Chapter IV. (Continued.) MIRIAM.

" Is the old gentleman, whom Gilbert saved very rich!"

"Probably he is rich, but about the 'very cannot give an opinion. You are thinking he may do something for Gilbert ! I have though the same myself, and sincerely hope it may be so : Gilbert deserves all liberality at his hands But we know nothing of the gentleman's circumstances; he may have many children and even grandchildren, and in such circumstances men are not free to dispose of their own as they other-wise might."

But, mamma, I think he owes Gilbert some return. Think! Gilbert risked his own life for him-for him, a stranger. I shall hate him if he only gives his deliverer bare thanks; of all things I detest ingratitude."

"And yet, my child, are you not sometimes very ungrateful?"
"I, mamma! I could do anything for anybody who had done something for me. All my heart goes out to people who try to do me good and make me happy. Oh, mamma! I do not like to think that you count me ungrateful. I know I do not always seek to please you as I ought; for I owe everything in the world to your love and papa's; but I mean to try, henceforth, to study your wishes better. I had set myself against going to school; but now, if papa and you think it best, I am willing to go, and I will work as hard and patiently as ever I can."

That is my own brave Margaret! But, dearest, I was not, even in my inmost thoughts, accusing you of ingratitude to your father or to myself. There are some things we would like to see corrected, as you know right well; but you are on the whole an obedient, loving child, and we do not complain. Margaret, my love, you think the gentleman who was saved last night owes much to Gilbert, because he risked his life for him?"

"Who would not, mamma?-and a stranger, too!" But I knew now to what the conversation tended. I saw what mainma meant.

Mamma wnet on:—" There was One who did more than risk His life; He laid it down not for friends, not for strangers merely, but for foes,for those who were in rebellion against Him! That life was forfeited for you, Margaret; what return have you made ?"

I could only hang down my head, and wipe away my fast rising tears. I knew that as yet I had not made the only return which my Heavenly Friend would approve and accept—I had not given Him my heart, my love! I had not presented myself a living sacrifice, as my reasonable service unto the Lord. I was not sure that I even wished to give myself up entirely to Him who was at once my King and Saviour, and I knew that the offering, to be pleasing in His eyes, must be vol-untary and entire; and yet, but a few hours be-fore, I had been on the brink of another world, and my life had been spared, while others were sparkling waves on which my eyes now rested Was my heart not hard indeed that I refused,that I hesitated to consecrate to the merciful Sparer the life which had been snatched from a watery grave? I thought of the drenching spray on St. Eldred's Pulpit, of the billowy roar, of the relettless wind, of the midnight darkness, of my own hopeless dread, and of Alice's peaceful trust in the Unseen! I thought, too, of the Providence that had restored me to my father's arms, of the orphaned, desolate Miriam, and of the dead woman is the shadowed room, and I wondered how it was my heart did not melt. But I comforted myself with the thought, that, after all, I was only a child, and should be different some day. And then my conscience said, "Scarcely a child in years, a woman in many things; for you understand perfectly that you are afar from the loving God, and that you must be brought nigh to him ere you can be happy. As far as personal responsibility goes, you are essentially a woman !"
And herein lies the essential difference between the effect
And again my heart answered, "Even so! it is true;—but not just yet! Presently I will go to HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Christ a must enjoy the days of my youth;

the world first, then the eternal kingdom !" A little while afterwards papa came back with little Miriam in his arms. The sweet childish face was white and swollen with tears, and papa told us at another opportunity, when he and mamma and I were alone together, how she had flung herself on her dead mother's neck, and kissed the cold lips frantically, and poured out a torrent of passionate lament and farewell in French; and then how she had knelt by the sofa, as it seemed in an agony of prayer, and then how she had risen up very pale and sad, but quite calm, and even with a light shining out from her deep violet eyes,—a light of stedfast hope and perfect trust, and quiet, patient waiting,—a light that seemed to tell how the link between her and the still form upon the sofa was not broken, only loosed—for a little while.

when full womanhood comes upon me; when the morning of life is glowing into noon,—then I will come and say, 'Lord, here I am, and all that I have is Thine!' But not yet—not yet; self and Several days more, and we laid Mrs. Downing to rest in the peaceful churchyard of North Combe. Around her were the green hills and the breezy heights, and the solemn, ever-changing sea, that chanted day and night its grand Te Deums to its Lord and King. And flowers bloomed upon the soft and fragrant turf, and the honeybee hummed about the gray head-stones, and the old church bells chimed out their Sabbath wel-come; but she, we knew, was where there "is no more sen," and one eternal day of rest. And Miriam became to my father and mother as anothor daughter; and sometimes, but not always, I felt that she was my sister.

A Good REPLY.—Lord Bollingbroke once asked Lady Huntingdon how she reconciled prayer to God for particular blessings with absolute resignation to the Divine will. "Very easy," answered her ladyship; "just as if I were to offer a petition to a monarch of whose kindness and wisdom I have the highest opinion. In such a case my language would be, I wish you to bestow on measuch a favor; but your Majesty knows better than I how far it would be agreeable to you, or right in itself to grant my desire. I therefore content myself with humbly presenting my petition, and leave the event of it entirely to you."

PREVENTION.—Every year only adds to my onviction that in intemperance the "ounce of revention" is worth a whole ton of cure. But a fraction of confirmed drinkers are ever reformed. This is the argument for renewed effort to save the young. This fact should point every sermon and every appeal from the pulpit. The fact should cantion the physician to keep away cleoholic medicines from patients who can be aved by any other method. Christians and parriots! let us enter upon a new moral campaign against the intoxicating cup—an educational work in the great elementary truths that no man a good enough to be trusted to keep a drinking nouse, and no man is strong enough to be trusted to enter one.

COMMON SENSE VIEW OF THE MODE IN WHICH Hostetter's

STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them as facts, and as far as this GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT s concerned, it is proposed to gratify them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neutralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an expleded humbug. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential properties of any and every substance in the Materia Medical perties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica, and there is no herbial extract which it will not hold in so lution, with all its preventive and curative virtues unimpaired.

Now the pure liquid stimulant of which Hostetter's Bitters are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of Rye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swittly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and siterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be without their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect

Good monongahela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impregnated with the vegetable elements employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS. Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are in-describable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full feeling about the stemach and abdomen a bloated and full feeling about the stemach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stemach between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, occasional nauses, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpitation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensation in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphragm, feebleness and disinclination for exertion, and sometimes emaciation and a corpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS. HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of bless, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting info an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chronic facture. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent remember that it is not is preparing to attack, and badle it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to cure. It is believed that there is no case of chronic indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIGESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIETIES.

ESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIATIES.
