OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE.

By the Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Juljan Wife," "St. Beetha's," &c.

"So He bringeth them unto their desired haven."-PSALM cvii. 30. (Continued.)

THE END OF THE JOURNEY.

With these additions to my little library I prepared to leave the drab-coloured mansion, and Cecilia accompanied me to the coach-office, talk ing enthusiastically all the way, and declarin that I was a girl after her own heart,-one of he own sort, -and she never regretted anything s much as this abrupt termination of our inter course, which was not, of course, to interfere with our friendship. For my part, I was completel conquered ; a girl of fifteen always feels infinitel flattered at proposals of intimacy from a girl ser eral years older than herself; and being deferro suited me exactly. My carpet-bag was carrieinto the city by a solemn-looking servant-man and we ourselves tramped down the "ston stairs," as I called them, talking zealously all th while.

I shall never forget those hills, especiall Spring-hill, down which if one tumbled it seem ed to me one must irresistibly roll over and ove into King-sqaure at the bottom. And yet Cecili told me all the " hill-people " came up and wen down it regularly whenever they went into the city on foot,-the carriages, of course, had to take tremendous circuits : and on slippery win ter-days, she assured me the hill became a veri table glacier, and people frequently found them selves at the foot in an incredibly short space of time. Very unwillingly, A last, and with many embraces and protestations of affection, my ner friend and I parted, and once more, as the coach rolled on its way song Stokes-Croft, and as looked back on the hill on the summit of whiel I had reposed a night, I felt desolate and alone and I euvied secilia the home she so thoroughly failed to apreciate. At length came Weston bury and se train, and I took my seat in a second carriage with mingled sensations of dread and please able excitement.

prease guard slammed the door, the engine yelled as mly engines can yell, and we were on our av ; and before I thought I had thoroughly set tled myself in my corner, the carriages were slack ening speed, and some one, on a dreary sort o covered platform, was shouting something that might be constructed into " Cotswoldbury ;" it sounded very much like " Cotsalbry !"

Yes ! it was Cotswoldbury ; and, looking out. ] expected to behold some evidences of its superi ority to other places, and was quite confounded at the dreary, dingy station that met my view. But I had no time for discursive reflections, for there I was among porters and passengers in a busy little crowd, the dusk already gathering about us, and the lamps dimly burning, and making the said dusk visible, and I knew no more what I was to do, or which way I was to go, than if I had gone up in a balloon, and alighted in another planet.

" Any luggage, miss ?" inquired the guard.

" Uh, yes!" I shrieked, suddenly alive to the danger of my properties being carried on to Blackingham, the ultimate destination of the GREAT PROTECTIVE AND INVIGORANT is concerned, it is proposed to gratify them. All the physicians admit that the greatest difficulty they encounter in their practice is in conveying to the seal of the disease the medicament that will counteract and neu tralize it. Electricity has been tried for this purpose, but it is now generally admitted that the electric fluid is too suble an agent to be made the vehicle of medication. It shocks the nerves, but cannot distribute through the sys-tem anything except itself. Medicated electricity is, in short, an exploded humbug. But a liquid stimulant, as everybody knows, can be charged with the essential pro-perties of any and every substance in the Materia Medica, and there is no herbial extract which it will not hold in so-lution, with all its preventive and curative varues unimlution, with all its preventive and curative virtues mim-

PERRY DAVIS'

Hostetter's HUMAN SYSTEM.

"Why couldn't you say so before ?" grumbled the aggrieved functionary. "Time's just up. Make haste and show me which is yours. What's the name.

By dint of the exertions of sundry porters and my own directions and descriptions of packages, my trunks were at length extricated from the vast heap which the tarpaulin covered, and were hauled on to the upper platform, whither I followed them, wondering now all tremblingly what was to become of me! Having counted my bags and boxes, I began to ponder as to what I should do: already I was left alone with the railway officials, my fellow-travellers having disappeared, and people began to eye me rather curiously, as I stood helplessly by my luggage. Oh, if Cecilia were only with me! What a waif and stray I felt myself to be, thus stranded on the great world's desolate shore! Surely I had suffered shipwreck at the very outset of my voyage! Ob, how I longed for the little land-locked bay once more ! I was roused from a sort of reverie, into which, for a moment's space I had fallen,---a fleeting dream of olden days, of the childhood that now seemed so remote, and of Gilbert, and of the Lit-He Gipsy, dancing on the shallow waters of the creek,-I was roused by the station-master asking me where I wished to go I looked round into the foggy evening, and, feeling wearied and utterly wretched, I burst into tears ; and it was some minutes before i could explain that I was bound for Mr. Crofton's house, and that I had expected, or, rather, hoped, that some one would come to meet me.

"Going to service there-eh ?" said the tion-master, kindly enough, but abruptly.

I recoiled with horror : surely I did not look like a servant,-I, Margaret Torrington, late of Kelver House! With some natural indignation, I replied haughtily enough, " No ; I am Mr. Crofton's niece.

"Beg pardon," said the man instantly; "but I did not mean a common servant : I thought. perhaps, you were to be nursery governess, or something of that sort ; and I thought as they did not come or send the carriage for you, that you could not be any kin, or a visitor. But I'll get a fly for you, mist, and you'll be at Crofton Lawn in less than no time."

