THE CHRISTIAN VISION

Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Julian's Wife," " St. Beetha's," &c.

I was shown into a spacious room, lined with books on all sides and from floor to ceiling. The shelves and book-cases were of polished oak, the furniture was oaken also, a splendid Turkey carpet on the floor, and ample ruby-coloured curtains shut out the dreary night. A capacious velvet chair stood on the hearth, and looked invitingly comfortable to a way-worn, heart-sick traveller; but I had not the presumption to fling myself back in its luxurious depths. I knew better than to seat myself on the extremest edge even of such a throne, which I intuitively divined to be my uncle Crofton's chair of state, and altogether special property.

I had plenty of time to look about me and note the evidences of wealth which surrounded me on every side, for minute after minute passed away, and I was still left in solitude. I began to feel painfully nervous, and with every tick of the antique clock above the mantel-piece my sense of forlornness and my miserable depression increased. Was this tardy welcome an earnest of what I was to expect as an inmate of my uncle's house! Why had he not sent a servant to meet me at the station? Why did he not come now and set my throbbing heart with at least one kindly pressure of the hand and a word or two of welcome? Where was my aunt, who, after all, would be the person of most consequence as far as my comfort was concerned? and had any one told her that I had arrived ! These and a hundred other questions I asked myself as I listened to the noises of the house,—the ringing of bells, the going to and fro of footsteps, all subdued to dream like sounds by distance and double doors. and yet most audible to my sensitive ears as listened painfully for some tokens of approach.

I grew sick with apprehension and pervousness; but at last, when nearly half au hour had passed, and a strange feeling was stealing over me, half drowsiness, half faintness, I heard a great clamour in the passage through which I had reached the library. I heard a door bang twice, I heard a tramp of feet, I heard shrill voices, and certainly I heard a scuffle very close at hand. Then, with a wild burst as of autume winds, the door flew open, and in extreme trepidation I rose to my feet.

Of course, it was not my uncle or my Aunt Louisa who entered like a hurricane: it was a couple of small people, very handsomely dressed, and apparently in a state of fend with each other, a fine boy of seven and a girl perhaps two years older. I came to the conclusion that they were my cousins, as I knew my Uncle Crofton rejoiced in a very numerous family, varying in age from twenty or thereabouts to three years and six

The children came out and stood opposite me, and gazed steadily and unblenchingly into my face till I felt it incumbent on me to speak. Accordingly I asked in the condescending tone an elder naturally uses to strange boys and girls whose proper habitat is the nursery, "Will you tell me your name?"

I had addressed the young lady, but she made no answer, and only stared the harder; and yet she did not look very shy, I thought. I began to feel very hot and uncomfortable as the staring went on, and no notice was taken of my little

At length the boy burst out, "Who are you?" I replied that I was Margaret Torrington. "You are the girl that was to come, -the doctor's girl that mamma told us about? I hope you are going to behave well." " I will try to do so," I replied, crushing down the angry pride that was threatening to have its The boy went on :-" There are thirteen of us, and Tom's the eldest, and Sibyl is the next.

Sibyl's a stunner, she is! and she makes us all mind her. Even mamma minds her, though she doesn't mind rapa. And I'm Cuddie,-my real name's Cuthbert; and I think I shall make you call me Master Cuthbert,-nurse won't. And this is Gussie, and her real name is Augusta, and she will nip pieces out of your neck and arms if you put her monkey up. I dare say I looked my astonishment. I had never heard a child talk in such unchildlike fashion before; and no one will be surprised to learn that the impressions I received of my young cousins' character and early training were the re verse of favourable.

"How stupid you do look!" quoth Master Cuthbert, as I returned no answer to his last piece of information. "My! won't she nip you, and pull all those curls about, when you are dressing her, and giving her her music lessons. And ma says she is to be washed in cold water all this winter, and you'll have to do it. I would'nt be in your place, for if you make her clean she will serve you out; and if you don't, mis will give it you.

All this time the young lady was contemplating me steadily and currously. She was a thin, ugly child, yellow-skinned, large-nosed, widemouthed, and afflicted with frightful teeth. Her black hair was coarse and lustreless, and, refusing to curl, bung in long plaits, tied up with scarlet ribbons, about her neck and shoulders. My beart misgave me as I saw those elaborated plaits; for, if Miss Gussie's toilet was to be my charge, the hair-dressing as well as the cold ablutions, would probably fall to my share of duties. It was anything but an enlivening prospect. Presently she began to dance round me like a wicked elf, catching at my cloak and at my bounet-strings, and finally at my curls, to my extreme annovance and no small inconvenience. She did not speak, but the expression of her couning grey eyes was almost as eloquent as words. At last, being tired of her performance, she sat down on the hearthrug, and dragged out an unlucky little cat, who was sleeping under the velvet chair, and tormented it till it mewed most piteously. I longed to anatch it from her grasp, but scarcely dated to place myself in antagouism with her at so early a stage of our acquaintance. Cuddle held poor pussy's tail in both hands; Gussie gripped the ears, and in that position they held the wretched cars, and in that position they held the wretched quadruped aloft, and swung her furiously to and fro. The boy looked all the while saucy, defiant, and brimful of tricks and mischief; the girl look-spiteful, cruel, mean and treacherous. Just as my patience had quite evaporated, just as I was going to spring forward, and rescue by force of arms the poor tortured animal from her persecutors,—at the risk, of course, of being scratched both by eat and children,—the door opened a second time, and a respectable woman of middle age came in.

Cuddie dropped the cat, who, being held now only by the ears, could use her hind legs, wherewith she tore away so vigorously that Miss Gusaie was forced to let her go, after a vicious tweak, that eligited an awful how to many tond. that elicited an awful howl or mowl, and a deep scratch on Gussie's arm by way of retaliation. I was really far from sorry when I saw the blood, and heard Gussie's sharp scream of mingled pain

When you go to prayer, remember you go to your best, your beloved Friend.

Christianity was born in the heaven of truth and love; therefore it stoops with a special emphasis of compassion to the lowliest of earth.

A COMMON SENSE VIEW OF THE MODE IN WHICH

ACT UPON THE HUMAN SYSTEM

THIS is an age of inquiry. People want to know the why and wherefore of all statements submitted to them as facts, and as far as this GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT is concerned, it is proposed to gratify them.

All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seat of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neutralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but tralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too subtle an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It should the nerves, but cannot distribute through the system anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbug. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential properties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica, and there is ro herbial extract which it will not hold in solution, with all its preventive and curative virtues unim-

Now the pure liquid atimulant of which Hostetter's Bitters are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it obveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Essence of key would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and simple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be without their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the purest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when udministered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Good monongabels spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impregnated with the regetable elements employed in the preparation of the fitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS. Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different individuals, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are indescribable. It may be safely asserted, however, that half of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatnlence, a bloated and fall feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing seusction, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the stomach between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, feeble or unsteady appetite, occasional nansea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreshed feeling on rising in the morning, palpitation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amounting to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking seusation in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the disphrence emaciation and a corpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally complicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes. The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of

HOSTEITER'S BITTERS.

The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and shis vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and theroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. It is cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of lite to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental faculties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, than to expel it after it becomes a vironce fixture. Consider the first indication of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsia is preparing to attack, and baille it at once with this great repellant.

But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

This behef is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give rollef is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors roluminous correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and Nouth America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one! The testimony, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, is all of the same approving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDIGESTION, IX ALL ITS VARIATIES.
