" THE ROBBING ROBINS."

A Rochester evening paper tells this story :washed some articles of lace, a lady's collar, lacundersleeves &c., and hung them out to dry. A day or two ago an enterprising youngster of the contents of a nest that a pair of robins had built. He found it occupied by a brood of fledgings, and under them he found the lace which had been missing."-N. Y. Evening Post.

Pretty little pair of thieves, Hiding mid the balmy leaves, Naught of ill surmising: Dainty birdlings, red of breast, Why you warmed your downy nest, This way, is surprising; Naughty robins !

Would not common moss suffice ? Proud ones! why so wondrous nice? Tell a kindly wisher. Lace, indeed ! there's not a bird Would not own the thing absurd; Even a King-fisher: Peccant robins!

Quite a fairy palace yours, Merry-hearted epicures, Reveling together!
O your heads were doubtless high, When your neighbors you passed by, Sybarites in feather ! Envied robins !

Has a maid with cheeks a-glow Wound this collar's woven snow Round her neck's white wonder? Have you seen her pearly arms, Veiling half their dimpled charms, These fair laces under? Whisper robins!

Ah! be this the case you plead, E'en the Court would intercede, That no cage receive you! Never jury in the state, But would envy you your fate, And at once forgive you, Happy robins!

GEORGE COOPER.

TWO LATE BREAKFASTS.

Breakfast was late at Mr. Smiles' house, one fine autumn morning-an unusual occurrence; but you know that there are some hours, even in the best-regulated households, when things seem to go wrong. The principal trouble was that Bridget was sick that morning, and when Mr. P. Smiles came down, of course there was no fire in the kitchen, and the table was not set; but Bridget lay tossing and moaning with violent sick headache. "I couldn't stand to get dressed, ma'am, let alone making the fire; for I'm kilt intirely with the pain in my head." " I'll see to the breakfast," said cheery little Mrs. Smiles, "when I've brought you up some medicine." So she administered the dose, and then set about her task. But the fire would smoke that morning, and the baby woke and cried. "Nelson," she called to her husband, "Bridget is sick, and I am busy; can you attend to baby?" "With pleasure," answered a strong, kind voice from up. stairs, and the pitiful cries soon ceased.

Harry was in the woodshed, splitting wood. Smiles came in, throwing "There, my boy, I'll finish this job. You run in and see if you can set the table something like the usual pattern." "Why, father, you said that you had to be early at the store to-day, and should not have time to come out here !" "Yes, I know ; but Bridget is sick, and mother is hard at work getting breakfast, and it cannot be helped this moraing." "Harry," he added, calling him back. "don't say anything about that to mother; it's no use worrying her with it now."

Harry smiled, and nodded comprehension, and was soon experimenting upon setting the table. "Pshaw! these are the supper plates! I'm sure I don't know father's napkin-ring from mother's.

There I forgot the butter knife!' and so on.

Meanwhile, Mr. Smiles split his wood industri-ously, thinking to himself, "I suppose I might have gone to the store without waiting for breakfast But then that would have troubled Jenny. And what can one do better with his morning than to make his wife comfortable, even though he loses a customer by it for once? What's the good of customers, or the money they bring, but just to buy comfort, which it is poor economy to buy at the price of discomfort."

The bell rang, and he went in. "What a nice little breakfast you have made us!" he exclaimed; " and boys can set tables, cannot they, Harry ?" So there was a cheerful, even a merry meal, an hour later than usual, in Mr. Smiles' house; and then he went away, leaving a gleam of sunshine behind him in the hearts at home. kindled by his loving looks and comfortable

Acress the street lived Mr. Scowis, who breakfasted that morning at the same hour, having kept his wife and Carrie waiting while he took a morning nap, and then made a basty toilet. Unshaved and grim, he came into the breakfast room. " Draw down that curtain," was the first salutation; "this glare of light is horrid." Carrie hastened to obey, while Mrs. Scowls poured out the coffee with a sigh. "I cannot stand that noise!" he remarked again, "Caroline take that bird away !" So Carrie took away the canary's cage, and shut it up in the dark and gloomy par-lor, which wasseldom used—the only thing which dared to sing cheerily in that house. Then they sat down to breakfast, with their usual discomfort —Carrie nervously dreading the incessant admo-nitions not to eat so fast, not to take so much molasses, to hold her knife better, or to sit up straight; and her mother, a thin, pale, anxious-looking woman, apologizing timidly for every-thing she feared would vex her husband. "This coffee is not quite so good as the last, but it is the best that Brown has." "Why didn't you go down to Smith's for it, then? Half a mile is not so far to go, I'm sure." Then, after a silence, "This steak is overdone again; not fit to eat." "Susan thought we were to breakfast at half-past seven, and now it is eight." ELZ:HOAM

It was a relief when the dreary meal was over, and Mr. Scowls put on his hat and departed. "Get up, you lazy brute!" he growled, kicking the great dog on the doorstep, while the cat ran up the woodshed roof, and peered at him over the ridgepole, till he was out of sight. Theu she came down, and brought her kittens, one by one, out of their box in the cellar into the warm sun-

Carrie ran to feed the bird before school, and Mrs. Scowls went into her kitchen, to guard, with ruitless toil and watchfulness, against anything which might annoy her husband at dinner-time. So pass the days at Mr. Scowl's. Are you not sorry for them? One selfish man makes forforn and gloomy a home which might be as bright and happy as the sunny cottage opposite, if only he onld learn Christ's law of love. — Independent.

COMMON SENSE VIEW OF THE MODE IN WHICH

Hostetter's STOMACH BITTERS

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM.

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them as facts, and as far as this GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT is concerned, it is proposed to gratrly them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neutralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbur. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential properties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica. and there is to herbial extract which it will not hold in so lution, with all its preventive and curative virtues union Now the pure liquid stimulant of which are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of Rye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be without their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein hes the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone; and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Good mononganela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when im preguated with the regulable elements employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS. Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are indescribable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and full teeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between mells, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, occa-ional nausea, restlessness during the hight, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpitation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomana, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensation in the throat dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphtion in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaphregm, feebleness and disinclination for exertion, and some rigm, feebleness and districtination for exertion, and sometimes emactation and acorpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes.

The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fertify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS. The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that and this vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. It the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a chronic fixture. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a significant dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to core. It is believed that there is no case of chro-

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction.
But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dezen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient waterant for claiming that the BITTLES are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIGESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIETIES.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

Mr. J. Chaloner takes this opportunity of making his acknowledgments to Physicians, patients, and the public, for the confidence placed in him, as well as of their generous patronage of the past year.

In the preparation of prescriptions, &c., he has had a long experience—a most important matter—as new features are constantly being presented. He is most careful in keeping none but the finest quality Medicines, and imports direct from the celebrated house of Treacher & Co., London. He has taken the precaution of keeping medicines for prescriptions in cases separate from the retail department—Poisons having a distinct place. It always has been his endeavor to give satisfaction in this branch of his business, o that the public may send their prescriptions with entire confidence that they will be justly prepared.
