(From the Christian World.) MARGARET TORRINGTON:

OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE. By the Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Julian's Wife," "St. Beetho's," do.

IN THE EAST ROOM.

"Now, I declare!" was her salutation. never did see such a troublesome child in all my life. Wasn't you put to bed, Miss Margaret, and told expressly as you was to lie there till you were told to get up again !"

"That was so long ago, Susan, and I have had a fine sleep, and now I am quite well, and I cannot lie in bed in the day-time unless I am sick." "Get you into bed, Margaret, this instant. If the master could see you standing there with your naked feet, and you nearly drowned last

"Oh, tell me, Susan, how is papa?" "I won't tell you nothing, if you don't get into bed again this minute, you naughty girl." Under compulsion, therefore, I returned to my couch, and Susan drew the bed-clothes over me, done ten years before on fronzing Christmas

But, Susan, I am hungry, and I have had no breakfast.

"To be sure you haven't. We've been in and ont—the missis and me—twenty times, but you were always as sweetly asleep as flowers on a summer-night. The missis wanted you to be waked, that you might have some food; but the master said you were to sleep on till you awoke of yourself, and you were on no account to be disturbed. But now I'll bring you a cup of coffee and an egg in no time."

"One minute, Susan dear, -is papa the worse for last night?"

" Well, you couldn't expect him to be any better for it; we are all the worse of it,-I'm that trembling I can searcely stand. I do hope, Miss Margaret, this will be a warning to you.'

"A warning against what, Susan?"
"Against being so wilful and tomboy-like, Miss Margaret. You aren't a bit like a young lady Them Tredgolds are all very well, but you are Miss Torrington, and the Torringtons are as good a family as any in the country, and your great

"Oh, please do not tell me that again, Susan; I really care nothing about my great grandfather; -only I hope he is safe in heaven. Tell me all about papa and mamma. And where are Alice

To which Susan only replied by patting the bed-clothes well down about my shoulders, and promising that I should know ever thing when I had eaten something. I pleaded hard to get up there and theu, but was informed that such a proceeding was not to be thought of, and that I could not be disobedient, since shoes, and stockings, and frock, and other habiliments were not

And, triumphantly nodding, Susan went away, and I lay for another quarter of an hour, going over and over again the terrible adventure in which I had borne a part, and wishing mamma would make her appearance. But presently Supeared with a tray, and I was quite ready to sit up and eat what had been provided. When I had finished my egg and toust, and drunk every drop of the delicious coffee Susan had prepared, I found that I might ask questions without reprimand, and I discovered also that Susan was brimming over with intelligence which she was really eager to impart. So, while I trifled with my strawberries I commenced my catechism. " Now, Susan, where is papa; and is he at all poorly"

"He is not to call well, Miss Margaret. How should he be, just worrited to death with fright, and anxiety, and setting up all night? But he is lying down now, and I hope he is asleep." "Aud mamma ?"

"Your mamma is very tired, of course. I'm sure I wonder we are not all confined to our beds after what we've been going through. It was bad enough having you skylarking off in the most tremendous thunder-storm I ever remember; but it was a downright shame for that ship to come and get wrecked down there on the Serrars, under our very eyes as it were; and I'm sure one might think Dr. Torrington kept a mathe dead !"

"The dead! Oh, Susan, you don't mean- ?" "There now, how you look! There's nothing the matter, my lamb, only I'm a stupid old gowk, and I'd ought to have known better than blab it out like that, and you all but drowned twelve hours ago."

"But, Susan, there is not really anybody

"Nobody you ever saw, my dear; but a poor lady and a little girl were washed up from the wreck. The little girl was brought to with hot bottles and all sorts of remedies; but the lady was quite dead, ber bead bad bad a blow on the rocks, the doctor said, else she might have been recovered from the water. And she is lying downstairs, my dear, in the little east room we never use. You shall see her when you come

"I cannot," I gasped out. "Oh, Susan! I don't like death; it is terrible, and I cannot bear "But, my dear lamb, death comes to everybody in turn; it was very near coming to you, Miss Margaret, last night."

As I thought how near, I shuddered. But for one or two things, I too might have been lying cold and mute, perhaps in that very bed; perhaps deep down among the weeds at the bottom of the sea. Oh! to die and leave the pleasant world, the sparkling waters, and the sunny hills, and the dear, familiar voices of my home.

Susan resumed, "If we were like butterflies or caterpillars, Miss Margaret, and could be crushed out for ever, death would be a very dreadful thing indeed,—it would just be the end of everything; but we have another life beyond this, and I sometimes think, my dear, it is all as if this life. if this life was so many dark, winding passages, through which we must grope our way till we reach the heavenly temple that we read about in Revelation. I heard a minister say once, that our life here was only a beginning, and very small and poor, as beginnings mostly are, and to be carried on gloriously and perfectly in the world to come. I mind when you were ever such a little lass and had your first copy-book, and the master was teaching you straight lines and pothooks, you called it writing, and you thought it was; but we knew that it was only scrawls that would turn into writing by-and-by. The pothooks and scrawls were only training like; and so I do believe all we do here, that we fancy is so grand, is but just getting ready for eternity. My training is in the kitchen, and it is all cooking and cleaning, and faithful service; yours is in the prior, a learning of your tasks; the missis's is upstairs, and downstairs, and everywhere; and the master's is mostly in the world, doing good to poor people's bodies and souls; but it was last the Novelties of the Season, in will all come to the same and souls; but it was last to provide the world.

A COMMON SENSE VIEW OF THE MODE IN WHICH Hostetter's

STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the as facts, and as far as this GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT is concerned, it is proposed to gratify them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neutralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehi le of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbug. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential proand there is a o herbial extract wo ich it will not hold in so are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is weated there. The Exsence of Rye would andoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, backs and herba. But of what use would it be without their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely exerte. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the parest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

Good mononganela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most inneceous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when im regulated with the vegetable nents employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS. Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is a most impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are in-describable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of manking spring from a disordered state of the stomach, and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between meals, a dull heavy reging in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the might, and tation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amount by to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sense ion in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaph gu, feebleness and disjudination for exertion, and some r gui, feeblewess and dishibination for exertion, and sometimes maciation and a corpse-like pollor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional forments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best addice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS. The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate tha organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the organ. It the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and theroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of lite to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bune and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a claronic facture. Consider the first indication of uncasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not loo late to core. It is believed that there is no case of chronic indigestion that can with stand the remedial operation of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

This behef is grounded on twelve years' experience of the flicacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure of give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the oluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors om all parts of the United States and South America, ould at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction, but no, there is not one? The testimony, extending over period of more than a d zen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for the same that the BITTER'S are a SPECIFIC FOR INDI-
