(From the Christian World.) MARGARET TORRINGTON:

OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE.

By the Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Julian's Wife," "St. Beetha's," &c. So He bringeth them unto their desired haven."-

I went away at her bidding, confused, almost stunned. What could it all mean? I could only gather that Gilbert and his patron were to be invited to Crofton Lawn on my account. "It would not be for my honour," Sibyl had said, " that the rest of the family should ignore him after I had been seen with him publicly in Upping's shop, and, perhaps, by half of Cotswoldbury,—for on hot days they affected the Chestnutwalk rather than the Promenade,-walking with him on familiar terms." It might be so or not; but what was my honour to Sibyl Crofton ! I knew she hated me; I knew she would delight in my discomfiture, in my defeat, and, if she could dissociate herself entirely from me, in my disgrace and wretchedness. What then did this sudden move portend? How was I to interpret such unwonted courtesy, such unique consideration ? My honour, for sooth! Why, she would not have cared had all Cotswoldbury cried shame

I went back to the school-room with a heavy heart, although my interview with my aunt had terminated in a way so unexpected. Would they slander me to Gilbert !- what would they do !-And all at once I felt that I would rather stand well with him than with all the world besides. The brief interview of that afternoon had more than reinstated Gilbert in his former place. He was nearest to my heart in those childish days, after my father and my mother; -now my father and mother were dead. I was alone in the world, with none to love me; and I was no more a child. but a woman. Oh, if they maligned me to Gilbert Tredgold, what could I do ! how should I bear it ?

In the school-room I found Holly, sitting and sewing in the fading light. She looked up as I entered, inquiringly, and almost searchingly. And I answered her look by saying, "Do not be concerned about me, Holly dear,-you need not be ashamed of your pupil. Even Sibyl declares me innocent; her charges are withdrawn; but-"

"But what, Margaret ?" " I really cannot understand !"

"You cannot understand what? Do be explicit, Margaret; I hate riddles, and I am not the Sphinx.'

I told her all that had passed, repeating as well as I could word for word, every sentence that Sibyl had uttered. It was getting dusk now, and she laid aside her work and sat by the open window, looking meditatively across the grey, so-lemn hills. "Is it not strange?" I asked, after she had kept stlence a little while.

"Very strange," she answered, "very strange!" She paused, as if in doubt how to continue the conversation. " And this is the Gilbert Tredgold you told me about soon after you came here -the brother of your Bertha Tredgold ?"

"The same. Oh, how strange it all is! How strange it has been ever since that night the French ship was wrecked on the Serrars,-the night the poor " Little Gipsy " foundered, when Gilbert's old fortunes went down with her! Holly, as I looked at that well-dressed, well-bred young man whom I met to-day, I could scarcely believe he was the fisher-boy whom I used to watch mending his nets, and whom I taught such Latin as I knew myself. I wonder if he has the | SPRING AND SUMMER OF 1867. old Eton Grammar still! But, in spite of outward changes, he is just the same old Gilbert as ever, just the same bright way, and the same-the same religious way of looking at things?" "What do you mean by a religious way of looking at things !" "I can hardly tell you, Holly. It is not that he talks about religion exactly, but somehow there is religion in all he says. Oh, how we used to talk about life as a voyage! His began roughly enough, but he has been in smooth waters, of late years.

As far as you know, Margaret; but all is not gold that glitters. The young heir may have his trials as well as the fisher-boy of St. Eldred's." "I wonder if now he ever says, 'So He bringeth them unto their desired haven!" " Did he say that in old times, Margaret?" " Often and often. He used to talk so much about this voyage of life which we all must make. I suppose it was living by the sea and being so constantly on the water that made him adopt the image: it seemed far more natural to me then than it does now. And I entered into the idea very fully at the time. I was always wanting to be out among the billows, breasting the storm, cleaving the wild waves, and speeding on my course triumphantly; but Gilbert thought so much about the end of the voyage, about getting into port,-and he would talk with his eyes fixed on some distant point and his cheeks glowing till I could almost fancy be was really looking at the golden hills and the crystal walls of the city he was longing for. This was his desired haven, I

" And yours too, Margaret?' and prosperous voyage. But, Holly, 1 don't care to think about the end yet."

"It will not come a day the sooner for your thinking about it."

