OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE.

"So He bringeth them unto their desired haven."—PSALM cvii. 30.

Chapter IV.

IN THE EAST ROOM.

And a dreadful reputation the Serrars had; though, being out of the way of general navigation, it was not often they had an opportunity of distinguishing themselves; but if once any hapless vessel grounded on them, she was pretty sure to go to pieces, and the saving of the crew was a feat of bravery and skill, if, indeed, it could be accomplished.

"Yes, indeed! and she is!" responded Charley Green, a man-like dried seaweed, and a special friend of mine. "How she do rock and heave! And if I don't mistake, she's drifted on to the very worst bit of the reef she could pick out, though very bad is the best. She's struggling with the Shark's Teeth." This was the name of one special rock right in the middle of that dreadful reef, and the name was about the best that could be given it.

"She is," said Gilbert. "Charley, she must go to bits: nothing on earth could save her. But the crew! What boats are out?"

"Old Lobb's boat went out as soon as ever she"—pointing to the vessel—"made signals; and then the Mays—father and son—set off; and last of all the "Betsy Jane" put off; but, there, what's the use?"

"There never was a ship in worse quarters," said Gilbert, slowly; "but how about her own boats?"

"We can't tell; there hasn't been light enough to see from stern to bows of this here little craft; only, if she did let down her boats they'd strike at once and be swamped in a jiffy. Nothing could live on the Serrars in such a sea. I see it coming hours ago, and I watched the storm get up, and was just going to try what I could do with my mates, when the doctor comes and tells me all about Miss Margaret being out; and I concluded to go with him, for, thinks I, charity begins at home—my neighbours first, and then the foreigners. So I came, and I don't know nothing of the other boats!"

Meanwhile my father was holding me in his arms, and I was gathering fresh warmth and life from that dear embrace; and slowly, slowly the eastern sky was brightening, and in the solemn light of dawn we saw the great ship beating about very near us. Already her timbers were shivering and splitting in every direction, and the great hull seemed to start and shudder, like a human being in mortal agony. As the light grew we could see that the crew were taking to their own boats; no others were near; it was evident that the vessel would be a perfect wreck in less than an hour.

"If they would only stay on board, they might be saved," said Bertha, who was standing now by Gilbert, forgetting her own drenched, pitiable condition in the excitement of the moment.

"No, Bertha, I am afraid not: there will be water enough for the next two hours to drown them every one. Look! the main-deck is swept away. If it hadn't been the Shark's Teeth she'd got upon, one might have trusted; but that's the worst bit of all the reef. The top of it is never seen but at very lowest tides, and the water there is always very deep. Doctor! if we were but a few yards nearer, we might do something!"

Before my father could reply, a cry—oh, such a cry of anguish!—swept across the waves. The boat we had seen just filled went down with all its freight of struggling, terrified human creatures. One moment the indistinct forms of the people crowding into the boat—the next, only foaming waves, with snowy crests and cavernous black hollows!

There was a groan from all the men in our boat. It was horrible to see it all,—to be so near at hand, and yet unable to render any help. We looked over the restless water, and only the solemn boom went on, and the white crests rose and fell, and the early twilight brooded over the dark abysses that had gathered to their depths some score or more of our hapless fellow-creatures. Another day was dawning fresh and fair; soon the glad sunlight would sparkle cheerily on land and sea, and the wild, fierce waves would be lulled to rest once more, and the lark would sing her morning anthem of praise, and the fishermen would come down to the beach to look for the wreck that last night's storm had made, and all the busy world around and beyond St. Eldred's would go on its way as carelessly, as actively as ever; but those who had hoped ere long to join the household band, and soon to clasp hands after weary years of absence, would sleep on undisturbed till the sea should give up her dead. When one has seen such a wreck,—such an awful sight as the living sinking into the watery tomb that wraps them round as securely in its yielding but impenetrable walls, as rock-hewn vault, or earthly churchyard-bed, one feels the sweetness and comfort of the Word that tells us of another life, another country, where "there is no more sea" save the calm, crystal sea before the throne of God.

And remembering all the storms, and tossings, and cruel shatterings that betide upon the voyage on which we are all embarked, the heart beats rapturously and the eyes grow dim with happy tears, in thinking of the time when all shall be anchored safely within in the great Pilot, through whom alone our frail barks are steered across the wild and treacherous billows to eternal peace!

