'Tis not that works of taste and art, Books, pictures, jewels, I despise These have their uses, and impart Some pleasures even to the wise.

But these are trifles to my thought, When this full heart would fondly prove What price it hath by years been taught To set on thy pure, faithful love.

Each gift more beautiful and rare, Seems all unequal to express The fervent gratitude I bear, For all thy life-long tenderness!

To every year that speeds its flight Each must, 'tis said, some grace resign'; But flying years, to my pleased sight, Add grace to every charm of thine.

The riper judgment, richer mind. Enlarged experience, firmer will, Leave no regrets for days behind, But bless and satisfy me still.

Time, the arch-robber, hath no power To steal thy solid worth away ; He cannot touch thy peerless dower Of virtues that know not decay.

My heart's best offering, dearest, take; Its changeless love, its steady trust ; 'Tis thine till earth's last tie shall break, And I shall sleep in silent dust.

Aye, where immortal life shall glow.

Where endless years serenely glide, Firm is my faith that I shall know Thee as my fair, Immortal Bride! -Dr. Ray Palmer.

CHILD-PRAYER.

"O God! bless father and mother, and sister Mamy, and please make my boots go on easy,' was the prayer of a little boy that prayed for what he wanted. He did not use a great deal of circumiocution to pray for things that he did not want. His boots were the things that troubled him most; and it was very natural he should tell his Father about them.

To be sure, they were only boots-low, earthly things, that many good people would think not fit to take to the throne of grace. Not so thought the little boy. He thought he had a right to go to his Father with anything that troubled him. Maybe his pinching boots had made him say bad words, and put him in a bad humor. At any rate, he wanted them to "go on easy," and why not pray for the thing he wanted! How very natural for a child to say what it thinks, and tell what it wants! It seems to me that often children have a truer idea of prayer than many grown people. They pray for what they desire with a beautiful simplicity of faith and trust. Older people pray more for the things they suppose they ought to pray for, than for the very things they really do want. If they get an answer to their prayer, they are more surprised than they would have been had they not obtained it.

Many people pray for the heathen, for their country, for the prosperity of Zion, for the suppression of wrong and wickedness in general, and for the hastening on of that "glorious day il know the Lord, from the least even unto the greatest" leaving their own individual needs and wants quite out of the category of their supplications.

They pray for many good and desirable things; but they too often omit to pray for those very gs that more than all others have a positive immediate relation to their own individual fe. They pray long and loud for many things they really care but very little about-things that to them are a mere abstraction, having no or power over their own hearts and con-

How many enter their closet and bend their lees to say something after this fashion: "O ou adorable Father ! thou art the infinite, eteral, unchangeable Jehovah, the only wise God! ho holdeth the earth in a balance, and the nane are as dust before thee; this world is thy statool, and the inhabitants thereof are as vile orms in thy sight! Be pleased, gracious and almighty Lord, to look upon the work of thy and, and upon a vast multitude of miserable nners, and forgive the trespasses of a whole world lying in sin and wickedness."

Would it not oftener be a more real expression of need and want to pray sometimes in this manner: "O God! be merciful to me a sinner. I ave been angry and done wrong. Forgive me, ony Father, for cuffing my child beside the irs, when she tripped her foot, broke the platter. ad spoiled my breakfast. Forgive me for speaka hasty word to the servant and a cross word by wife. Make me more tender and patient, ving and forbearing. Keep me from wrong otives of action, from greed of gain, and from presching bargains. Give me true and honest cess in business; enable me to live a better n, and make a holier, happier home."

et us have more child-prayer. Let us pray e earnestly for the things we really want, and be surprised if we obtain them!

COMMON SENSE VIEW

OF THE MODE IN WHICH

Hostetter's

STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE

HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them

GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT

lution, with all its preventive and curative virtues unim

Hostetter's Bitters

are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of Rye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be with out their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of

Good monongabela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impregnated with the vegetable

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS.

Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is aimost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are indescribable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ.

Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, dull heavy feeling in the nead, feeble or unsteady appetite, occasional nausea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpitation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensation in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphrama and disinglination for avertion and some ragm, feebleness and disinclination for exertion, and some times emaciation and a corpse-like pullor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally com-plicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to.

of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chronic facture. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to core. It is believed that there is no case of chronic indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIGESTION, IN ALL ITS VARISTIES.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neutralize it. THE subscriber respectfully begs to direct the attention of the public to the Studio which he has recently opened, and feels justified in assuring the citizens of St.
John that he can produce thoroughly satisfactory LIKENESSES. He is prepared to execute either ordinary Cartes de Visites, Ambrotypes, Daguerreotypes, or life sized Photographs in Oil, which latter being in finish equal to Oil Painting, are much more faithful as Likenesses.
Parties having ministures or faded Likenesses of deceased friends and relations, and wishing to have the same enlarged into life-sized Photographs in Oil, would find it to their advantage to call upon him.