The fly came up, and the necessary directions were given ; and I threw myself back on the seat, feeling more miserable and isolated than ever. I never looked out, or thought about the road, till we rode through the handsome gateway, and past a lodge, and I knew that at last I must be at home. But, oh I what a home I What a be at home. But, oh I what a home I What a mockery of the word it seemed to call that state-ly mansion home ? And would there be a wel-come for me ? Would there be any kindly glance, or any gentle tones? As I mused thus, the vehi-cle drew up before the great hall-door, and the driver pulled the bell vigorously, and handed me out, as if I had been a lady of high degree arriv-ing in her own chariot. I felt as if I had no business to make all that bustle and my heart iness to make all that bustle, and my heart business to make all that bustle, and my heart died within me when a tall footman opened the door with a flourish, and, beholding the humble fly, looked round with an air which seemed to say,—" What's all this disturbance about ! I thought it was somebody of consequence." Feeling like an atom that was dissevered from creation generally, I walked up those imposing steps, and stood before the superb footman, and inquired if Mr. Crofton were at home. (To be Continued.)

I KNOW WHOM I BELIEVE .--- I know that my Redeemer liveth. I have stood near the grave, and I knew then my Redeemer lived, and that because he lived, I should. I have gazed through that powerful glass through which God reveals the invisible—the fresh open graves of my child-ren—and there, in the tumult and revolution of grief, I knew that my Redeemer lived, and that

Now the pure liquid stimulant of which Hostetter's Bitters are in part composed, is charged with invaluable vegetable remedies; and these, by reason of its powerful diffusive principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the principle, it conveys to every organ and introduces into the circulation. To use a common expression, it goes to the spot, taking with it just what is wanted there. The Es-sence of Rye would undoubtedly diffuse itself through the organization as swiftly if administered pure and sim-ple, as if mixed with the juices of tonic and alterative roots, barks and herbs. But of what use would it be with-out their healing, strengthening, life sustaining balm? It would merely excite. It could neither protect nor cure. And herein lies the essential difference between the effect of the parset stimulant when views alone, and the same of the parest stimulant when given alone, and the same stimulant when administered in the medicinal form of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

Good monongabela spirit is doubtless the mildest and most innocuous of all the varieties of liquor, but it only becomes a healthful medicine when impregnated with the vegetable elements employed in the preparation of the Bitters.

TO DYSPEPTIC SUFFERERS.

Under the general head of Dyspepsia may be classed all the varieties of Indigestion. Its symptoms are so various, and differ so much in different interidants, that it is almost impossible to classify them. In fact, some of them are in-describable. It may be safely asserted, however, that helf of the diseases of mankind spring from a disordered state of the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their or the stomach; and that the other half, whatever their origin, react upon that sensitive and important organ. Among the ordinary indications of Dyspepsia are flatulence, a bloated and fuff feeling about the stomach and abdomen immediately after eating, a gnawing sensation, or a sense of hollowness at the pit of the turned between meals, a dull heavy feeling in the head, freble or ansteady appetite, dull heavy feeling in the head, fable or unsteady appetite, occasional nausea, restlessness during the night, and a weary, unrefreated feeling on rising in the morning, palpi-tation of the heart, depression of mind, sometimes amount-ing to monomania, loss of memory, confusion of thought, sour stomach, with raising of food, and a choking sensa-tion in the throat, dimness of the eye, pain in the diaph-ragm, feebleuges and disinclination for exertion, and some-times emaciation and acorpse-like pallor. These are a few of the direct signs of Dyspepsia, but as it is generally com-plicated with specific affections of the bowels, the liver and the nerves, its victims have many additional torments, which are technically attributed to other causes. The best advice that can be given to any one who has the slightest predisposition to Dyspepsia, is to fortify his or her digestive organs by the daily use of. HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HOSTETTER'S BETTERS.

HOSTETTER'S BYTTERS. The disease proceeds from a lack of vigor in the stomach, and this, vitalizing preparation will tone and renovate that organ. If the gastric apparatus is in good working order, and can perfectly dissolve and thoroughly assimilate the food submitted to its operation, there will be no dyspepsia. If it cannot do this, it requires reinforcement, and the best of all reinforcing agents should be forthwith resorted to. The stomach is the commissary of the system. It supplies the elements of life to the whole body. In it is prepared the material of blood, muscle, bone and fibre, and if it fails to purvey that material in sufficient quantity and of a proper kind, the whole body suffers, and with it the mental facul-ties. Therefore protect the "Commissary Department." Don't let the enemy obtain possession of it. It is easier to prevent disease from getting into an organ, then to expel it after it becomes a chronic fixture. Consider the first indi-cation of uneasiness in the stomach as a sign that dyspepsis is preparing to attack, and baffle it at once with this great repellant.

repellant. But if it is too late to prevent, remember that it is not too late to cure. It is believed that there is no case of chro-nic indigestion that can withstand the remedial operation of

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This belief is grounded on twelve years' experience of the efficacy of the preparation. The first instance of its failure to give relief is yet unchronicled. If it ever had failed, the voluminons correspondence addressed to the proprietors from all parts of the United States and South America, would at least include one letter expressing dissatisfaction. But no, there is not one 1. The testimory, extending over a period of more than a dozen years, I till of the same ap-proving tenor. Certainly this is a sufficient warrant for-claiming that the BITTERS are a SPECIFIC FOR INDI-GESTION in ALL ITS VARIATIES. ESTION, IN ALL ITS VARIATIES