"I know it, Holly; but just at the very outset of the voyage I must give my attention to the realities of the present. I must live my life, not dream it. I will conjugate the active and passive verbs, if you please, Holly, and decline the neuter! I am content to love and to be loved, to hate and to be hated; but not to endure that which is neither action nor passing, but being, or a state of being, as Lindley Murray has it."

Holly shook her head. "Margaret, your passionate nature and your strong self-will will bring you into many a difficulty. In this matter of young Tredgold, be prudent—be wary!"

"Holly!" And Laushed up and turned away.

"There it is, my dear—your pride is so easily aflame! And I did not mean to vex you, only to aflame! And I did not mean to vex yon, only to give a word of counsel. Remember, Margaret, that I am more than twenty years your senior; I know the troubles of early womanhood. Oh, my dear, a girl of eighteen, spirited, impulsive, and orphaned as you are, with no father to protect, no mother to guide, no home to which you really have a claim, is placed in a position where she may be assailed by countless dangers to which girls who are more happily situated are strangers. I know what it is to fight my own way in the world; I know what it is to be wilfully misconstrued, to be causelessly, cruelly suspected; and I feel for you, Margaret, and I fear for you! for I feel for you, Margaret, and I fear for you! for your nature is a more daring one than mine; and you do not make God your guide, your ruler,—you do not commit your way to Him. Very soon you will have no friend in this house save Gussie, child who cannot help you; for I shall soon be

I melted into tears as I listened to that gentle and friend to forgive all the petulancies, all the ray wardness of which I had been guilty ever inte I first became her pupil. Losing Holly, I hould indeed lose a most invaluable friend. ere the Norths, certainly, as true and as ble as Holly; but then they were not al-out of my power to convey to them the exact impressions they would have received had they been hearers and eye-witnesses of what actually transpired. In difficulties so complicated as mine promised to be, there are always many delicate little points a thorough understanding of which one cannot convey to an absent friend in words,-What, on repetition, seem mere trifles, often turn out to be the very hinge on which rests the most important changes. The Norths would do their best, and they were wise as well as good people; but still they would not be with me, knowing all the antecedents and all the sequences of every case as Holly did.

Two days afterwards my uncle and Mrs, Crofton called on Mr. Saunderson. Two days more, and I was told that he and Gilbert were coming to dine, and that I was to form one of the party; and in the evening Sibyl came to me and said,-" You have no proper dinner dress, Margaret,you can't come down in a high frock and long sleeves. I am going to buy myself a new dress for next Thursday, and you shall have one exact-

If she had told me she would buy a rope wherewith to hang me, I think I should have been rather less surprised; and the more I reflected on this sudden change of tactics, the more uneasy I became. What did it all mean, and how could it end? Not well for me, I was assured, if Sibyl carried out her plans, whatever they might be. (To be Continued.)

AND STILL THEY COME!

STORMONT, Guysboro', April 17, 1866;

MESSIS. Rogers & Co.:

Gents:—Your Medicine has made another wonderful cure. Thomas Cooper, Esq., of Lachabor Lake (storekeeper), got some for his wife, who had been afflicted with E. E. KENNAY.

MASON & HAMLIN, MANUFACTURERS OF CABINET ORGANS AND PORTABLE ORGANS, Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Draw ing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day-Schools,

Lodges, &c. Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Pianoorte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less han either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; no liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; ope to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $500, $550, $600, and upwards. The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them, especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and ca-

of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

Their success has been entirely beyond precedent, and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturiers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamilio Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of remmendation may have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that

Fifty five Gold or Siver Medals, or other highest Premums, have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the superiority of their instruments to all others.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, &c., the MASON & HAM-LIN CABINET ORGANS are the instruments long wanted,—of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor hable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing rooms, &c., they are not less lesirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the Piano, being better fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTIN-

GUISHED MUSICIANS:

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist, Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expense.

* * Far superior to everything of its class I have * * * Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the emigent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrumusical tones, promptness and amoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing-room.—Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—George Washbourne Morgan, the eminent Organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston.—Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—John Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzek, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerrain, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class.—Thos. Hastings.—I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason.—As soon as the public become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only treable will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root.—Exciting much interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root.—Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion.—N. Y. Home Journal.—The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiger.—A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and benatiful as to meet the desires of the most astidious.—N.
