PY IN THE SPELLING CLASS.

as running to school one fine morning as a lamb. She had a round cake in at, mamma's sweet kiss on her cheek, and ier heart. Was not that enough to make child happy ?

Base she reached the school house, Sarah nsand Bell Crane came flying to meet her. "O Lity," they both cried, seizing her by the m in a highly excited manner.
"What?" asked Kitty.
"S p and I'll tell you," said Sarah in a loud asked Kitty. Ah," said Sarah, tossing back her head, " ] uld not mind that." What shall I mind then?" asked Kitty; ho's better to mind than Jesus?" The little girls did not quite dare to say they ere, so they called Kitty "you ugly," and ran

Kitty did not like to be called "you ugly," as deed who would? She had little time, however, to dwell on this breach of good manners before Tom, spying her coming, rushed out to meet

"O Kitty," he cried, in a pitiful tone, "I can't find my speller. Won't you please let me audy with you?" Have you not studied the lesson a bit, Tom?"

asked Kitty. " Not a bit; and I shall miss, I know. I feel dreadfully," said Tom, looking quite ready to Kitty ran into the school-room and brought but her spelling book. Then they sat down on a prown rock under the elm-tree, and studied and studied. Kitty showed him the hardest works, and told him to study those most.

School began, and by and by the second spelling-class was called to recite. Tom was at the head, Sarah Stevens next, Bell next, then Kitty, and four or five others below Kitty. Only three days before, Tom got above the three girls, and took his place at the head of the class. Of course, Tom was highly pleased, as a boy never before in so high a position was likely to be, and the wonder is that under such circumstances he should lose his speller, only that good fortune does not cure us of careless habits. The spelling went on, and Tom, if he had any fears, had pretty much let them go when "colonel" came along in the column. Colonel began somewhere at the foot of the class. One, two, three missed it, and the schoolmistress put it to Tom. "Kurnul," said Tom, with the air of a boy that knows. Sarah and Bell tittered. "We are in three syballs," said Kitty, hal

"Three syllables," said Miss Agnes, smiling. Kitty blushed. " That's telling," whispered Bell, knocking Kit ty with her elbow. Tom looked very red, and the colonel proving too much for him, Miss Agues had to say, " Next."

"Cnr lnr-nel" that was the wav Sarah spolled it. She tried again with no better success, when Bell took it. How mortified Sarah looked! Bell was a bewildered little girl. If they had tried all ways, what way to spell it was left for her? The right way, to be sure, and that she did not know; so it came to Kitty.

"Kitty, try," said Miss Agnes. Kitty spelled it right the first time, and so modestly they could hardly believe it. She looked really sorry to go above. Tom cried. He tried hard to keep in, but the disappointment would out; and after the class was dismissed, he kept his head down on his seat. Miss Agnes was both sorry and glad; sorry that he had lost his place, but glad that he did care, because she thought it proved he took more interest in his studies than he used to. Miss Agnes never liked to see "don't care" with any of her little scholars. At recess Kitty went to poor Tom, and putting her arm round him tried to comfort him. "I don't blame you, Kitty," blubbered Tom, " but I can't help feeling bad, for father promised me something if I'd keep at the head for a week, and now I've lost it." That was a loss Kitty had no consolation for, only this: she slipped her hand into her pocket, and broke off hat her cake, which she put into Tom's hand. It was all she could do. Tom bit it, and the bite was consoling. Presently Sarah came up, and Bell.

"O Kitty, haven't you a bite for us?" they said. They forgot they called Kitty "you ugly." She gave them a bite, and so the cake comforted all round. The cake from her pocket, or was it the love in her heart, that comfortedwhich ? I think it was love.

THE ONLY TREASURE.

So Walter Lansden is really going to sea?" said Aunt Eunice to a neighbour. "Well, I don't know that I am exactly pleased at the idea, but then, if the boy is bent on it, why I suppose it is the wisest thing his mother can do. I'll go to work and make him something for an outfit," Aunt Eunice was related to the whole world. It seemed as natural, looking on the kindly face, to call her aunt, as it did to love her for her genial smile and pleasant words.

Walter Lansden was a noble little fellow of fourteen—a boy of generous impulses, and unwilling to wound his friends by saying that mighty word, No! Hence he was in danger of rain, both soul and body.

"Tell Walter I've got something else to give him," said Aunt Eunice, in a kind note that accompanied a number of useful presents. "He can come a day earlier and have his trunk put down here—it's only a few steps to the wharf where the 'Flying Cloud' lies."

Walter's heart beat fast.

" I warrant it's a nice present," he said to himself; " maybe ten or twenty pounds to commence

This was the hope that cheered him during his lonely journey. Thoughts of his widowed mother and his two dear sisters kept the tears in his eyes, to be sure; but youth is buoyant, and he built castles in the midst of his regretful thoughts.

Toward evening he found himself in the city—the great wilderness of gloomy houses, hurrying people, and crowded streets—worse wilderness to some than the dreariest wastes. Glad enough was Walter to meet Aunt Eunice, and it was not long before he sat by her side chatting in high glee. That evening and the next morning Aunt Eunice and pathing about the present. If his face had expressed disappointment, Aunt Eunice would have had a sorry picture to keep in her bosom of her only living nephew.

I grew very reckless - gave myself up even to drink and gaming, till one dark hour found me penniless in a foreign city, sick and hungry. I wanted food -I had sold everything but my Bible-that I took at last, but I could not dispose of it. At a venture I asked a kind looking man, the tears running down my cheeks, to buy my Bible, for I was starving. Oh, aunty! he proved to be a Bethel preacher. He took me home, fed me, clothed me, nursed me, and there I read that precious book. I saw that in it this good man found all the rules that made his life beautiful. I saw what I was, and what I must do in order to be saved. Blessed, blessed book, it has sent me

He is most careful in keeping none but the fluest quality Medicines, and imports direct from the celebrated house of Treacher & Co., London. He has taken the pre-aution of keeping medicines for prescriptions in cases separate from the retail department—Poisons having a distinct place. which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by soften-ing the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS. We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years, and can say, in confidence and truth of it, what we have never been able to say of any other medicine —NEVER HAS IT FAILED, IN A SINGLE INSTANCE,

—NEVER HAS IT FAILED, IN A SINGLE INSTANCE, TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatistaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfilment of what we here deciare. In exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered. ministered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERILNCED and SKILFUL NURNES in New England, and has been used with never failing success in

THOUSANDS OF CASES.

It not only relieves the child from pain, but invigorales the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve GRIPING IN THE BOWELS AND WIND CHOLIU, and overcome convulsions, which it not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhoea in Children, whether it apiess from teething or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints, Do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be Sure, yes absolutely sure, to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used.
