(From the Christian World.) MARGARET TORRINGTON:

OR THE VOYAGE OF LIFE. By the Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Julian's Wife," St. Beetha's," &c. "So He bringeth them unto their desired haven."- continued) DIFFICULT CIRCUMSTANCES. Still, there is little of the boy in him; he is as old in mind, and I think in manner, as some o Sibyl's former suitors, who were half-a-dozen years his senior. And, though I certainly think it is better for the husband to be the older of the two, it is really of little consequence where the disparity is of no great account. If a man truly cares for a woman, who in everything else is suitable, it is a very hard case if he must not marry her because she came into the world several or half-a-dozen years before him."

"I cannot quite agree with you, Holly; still, if Sibyl and Mr. Tredgold like each other, I—I hope they will be happy."

That I do not think can ever come to pass. But as Mr. Saunderson, in his bearish way, seems to have taken to Sibyl, I think it very likely that she will gain ber end." " So do I. But, Holly, what is all this to us? The question still remains unanswered, -- how am I to serve her in her projects? That she has a certain work for me to do, I cannot doubt, hence the startling change in her conduct towards me; but I cannot yet divine what it may be."

"I see but dimly. I do not feel that I ought to tell you what I think I see, lest I should be mistaken." "You are very prudent, Holly."

" And I want to speak to you about your cousin Tom, Margaret."

" About Tom, Holly ? What can you have to say about him ?" "Do you know that your name and his are spoken together?" " Holly? are you sure of this?"

" Quite sure. I do not like mysteries, Margaret, and therefore I will tell you why I say so much. A day or two since your aunt came to speak to me here in this room, and nurse was with me, helping me to go through my wardrobe preparatory to packing. Mrs. Crofton lingered some time, talking of various things; at last, looking from the window, she exclaimed, 'Oh there are Tom and Margaret gathering flowers; they have been taking a walk, I suppose. There was a peculiar expression in nurse's eyes as she folded up my black satinett, and presently she said, "Mr. Tom seems to like his cousin's society, ma'am ?' You know nurse is a privileged person, and says all sorts of audacious things, that no one else dares to utter; but I thought at that moment she had gone rather too far. Conecive my astonishment when your aunt, who has so often striven to impress upon me, and upon yourself also, the remembrance of your not being a Crofton,-replied, Well, nurse, I cannot of course shut my eyes to the fact. It is not what we should have chosen for him,-we did hope at one time that he was thinking of Miss Agatha Druce; but it is quite in vain to endeavour to force the affections of young people; and if we interfered between him and Margaret, evil might come of it. She is a good girl, thoroughly well-conducted, and she has good blood in her veins, and for a dark woman she is not bad looking; and my poor Tom, if he were baulked, might grow unsteady again. Marriage will settle him if nothing will; and really he has given his fa-

"I know that," I returned shortly; and then I sat silent, feeling quite confounded. Had a thunderbolt fallen at my feet I could scarcely had given me the key now to several little myshave been more startled, more dismayed. Holly marry Tom! my cousin Tom, who was over head and ears in debt, who had literally no bones in his character, who was fickle as the winds in his resolves, whose private life would not bear inspection. Why, I knew that Captain Druce had almost forbidden him his house. Marry Tom! for whom I had not the least particle of respect; towards whom L entertained the very mildest of cousinly regards, when, as was sometimes the case, I did not dislike him, No, indeed; sooner would I turn housemaid and scrub the floors for my living. Even if there were no such person as Gilbert Tredgold in the world, no threats and no entreaties could ever make me plight my troth

to such a man as Tom. After a while I told Holly this, and she seemed relieved. Presently she said, "1 am afraid you may be placed in very difficult circumstances, my dear. I think you could not de better than make a friend of Mrs. North, she is sensible, as well as kind and true; and I fancy the Norths know a great deal concerning your consin Tom. Margaret, I know that of him which I could not tell to you! He is a young man who is always sinning from mere laxity of principle. He is not, I think, what one might call innately vicious; but he is idle, and weak, and self-indulgent. I feel sure he never struggles with a temptation. And then, he is lamentably deficient in consciousness and firmness. If I were a mother, and he the heir to a peerage and a princely forhappiness. I am not quite sure, Margaret, whether l'ought to say it,—strong expressions, as a rule, are better avoided,—but I cannot help it, now that we are on the eve of parting,-I must tell you that I had rather hear you were gone to join your parents in a better world than I would hear of your marriage to your cousin." wo'!

