(From the Christian World.) MARGARET TORRINGTON

OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE. Author of " Violet Vaughan," " Sir Julian's Wife," St. Beetha's," &c.

" TO BE, OR NOT TO BE:"

I had made my protest, I had struggled as long as I could, and now I sat feeling perfectly help-less and exhausted. I was so weak and so bewildered that I believe if they had brought a clergyman and a special license at that moment I should in very despair have uttered the irrevoca-ble "I will." Sybil came down and dressed me for the drive without an effort of my own. Mrs. Crofton poured out a glass of wine and held it to my lips till I drank it. Then came Tom, looking sad and subdued, and with a deferential—nay, a chivalrous air I had not imagined to be in him, drew my trembling arm in his, and led me to the carriage. I could resist no longer, and I went without a word; but I scarcely knew where I was; and the shining sea and the green hills swam before my eyes as I took my seat in the pretty little pony phæton, with my cousin at my side.— Mrs. Crofton at the last moment excused herself, and to my horror I found that I was to have a tete-a-tete with Tom.

But he had the discretion not to allude to the conversation of the previous night. He seemed really sorry that I was suffering, really miserable that I refused to smile upon him; and for the first time it dawned upon me that Tom, in his own peculiar way, really did love me, and proba-bly would "go to the bad," as he phrased it, if I disappointed him. Then I began to think whether, after all, I had better not succumb. There was no one else who cared for me so much-no one over whose future I had the least control.-Even now, Tom was greatly changed for the bet-ter; might not my influence as a wife produce still greater and permanent changes ? I had had my own dreams about love, -what girl has not? -and they had faded away into nothingness. Would it not be better to accept my fate ? At least I might do Tom good, and, perhaps, I should in time be quietly, rationally happy. And the temptation grew upon me as we drove along the pleasant Woodport-road; and Tom talked, with only a very slight admixture of slang, about varions things, in which we all were interested. He did not plead his cause again, yet in every tone and glance there was the devoted lover. We came back another way, and, just as we reached a certain point where several roads converged, we came upon Gussie and Gilbert Tredgold returning from their rambles. Gilbert looked rather steadily and gravely at me; and I could see that Gussie was very much surprised.

We reached home before them, and, as Tom handed me from the carriage, he said in a low garet, mayn't Lhope just a little? Don't be so hard upon a fellow. Will you think it over once more?"

And I answered, "I will think it over, as you ask me so urgently, Tom; but do not imagine that I can change my mind."
Yet, as I spoke, I felt that I was wavering. It was so difficult to resist, so easy to consent—at least, in the present; and Tom perceived that was not so steadfast as I had been, and he seemed

"When will you let me speak to you again?" he whispered, as he led me into the house. "To-morrow evening. I will tell you finally whether it can be or not."

"Thanks, thanks, dearest Margaret! Oh, we shall be happy after all!? And away he ran to report progress, doubtless, to his mother.

ANOTHER PROPOSAL.

I was really ill that day, and unable to think calmly. I wished not to come down to dinner. but my objections were overruled by Mrs. Crofton, for I really had not strength to dispute the question with her. Besides, she spoke authoritatively, and old habit of obedience, prompt and un-questioning, prevailed. To my great relief, Mr. Saunderson and Gilbert, were not present. For the first time. I think, since our arrival at Cleevesuper-Mare, they dined in their own lodgings .-My uncle, also, was absent, so that our party was a small one, and every one seemed inclined to be gracious, Mrs. Crofton peculiarly so. As for Tom, poor fellow, the gleam of hope I had shown him had evidently raised his spirits to the very zenith, and he devoted himself to me in a way that would have been most entertaining had it not been the demonstration of what involved so much. As it was, I wished he would be less attentive, and allow me to eat, or rather not to eat, my dinper in peace. I was too tired to talk, and yet he constrained me to keep up some kind of conversation—if fragmentaay remarks, and answering at cross purposes, can be so considered. At last, I told him that my head ached, and that I was very weary, and I begged him to be silent.

He said not another word; he only selected the finest fruit, and laid it on my plate, and pour-ed me out a glass of special claret, supposed to be highly restorative in cases of nervous headache. After a little while, Sibyl suggested that I should lie down again, but I said I would rather take a solitary walk, and if I might be permitted to go out unaccompanied I should be glad.

"Permitted, indeed!" returned Tom. "I should think so! Who is to say you uay? I will take care that your wish shall be respected, and I promise not to cross your path; and if anybody else presumes to do so," and he looked fiercely at Sibyl, "let them look to it."

I went away thankfully, resolved on finding the road to a certain spot on the top of some distant cliff, where I was not likely to be disturbed. Gussie and I had been there once. We had climbed the ravine from the shore, and found ourselves in a charming little amphitheatre of rocks, with one strip of fragrant thymy turf, where antumn flowers still lingered in rare beauty. And I could get to it easily from the higher lands, for I had noted the path among the thickets that led to this quiet nook.

The bright morning had faded into a dull, grey afternoon, the breeze had dropped, scarcely a leaf was stirred, and the heavy air was sultry. Nevertheless, as I lost sight of Mendip Honse, I felt as if I had suddenly recovered freedom and the power of unfettered thought. Now I would sit mind as to the final answer I should give to m. As for those foolish dreams of mine, the ner they were out of my head the better. My seks glowed with wounded pride as I thought we utterly vain and unfounded had been the pes I entertained. Not only was I regarded hindifference by the one friend whom in all-world I would fain have love me dearly, but

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them, especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

Their success has been entirely beyond precedent, and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation nev-er before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

Fifty-five Gold or Siver Medals, or other highest Premiums, have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the superiority of their instruments to all others.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, &c., the MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS are the instruments long wanted,—of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing rooms, &c., they are not less.

sive, nor hable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing rooms, &c., they are not less, desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the Plano, being better fitted for all sacred-music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their hability to get out of order.

their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS:

I should think they, would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expense.

* * Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Receif opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am aequainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room.—

**WEAVERS TAKE NOTI of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room.—Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—George Washbourne Morgan, the eminent Organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—John Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzek, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerrahn, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general, class.—Thos. Hustings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the public become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury, I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Boot. Exciting much interest to trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen my thing of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion.—N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and stidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS must no employed by other makers. Among them are:

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL: (patented), most important invention, and greatly the best swell eve devised; being much more effective and easily used that any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, cannot be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for the swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it is a greatlence and simplicity.
