(From the Christian World.) MARGARET TORRINGTON :

OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE.

By the Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Julian's Wife," "St. Beetha's," &c.

I listened like a person in a dream to this exordium, and, rising mechanically, I prepared to obey, when suddenly my uncle stopped, and said severely, " Margaret, I want yourself, not a lay figure bearing your likeness. It is not enough that you listen to what I have to tell you ; I require your serious attention."

I bent my head as an acknowledgment of this remark, but not for worlds could I have spoken, or assured him I would do my best; only, as I closed the library door behind me, and saw him already seated in my father's own chair, I did wonder stupidly what was going to be my fate,--for I knew I had come there to hear my sentence, whatever it might be.

"Sit down, Margaret!" was the first command,-for I was standing stonily against the table. "Sit down, and bring your chair near to me. Now! I am told that you are a very clever girl, and therefore I shall expect you not to be very stupid and slow in comprehending what I have to bring before you. In the first place, I suppose you know you have to live ?"

Yes; I knew that well enough ; it would have been very much easier, I thought, to die; only it takes so much to kill a really healthy person. Whatever poets and romance-writers may tell us, broken hearts, in the true sense of the word, are extremely rare. It is astonishing how much even a delicate frame can bear before the anguish severs soal and body. Byron says truly,

"The heart may break, yet brokenly live on ;"

and I once heard Susan say, " Oh! it takes a lot of killing to finish up some people. Hearts don't break, as my old song book used to tell about ; but they crack pretty often, and there are some cracks that time can never mend. Ab, well-aday! cracked, or broken downright, they'll all be sound again in the next world if only they have been given here to the Master."

Having admitted that I did know I must still continue to exist in the flesh; which continuance I also knew must involve the need of proper food and raiment, my uncle propounded another question, which grew out of the first quite naturally. "How, then, do you propose to live !"

Pitifully I glanced at him. Oh, if he would but leave me to myself a little longer ! But I was only answered by the steady gaze that looked for my reply. It came at last. " Uncle, I do not know. Is there nothing ?"

"Next to nothing. Look here, Margaret: here is a statement which Dr. Berners has seen and audited-this is his signature. It has cost me much trouble to go into every little trifle, and to bring it all to black and white as you see it now; but I thought it best that all should be clear and plain at once, that we might know where we really stood, and avoid mistakes, which would only cause needless pain when corrected. This is a list of all your father's debts and liabi-This is a list of all your father's debts and habi-lities up to the time of his death, also of the bills resulting from both funerals; and of some small accounts still due, which have naturally been running on during Mrs. Torrington's illness. been running on during Mrs. Torrington's illness.

And here on this side is the account of all moneys in actual possession, and all legally due to the estate ; when the horse and gig and the furniture are sold, there will be something more ; but even this addition, at a fair valuation, leaves you only mistress of about £400, and perhaps a few articles of plate and other little things you may like to retain for yourself."

" Four hundred pounds ! So much, uncle !"

"So much ! Is the girl crazy ? If I invest this money for you, as, of course, 1 shall, it will not bring you in more than 5 per cent. I grant you might get more on mining companies of railways, and such like bubble-and-squeak concerns, but it would never be secure; and some fine morning you might wake up and find your capital gone, and, of course, your interest with it. I am not sure that I can even get you 5 per cent. ; really safe and sure things are generally 3, and 31, and 4 per cent., even lower sometimes, as you will see in time. But take it for granted that your £400 is put out at 5 per cent., what income does that bring you in-eh ?"

" Twenty pounds, uncle.'

" Exactly, Miss Torrington ! I am glad to perceive you have some business capabilities, -- some women would have had to cover a sheet of foolscap with figures before they arrived at the result, which you attain by a simple mental process. Well, do you think twenty pounds per annum will find you in board and lodging,-feed you properly, clothe you decently, shelter you respecstally, to say nothing of times of sickness and unforeseen emergencies ?"

Now, though my uncle had complimented me on my business, capabilities, I was really quite ignorant as to the true value of money-I had no idea how far £20 a year would go; but my late experience in housekeeping, with Susan for my major-domo, had suggested that it would not go very far. And then Mirrie! she had not £400, and I had made a sacred promise. I said, therefore, " I am afraid it would not be enough. And there is Miriam Downing."

" Confound Miriam Downing! Let the Downings see to the Downings ; we have to do with Croftons and with Torringtons."

I looked my uncle steadily in the face, and as steadily I said, " Uncle, I do not love Miriam Downing-

"I have found that out ; and the discovery proves to me that you are no ordinary woman; for, by all that is ridiculous, I could be foolish about that child myself."

"I continued quietly :---" But my father and my mother both loved her; and I promised mamma that I would share with her whatever fell to my

lot. I will keep my promise !" "Whew! Miss Torrington and Miss Downing keeping house on £20 a year! You would be in the house before the year was out." "I think not, uncle. We could work! You appear to forget that." " May I be pardoned if I desire to know what kind of work two young ladies would select ?" I paused for my answer. Well, Mirrie was

I paused for my answer. Well, Mirrie was "handy," as Susan said, and she could do "a sight of little things." But I-I knew some Latin, and, thanks to Miriam, some tolerable French; indeed, I knew a great many things; but, unless I could teach them to others, I hardly and how they could profit me. Meanwhile I could not sew decently, I could not cook, I could not do housework 1 How could classics, natural history, and general culture be turned to account,

But I thought of my music, and I knew I had power there, and on the spur of the moment I said I would teach music and singing. My uncle laughed as he replied: "I believe you may—some day ! Decidedly, you have musical talent, if not genius; though when you played at my request you were under disadvantages. It was scarcely a time for tunes and songs, as your face said to me. By the way, you must learn to regulate that face of yours a little: But I wished lectric fluid is to subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. ACT UPON THE

 $\mathbf{T}^{\mathrm{HIS}}$ is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them as facts, and as far as this

Now the pure liquid stimulant of which are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Es-sence of Rye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and sim-ple, as if mixed with the jnices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be with out their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Good monongahela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impregnated with the vegetable elements employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS.

Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are in-describable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a grawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, occa-ional nausea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpi-tation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amount-ing to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensa-tion in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaph-ragm, feeblences and disinclination for exertion, and some-times emaciation and a corpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally com-plicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its, victims, have many additional torments, the nerves, its, victime have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of the lagd set

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS. The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental facul-ties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain puscession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chronic fixturs. Consider the first indi-cation of uncasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and buffle it at once with this great repellant.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, is all of the same ap-proving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDI-GESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIATIES. GESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIETIES. Prepared and sold by
