THE LITTLE GRAVES.

" It's only a little grave," they said, " Only just a child that's dead ;" And so they carelessly turned away From the mound the spade had made that day. Ah ! they did not know how deep a shade That little grave in our home had made.

I know the coffin was narrow and small, One yard would have served for an ample pall ; And one man in his arms could have borne away The rosewood and its freight of clay. But I know that darling hopes were hid Beneath that little coffin-lid.

I know that a mother stood that day With folded hands by that form of clay ; I know that burning tears were hid "Neath the drooping lash and aching lid "" And I know her lip, and cheek, and brow Were almost as white as her baby's, now.

I know that some things were hid away, The crimson frock, and wrappings gav. The little sock, and the half-worn shoe, The cap with its plumes and tassels blue And an empty cril, with its covers spread, As white as the face of the silent dead.

"Tis a little grave ; but, oh ! have care ! For world wide hopes are buried there ; And ye, perhaps, in coming years, May see, like her, through blinding tears. How much of light, how much of joy, Is buried up with an only boy 1

----THE PRISONER RELEASED.

"Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin."-Prov. xx. 9.

(Concluded.)

All the school listened with silence and attention, as, after a minute's consideration, the teacher. began :

" There was a great and powerful Sovereign who ruled over an extensive kingdom. But wise and just as were his laws, formed to make all happy who obeyed them, there were rebels who rose against their King, broke his commands, despised his statutes, and most justly deserved the seutence of death pronounced upon them as traitors. Amongst these was a youth, whom I need not name, who, after having had judgment passed upon him, was confined in a prison named Condemnation, until the executioner, Justice, should be sent to carry out the sentence of the

"Very strong was his prison, very thick its walls ; the grated window, through which the light scarcely came, forbade all hope of release. Sometimes the youth tried to flatter himself with the idea that his Sovereign was too merciful to destroy him ; but then the sentence of the judge rose in his mind, -he felt that Justice demanded his punishment. Then he sought amusement to drive away the fear of death, and sometimes succeeded in his miscrable efforts to be gay; but still the thought of what was before him forced itself on his mind, and he never could be really happy."

"A wretched state to be in," observed Nay-the glory of God ; we are all sentenced, and just- Kid, Buck, and Dogskin. ly sentenced; and but for the hopes of a better life beyond, what would this world be but a prison ! But to return to the rebel in my story :-- him free f " His dying request, doubtless," said Nayland. " What words would you say were to be found in that paper ?" said Thorn to Edmund Batler, an intelligent boy, who was usually at the head of the school. Edmand reflected for a moment and then said, " If ye love me, keep my commandments."

Friend gave to the poor prisoner just as he set

Thorn saw that an answer was trembling on the lips of poor Seth, and encouraged him by a glance to say it aloud : " This is my commandment. That ye love another, as I have loved you." " Here, then," said he teacher, " is the motive of love. Remember," he continued impressively, "that this was our Saviour's dying request, when he who was innocence itself was about to suffer shame, agony, and death for our sakes. Is there one heart here so cold that it would slight the wish of a dying Friend;-so ungrateful that it would seek to make no return for love so exceeding great ? Can we think of his merey, and yet be nomercial ; and, by our unkind, ougenerous conduct towards our fellow-creatures, show that the highest motive has no power over our souls, and that we choose heartlessly and ungratefully to neglect the only way by which we can prove our love to him who loved us and gave himself for us f"

There was no immediate answer to this question, - perhaps the teacher did not expect to recrive one; but as the boys passed out of the school-room, when the lessons were over, Thorn saw with a feeling of pleasure young Nayland walk up to Seth Delmar, and, while his cheek flushed crimson, whisper something in his ear, to which the poor boy replied by warmly grasping his hand. And Seth was no logger persecuted in the school, despised by his companions, or taunted with his sin. The boys had learned to show more indulgence to the failings of others, from having a truer knowledge of their own; and finding that they had all broken the great commandment, and had no hope but from the merits and merey of their Lord, they looked with more pity upon a poor fellow sinner, whose transgresstons had been repenter of and forgiven.

> No Feart is pure from evil ; none Can say before the flory One, I in my strength the race have run. Have fought the fight successfuly !!

In faith and virtue I have dwelt ; No proud, unholy feeling felt, Nor mocked my Maker when I knelt, by wand ring thoughts of vality

My first desire, in all things seen, To glorify my God hath been ; My lips are pure, my heart is clean-Thou know'st my soul's integrity !

Ah, no! far other pleabe mine, As at thy cross, O Lamb divine for thy dear sike, and only thine. 1 ask for mircy trembhugly !

My sins are more than I can count, Each day is swelling the amount ; All stained with guilt, I seek the Fount Or holiness and purity.

Forgive the d. b! that I coofess .-Wash out my sius, my off ints bless; And clothe in- with thy righteousness, In time and through eternity !

attire, he was reflecting upon his unhappy fat, bright light shone in his prison, and he beheld coming towards him a Friend, - one whose kindness he had long neglected, but who had not forgotten him in his adversity. The garments worn by that Friend were white and spotless; there was no stain upon them : they were such as befitted one of high estate, - of one of such rank that it might have been little expected that his foot would ever tread the daugeon of Condemnation !

"He addressed the young rebel in terms of love and pity. He told the condemned one that he had quitted everything, risked everything from pure love to save him from the death which he had deserved. He warned him that Justice was about to enter that prison, to shed the blood of the prisoner within ; that there was but one way of escape. If the rebel changed garments with his merciful visitor, put off his own rags to wear that white robe, he might yet make his way from the prison of Condemnation, and pass Justice himself in security ! The Friend, moreover, told the rebel that by using the watchword Faith, even the guards at the outer door would suffer him to go free; and that he would find outside a guide most trusty and safe, who would lead him to a place of security. Then, as the prisoner, with trembling haste, made the needful exchange of dress, his heart throbbing with the hope of freedom and, we may also trust, with gratitude to the merciful Being who was content to remain and suffer death in his stead, his Friend placed in his hand a paper, containing his last dying request to the sinner whom he had saved, and charged the youth, if not for his Preserver's sake yet for his own, to shun for ever those rebels who had led him into the guilt which was now to be stoned for at so fearful a price."

" And did he really escape, and did his merciful Friend really stay and the for him ?" cried young Browne.

"You may turn to your Bibles for an answer to that question, and there say who was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities; who came to us when we lay in deep condemnation, and saved us by giving his life for

"I begin to understand your meaning," said Nayland, thoughtfully ; " but I never dreamed before that I was a rebel, that I was in any danger of punishment, or needed such a Friend to suffer what my sins had deserved."

" And the white robe is the garment of the Lord's righteonsness f? murmured Seth. "Yes," said Thorn, " that which we must wear if we would quit the prison or pass safely the executioner, Justice. And this brings me to the point which I wished to explain, that salvation is only from the Lord, and that yet we must work out our salvation with fear and trembling. Who can deny that the prisoner owed his escape wholly and entirely to the mercy of his Friend ?

" No one," exclaimed several voices ; "he had no power to help himself at all." "But now, suppose that the prisoner, while yet beneath the shadow of his dangeon, should yet beneath the shadow of his dangeon, should throw away his disguise as something quite un-heeded, should forget his watchword, turn away from his guide, and, notwithstanding the last carnest warning from his Deliverer, hasten to join the rebels again?" "He would be ungrateful, wieked, mad to do so ?" cried the boys; and Nayland added, "He would deserve to be dragged back to his dangeon, and suffer a worse fate than if he never had
