GO LET THE ANGELS IN.

[A little girl, who was about to expire, said to her mother, " Now, mother, I'm dying. Open the door and let the angels in-they've come to take me home."]

Go open wide the door, mother, And let the angels in;
They are so bright and fair, mother,
So pure and free from sin. I hear them speak my name, mother, They softly whisper, " Come !" O, let the angels in, mother, They've come to take me home.

I know that death has come, mother, His hand is on my brow; You cannot keep me here, mother-

For I must leave you now. The room is growing dark, mother-I thought I heard you weep; 'Tis very sweet to die, mother,

Like sinking into sleep! I now must say farewell, mother, For I am going home! Now open wide the door, mother,

And let the angels come! And let me bear them far away, Up to the world of love, The city where the angels stay, The brighter world above.

THREE BLASTS OF THE HORN.

Betty Fletcher lived on a farm in Vermont. It was before the land was much cleared. Farmer Fletcher's farm was on the edge of the woods, and there was a little path through the forest to grandma Fletcher's. Instead of going a long way round the road, the family often went and came by this path in the woods. There was not much danger of bears and catamounts, for the hunters had killed or driven them away. It was cool and shady in summer, and the squirrels and birds made it lively and pleasant.

One summer's morning, little Betty Fletcher was sent to carry some skeins of yarn to her grandmother. She was to spend the day there, and see the new chickens. At night, father was to go and fetch her home on horseback. She put on her cape-bonnet, kissed mother and baby brother in the cradle, and set off. Mother was making butter, and watched her darling Betty out of the dairy window until the little form was lost sight of in the woods.

"Father," said mother, after milking, " now go for Betty." The afternoon sun was making long shadows on the road when Mr. Fletcher jumped upon Whiteface, and rode away. Mother strained her milk, put the pans on the shelf, and and sat down in the door, to catch the first sound of Whiteface's hoofs bringing home her little

After a while, she heard the old horse coming on the gallop. Looking up, she saw her husband, but no Betty. Before she had time to ask, " Betty is not there," said the farmer, riding up, and looking very pale; "nor has grandmother seen her all day."

"Betty is lost," cried her mother; " my child is lost!" They ran to the woods and called. Nothing but echo answered. Father hurried over the path, shouting, "Betty, Betty!" but no Betty answered. It was now quite dark.

Mr. Fletcher went to the neighbors. "My Betty is lost in the woods," he cried; "come, help me find her." Men, women, children, and dogs, all turned out. The women went to comfort the poor mother, who was in great distress. "My child is torn to pieces by wolves," she cried " something dreadful has happened to her. My Betty is lost, my Betty is lost!" It was little the neighbors could do but weep with her.

The men with torches and horses scoured the woods. One and another came back with no tidings of the lost child, then started back on a fresh scout. It was a long and gloomy night to the poor Fletchers and their kind neighbors. The sun streaked the eastern sky with morning light, and still no news of the lost little one. The sun

It was just at sunrise that three short, quick blasts of a distant horn were heard. "Hark," cried the mother, listening, " hark'!"

" Found, found !" cried a neighbor, clasping her hands. "That's the signal for finding her which the men agreed on." "Found, found!" cried a man at the well. Can it be?

Yes, the lost one is found. A man on the search spied little footprints on some wet moss : following on, he found a skein of varn. Here is a clue to her, he thought, carefully and eagerly looking round; and a little further on he caught sight of Betty, fast asleep on the soft brown leaves, beside an old tree which fell long ago. Her cheeks were wet with tears.

" Betty, Betty Fletcher," cried the man, catching her up in his strong arms. The poor child opened her eyes with a frightened and bewildered look. Did God tell you?" asked Betty, in a little weak voice, as soon as she could speak. "Tell me what, Betty, dear ?" said the man, almost choked with joy. "You are all in a tremble." . "I prayed God to take care of me, and tell my father where I was; I did not know. I couldn't find my grandma's." Then the man blew his horn three short, loud, glad blasts, which told the good news far and near. Tongue cannot tell what gratitude filled the hearts of those who heard it. The women eried for joy. Men who were still in the search left off, and quickly turned their steps towards the Fletcher cottage.

Mrs. Fletcher, at the first blast of the born, ran in the direction whence it came. And who can describe the mother's feelings when she clasped her darling child once more to her bosom? She could only sob and say, "Thank God, thank

How came Betty to lose her way? the children will want to know. She ran into the woods after a squirrel, and could not find the path again. Were they not a happy family that morning—fa-ther, mother, and all the neighbors? Never was there such rejoicing; never did they forget to praise God.

This will help us to understand how happy our heavenly Father is when we are found. Found? Are we lost ! The Bible says so. When we stray away from the right way, we are lost. Jesus searches for us. He came on purpose to seek and to save the lost. He came to find us, and to bring us back to our dear heavenly Father; and he cries, "Come, come unto me." With sorry and penitent hearts let us turn from our sine, and run into the arms of our Saviour. That makes joy in heaven. Yes, "there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." You see then what makes the angels glad .- Child's Paper.

A COMMON SENSE VIEW OF THE MODE IN WHICH Hostetter's

STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to the GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT is concerned, it is proposed to gratify them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neu tralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. Its shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbing. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential properties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica. and there is no herbial extract which it will not hold in solution, with all its preventive and curative virtues unim-

Now the pure liquid stimulant of which

are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of kye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and sim-ple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be with-out their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Good monongahela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most nnocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when im regnated with the vegetable elements employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS. Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is aimost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are in-describable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a guawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, occa ional nausea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpi-tation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounttation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensation in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphregm, feebleness and disinclination for exertion, and sometimes emaciation and a corpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that and this vitalizing preparation will tone and removate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quartity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chrome facture. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant. But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to cure. It is believed that there is no case of chronic indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet anchronicled. If it over had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dezen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIGESTION, is all its varieties.

Mr. J. Chaloner takes this opportunity of making his acknowledgments to Physicians, patients, and the public, for the confidence placed in him, as well as of their generous patronage of the past year.

In the preparation of prescriptions, &c., he has had a long experience—a most important matter—as new features are constantly being presented. He is most careful in keeping none but the finest quality Medicines, and imports direct from the celebrated house of Treacher & Co., london. He has taken the precaution of keeping medicines for prescriptions in cases separate from the retail department—Poisons having a distinct place. It always has been his endeavor to give satisfaction in this branch of his business, o that the public may send their prescriptions with entire confidence that they will be justly propared.
