserable condition of this family, was Ulric himself, for he became furious when any one urged him to part with his favorite wolf, without whose company, he said, he would not wish to live. At length, one evening, the wolf, in a fierce and authoritative tone, thus exclaimed to Mr. Ulric :

" You must turn this woman and her children out of doors, for you cannot support both them and me !"

Something in these words seemed to madden the brain of the unhappy man to whom they were spoken, and with all the behaviour of a lunatic, he proceeded to drive his family out of doors, though it was in the middle of winter, and they were scantily clothed. The poor woman and children were badly frost-bitten, and, indeed, almost frozen to death by the time that they reached a neighbor's house, where they were allowed to take shelter. And now the wolf, left alone with Ulric, demanded that he should give him some food.

Letter of Rev. E. F. CR. Chaplain of the 107th New York Regiment :

Near Act ia Creek, March 4, 1863. Owing to the great exposure a. V terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was atterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not Ssin medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepa. d by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me stongth and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave in summediate rehef. Two bottles almost allowed me to join sty regiment. * * * 1 have since seen them used in man, cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes i know of nothing like them. REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa. Gentlemen-You were kind enough, on a former occasion, o send me half a dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3.50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles more for the money enclosed. GILDS 1 am very truly yours, N. E. Gilbs, Pastor Ger. Ref. Church.

Soldiers' Home, Superintendent's Office, Cincinnau, Ohio, Jan. 15th, 1863.

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soluters who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvellous and gratifying Such a preparation as this I heartily wish in every faun ly, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field. G. W. D. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the 10th Vermont Regiment, writes : "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and narmless tonic 1 ever used."

Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C., May 22, 1863. Gentlemen-We require another supply of your Planta-on Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our nouse.

At that moment his eye caught sight of the babe and its mother. Her voice, strangely sweet with long-forgotten music, came to where he stood.

" Sleep, baby ; sleep, mother's darling ; shut the blue eyes. There, he is gone. How beautifull little angel !" Then she stooped and kissed him, and murmured, after a long, yearning look -- " O, Father, when my baby is a man keep him so pure that he will never lose the beauty of his soul."

The listener staggered forward-the crumpled hat was under his eyes, wet with hot, blistering tears ; the rugged form quivered with passionate sobs.

" O God !-- and I--was once a child like that -my mother bent over me so-and-perhaps she prayed for me."

A timid step-a low, quick cry. Who was this terrible stranger ? She stood there awed as well as frightened, for he still wept. "Madam-I-I-am hungry-and very tired -will you give me something to eat ? May I sit down on your door-step ?"

She brought him food, and pitying his tears, made him go into the little parlor. All the wild vengeance of one hour ago was dead within him. Soothed by the quiet, he fell asleep; slept till the toiler came to his home'y dinner—to his wife and child. And then he told his story.

" I was a desperate man this morning. I have tried to be honest, but I have been in prison, and men brand me. Your wife, though she did not know it, killed the cvil in my heart, this morning. I was nearly lost again ; I could not beg, and when people asked me questions I could not lie, for I had said, I will be honest, there shall be no half way about it. But when I told the truth I was turned off coldly from everywhere but here. I ask you, for God's sake, to be my helper."

And the prayer, the tears, were not in vain. I could show you the picture of another cottage -where roses, and peace, and love grow togeth er!-but who would see in the man seated behind his own vine the wretched, vengeful traveller of that summer's day ?- Watchman and Reflector.

THE GRANDMOTHER'S STORY.

"Grandma, can't you tell us a story ?" said Alfred. Eddie Norris says that his grandmother tells him and the other children such lots of stories, and some such awful ones, too, about ghosts, and witches, and such things. Those are the kind of stories that I like to hear."

"O! yes, grandma, do tell us a story," added Alfred's brother; and, seeing by the old lady's smile that she was about to comply with their wishes, they both seated themselves close to her, wishes, they both scated themselves close to her, looking up in her face. "Well," commenced their grandmother, "I can tell you a story which may frighten you to as good purpose as any of your ghosts or witches, and, perhapa, may be more useful. Once upon a time, and not very long ago, either, there lived a time, and not very long ago, either, there lived a

" I have none-none even for myself," was the reply.

Glaring at him with flaming eyes, the wolf howled forth : "Whether you are fed or not, I must be !" and then he remorselessly sprang upon the wretched man who had sacrificed everything for his sake. For some time dreadful cries and yells were heard proceeding from the lonely hut, and when, at length, some of the neighbors had courage to enter, they found Ulric lying dead upon the floor, with the wolf's grip on his throat." Here the grandmother concluded her story, during which Alfred and his brother huddled as close up to her as possible, sometimes looking nervously over their shoulders, as if to see whether some monster were not stealing in to make them his prev. "That was awful," said Alfred; "but, of course, it was not true."

"Indeed it is, though," answered his grandmother. "It has happened a great many times, and is now happening every day. The name of this wolf, which foolish men allow to ruin their fortunes and take away all their feeling for their families, and which pays them at last by destroying their wretched lives, is Intemperance, or the love of drinking. Who that knows all this, and has his proper senses, would not wish to keep that wolf from his door ?"
