Every living thing again. Nature spake! A thousand birdlings Warbled forth their Maker's praise; Every tree-top, nook, and hillock

Was resonant with their lays. Nature spake! And lo! God's tear drops Fell in gentle showers of rain ; Cleansing every dusty hill-side, Ere to clouds they rose again.

God in Nature! See his wisdom In the mighty forest trees; See his care in every flower. Hear his voice in every breeze.

HIGHEST OF ALL. "Well, I'll do something yet to show them that I'm somebody. You wait. Jary Williams shall see it, too, the mean little chap.' "Don't be angry with Jarvis, Arty; he is a kind-hearted, good boy. More than that, I be-lieve he's a Christian. If you failed, and he won the prize, you know it's not because he tried to injure you; and he would do you a kindness at any time, if he had the opportunity, I'm sure."

"I'll have my name above his yet, Marion; see if I don't. I'm bound for Martin's Ledge." And with a dark face and darker heart, Arty Fisher left his gentle sister, who had failed to soften his hard feelings toward his classmate.

Martin's Ledge was the name of a huge rock that formed one side of a hill which was a favorite play-ground of the boys; and the larger of them often had trials of skill, or rather of strength, in climbing its steep front. It was no easy task, for there was not very much for either hands or feet to get hold of, and the rock stood nearly upright, and stretched away up some sixty feet; so that there was danger in the sport. Here and there upon its sunburnt and storm-beaten face were initial letters rudely cut, fifteen, twenty, thirty feet from its base-memorial marks of the climbers; and one could be seen fully forty feet high, where Tommy Black, who was always more venturesome than the rest, and who afterward went to sea, had managed to leave a large T, but who did not wait to add his other initial. Tommy never would own that he felt dizzy, and didn't dare to stay longer, though the boys said it was so.

It was Wednesday afternoon; and many of the boys were, as usual, at play about Martin's Ledge. Arty Fisher joined them. Λ hammer showed its handle from his pocket, and clinked against the iron chisel inside, telling that he was all ready to climb.

"Now, boys, let's see if I can't put my mark highest of all. I'll be the first here, anyhow! Who cares for Jary Williams?"

They all knew what had happened at school. They knew Arty's vexation at his failure, and at the success of Jarvis, and they also knew the un manly spirit he had shown; but none of them wished to quarrel with him.

"Go ahead, Arty!" cried several voices, as he

He went rapidly up the ledge at first; but there was less and less to hold upon as he climbed higher, so that he got on slowly. Twenty five old marks when he reached those points-forty, A COMMON SENSE VIEW feet, thirty, thirty-five-all the boys knew from forty-one; and the boys shouted, "Highest of all, Arty!" The face of the rock was almost without a break here; still he held on, and gained one foot more; forty-two-he was two feet higher than the bravest. Then he managed to get out his tools, and clinging to the rock, began to make his mark. Slowly and painfully he worked on that letter A; for there was danger every moment that he would lose his balance, and fall backward. It was very hard. His limbs trembled under him. He glanced down for a moment, and his foot slipped. Down over the steep rock he fell to the gravel-bed below. He had made his mark highest of all; but it was unfinished.

Arty was carried home, bruised and bleeding and unconscious. He came to himself to find that a broken arm and other injuries were the result of the day's work. He learned, too, that little Jarvis Williams had been the first to run for help, and to bring the surgeon; and that, with the heart of a brother, he had lingered near for hours after the accident, offering any service in his power. And then he remembered his sister's words, " I believe Jarvis is a Christian."

The next day, Jarvis came to see him; and though he spoke hopefully, and tried to comfort his suffering playmate, Arty saw the tears in his eyes, and knew they were from sympathy. And then Arty " came to himself" in another way ; he held out his hand, "Forgive me, Jarvis!" That was all he said, but it came from a penitent heart, and a loving word in reply from Jarvis made them friends. And so, through Arty's long confinement, Jarvis came every day to do what he could to cheer him; bringing his books, and telling him all about the boys and their play.

"Jarvis," said Arty one day, "what made you so kind to me when you knew I hated you?" "Don't, Arty; you didn't hate me; or, at least, you wouldn't have, if you knew how I felt. And how could I help coming to see you, when you were hurt so badly? Besides, Arty"—and Jarvis' eyes were glistening now—"I have given my heart to Jesus; I'm trying to be a Christian; and O, Arty! if you would only try with me, how much we could help each other."

When Arty's sister came in, the boys were talking softly, but very earnestly.

There is a place in Arty's heart where are writ-ten the name of all his playmates whom he loves best, and on that record the name of Jarvis Williams stands "highest of all," for Jarvis con-quered by love, and the two boys walk in love

A GOOD WORD TO BOYS.

Come, boys, and listen a few moments to your uncle. You have arrived now at an age when you must begin to think about doing something for yourselves. The first piece of advice I have for you is, to do every thing well which you undertake. There is but little danger of your being too particular in this respect. A boy is careful to draw a straight line on his slate will be very likely to make a straight line through life. There is no position in life in which you will not be called upon to be as exact as possible. Step into a jeweller's shop, and see how careful the workman must be in finishing up the article he holds in his hand. Visit a ship-yard, and the man with the broad-axe must learn to hew on the line or be dismissed. You think of being a clerk. Well, ember that a mistake there is a little less than a crime. I never saw a man who was very particular about his affairs that was not successful. How exact is a military officer in the command of his men! A clumsy sailor will never rise to the command of a ship.

But there is one great danger which besets many young men at the present day. It is the disposition to avoid all solid improvement and take up with subjects that require no thought, and which serve as mere excitement to the mind. Your older friends tell you that the boys are faster at the present day, but I can remember fast have been a pure larger you were born; but they never boys long before you were born; but they never made solid or useful men. Very few of them lived to be forty years old. Nobody ever trusted them. They never filled any important office or station. They namelly because small men, because they had no aspital in their heads with which to were as a Keing. Out of fifty of that ulass. I do not know of one who ever accomplished much.

OF THE MODE IN WHICH

Hostetter's STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them as facts, and as far as this GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT is concerned, it is proposed to gratify them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neu tralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbug. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential pro-perties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica, and there is to herbial extract which it will not hold in solution, with all its preventive and curative virtues unimpaired.

Now the pure liquid stimulant of which Hostetter's Bitters are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of Ryc would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be with out their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Good monongahela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impreguated with the vegetable elements employed in the preparation of the bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS. Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are indescribable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and fall feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, it ganwing sensation. a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, occasional nausea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpitation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensation in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphrigm, feebleness and disincination for exertion, and sometimes emaciation and a corpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing egents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chronce justure. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repediant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to cure. It is believed that there is no case of chronic indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of nie indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatistaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIclaiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR IND GESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIETIES.

MRS. WINSLOW, An experienced Nurse and Female Physician, presents to

which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by soften-ing the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS. We have put up and sold this article for over thety years, and can say, in confidence and truth of it, what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED, IN A SINGLE INSTANCE, TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfilment of what we here deciare. In exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is ad-

No 60 Germain Street,

THE subscriber respectfully begs to direct the attention of the public to the Studio which be has recently opened, and feels justified in assuring the citizens of St.
John that he can produce thoroughly satisfactory LIKENESSES. He is prepared to execute either ordinary Cartes de Visites, Ambrotypes, Daguerreotypes, or life sized Photographs in Oil, which latter being in finish equal to Oil Painting, are much more faithful as Likenesses.
Parties having miniatures or faded Likenesses of deceased friends and relations, and wishing to have the same enlarged into life sized Photographs in Oil, would find it to their advantage to call upon him.