"Holly, it is absurd! Are you sure you did not dream all this? I can assure you my sunt never gave me reason to believe she entertained so preposterous a notion, Sbyl speaks of her brother with undisguised contempt and aversion, she has never sought to recommend him to my favour. It was she who told me he had been rusticated. As for Tom himself, he never said one word to me that he might not have said to Sibyl, or, at least, to Nora, who is, you know, his favourite sister,—indeed, I think he has taken me in her place, now that she is gone away. He tells me more about his scrapes than I care to hear, and I hate his incessant sang."

"It does not always need words to convey a meaning,—such a meaning as Tom's is supposed

"Depend upon it, Tom would resort to words from sheer inability to express himself in any other way. He has no idea of any of the finer modes of demonstrating feeling. He is too coarsenatured, too much wanting in refinement of feeling, to reveal an affection otherwise than in the most unmistakeable English. Depend upon it, it is all a mistake; but I will be careful."

Early the next morning dear, good Holly left Cotswoldbury, and it was many a year before I saw her face again. After she vas gone, feeling particularly restless and dissatisted, I set off to Maple Cottage, where I had not been for some weeks. I resolved that I would nake a friend of centle Mary North.

The sumach-trees began to wear their bright ensanguined livery, and the Virginia creeper that mantled all one side of the house, and part of the lowly roof, was flaming in the noonday sun like a royal banner, and the feathery tufts of the seeded clematis hung gracefully about the trellised

MOUNTING PRINTS.

Patented February, 1867.

NE OF THE BEST PHOTOGRAPHIC IMPROVEMENTS OF THE DAY.—Since the discovery of Photographic paper printing, it has always been a great desideratum to obtain an adhesive harmless substance as a medium for mounting Prints. Gum Arabic, Destrine and other Gums have each had their day and have been rejected for various reasons...

After great labour and expense we have succeeded in in-

After great labour and expense we have succeeded in inventing and perfecting a purely Vegetable Gum of most extraordinary adhesive properties, containing no deletericus ingredients whatever. It is in every respect superior to Gum-Arabic for maunting prints. We begit to state it has the following advantages over every other Gum now in use in Photography:

1st. It does not Sour, Mould, Rerment or Decay by Age.

2d. It dries very quickly, and thoroughly. 3rd. Its light color, perfectly white when applied to paper. 4th. It will not injure the most delicate picture or color. 5th. It being sold in a liquid form saves all the trouble of boiling. 6th.

Being very thinly applied, makes a saving of lifty per cent. 7th. The mounted print is much more brilliant than with any other Gum. Many other qualities makes it the no plus ultra of adhesive Photographic Gums. One trial will convince all o he extraordinary properties of this Gum.

The Mason & Hamin Cabinet Organs were introduced. four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly ex-celling them, especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and co

Their success has been entirely beyond precedent, proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to donble their manufacturing facilities, until they have increase six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profes-sion, the most distinguished planists, organists, composers and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation nev-er before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. Fifty five Gold or Siver Medals, or other highest Premiums, have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the superiority of their instruments to all others.

For private use, in drawing rooms, &c., they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the Piano, being better fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the mest lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS:

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thelberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expense.

* * Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—B. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the emment Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing-room.—Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—George Washbourns Morgan, the eminent Organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisits tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—John Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Muretzek, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerrahn, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the public become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Ex