Very soon we were safely landed, and there were mamma and Susan on the beach waiting for us. Mamma strained me to her heart in a perfect agony of thankfulness,—she had not words for gratitude and welcome. Susan kissed me boisterously, and hugged me in her brawny arms till I had to gasp for breath; then she began to scold me furiously, as if I were responsible for the storm that had wrought such awful mischief: and I was glad to seize upon Alice and Bertha, and drag them after me into the house. There we were all petted, and made much of; and Mrs. Tredgold suddenly appeared upon the scene, and would have taken her daughters home had not mamma sternly forbidden her to risk her children's lives.

So we were all undressed and put to bed like babies, such measures being taken as would go far to prevent the evils which were likely to accrue from our long exposure. I only know that my feet were literally pickled in salt, and mustard, and hot water, and my throat scalded with posset, which Susan compelled me to swallow at nearly boiling point. I soon fell asleep, too soundly for dreams, and when at length I woke and looked out, I knew by the light upon the cliffs it must be already noon. No vestige of the stately ship I had seen rocking on the fatal Serrars could I perceive. The water was still rough, but the sky was serene and intensely blue, and the air, cleared by the tempest of the previous night, blew refreshingly over the Bay. The house was very still,—it might have been midnight instead of noon; and I wondered what had become of Gilbert, and whether Alice and Bertha Tredgold had gone home.

I determined to dress, and go down as quickly as possible; and while I was looking for my clothes, which I could not easily find, Susan crept on tip-toe into the room.

A COMMON SENSE VIEW

OF THE MODE IN WHICH

Hostetter's

STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them as facts, and as far as this is concerned, it is proposed to gratify them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neutralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbug. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential properties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica, and there is no herbial extract which it will not hold in solution, with all its preventive and curative virtues unimpaired.

Now the pure liquid stimulant of which are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of Rye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be without their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

Good monongahela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impregnated with the vegetable elements employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS.

Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are indescribable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of sinkings at the pit of the stomach between meals, occasional nausea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpitation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensation in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphragm, feebleness and disinclination for exertion, and sometimes emaciation and a corpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chronic fixture. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to cure. It is believed that there is no case of chronic indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIGESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIETIES.

DR. KNIGHTS'

HAIR DRESSING!

A dressing for Children's Hair, which can be used without fear of injury to its growth or texture, has hitherto been unattainable. Most, if not all, of the Hair Dressing heretofore sold at the Drug Stores are composed chiefly of oil and alcohol—ingredients which are antagonistic to the life of the hair.

Knights' Hair Dressing

Contains neither oil nor alcohol, is purely vegetable in its composition, and is the most perfect HAIR RENEWER AND INVIGORATOR that has ever been made available to the public.

Persons whose hair has been thinned by sickness or age, should give this preparation a trial, with the assurance that a luxuriant growth of hair will result, unless the roots are dead, when such an effect is impossible.

KNIGHTS' HAIR DRESSING

Is an elegant preparation, exquisitely perfumed, inclines the hair to curl, will not soil the skin or any article of apparel, and is fast superseding the pernicious articles which have so long deceived a credulous public.

GALLERY OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ART,

No 60 Germain Street, Opposite Trinity Church.

THE subscriber respectfully begs to direct the attention of the public to the Studio which he has recently opened, and feels justified in assuring the citizens of St. John that he can produce thoroughly satisfactory LIKENESSES. He is prepared to execute either ordinary Cartes de Visites, Ambrotypes, Daguerreotypes, or life sized Photographs in Oil, which latter being in finish equa to Oil Painting, are much more faithful as Likenesses. Parties having miniatures or faded Likenesses of deceased friends and relations, and wishing to have the same enlarged into life-sized Photographs in Oil, would find it to their advantage to call upon him.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

Mr. J. Chaloner takes this opportunity of making his acknowledgments to Physicians, patients, and the public, for the confidence placed in him, as well as of their generous patronage of the past year.

In the preparation of prescriptions, &c., he has had a long experience—a most important matter—as new features are constantly being presented. He is most careful in keeping none but the finest quality Medicines, and imports direct from the celebrated house of Treacher & Co., London. He has taken the precaution of keeping medicines for prescriptions in cases separate from the retail department—Poisons having a distinct place. It always has been his endeavor to give satisfaction in this branch of his business, so that the public may send their prescriptions with entire confidence that they will be justly prepared.
