What Charlie F und to Do.

"But little boys can't do much," Charlie Russell said as he walked home with his mother from church. "Girls sew sometimes, and make clothes for poor people; but I cannot sew, and I never have any money to give away. Was Mr. Morrison quite right when he said everybody could do

Charlie looked up into his mother's face, and she smiled very sweetly as she answered:

"I think they can, Charlie."

"But what can I do?" "Occasionally there are little things within your reach. You can do favors for me and your schoolmates."

"But that isn't what I mean mamma. It is right for me to work for you, and then the boys often do clever things for me, so that's only fair play. You don't feel as if you had been generous or particularly useful."

"You want to do some great thing." "But please understand, mamma, that I don't feel vain about it. While Mr. Morrison was preaching, I kept thinking it over, and I wish he had told what boys could do." "Many of the things people find to do involve some sacrifice of personal indulgence, perhaps comfort. Suppose I were to ask you to run

"I'd go in a minute, mamma; but it would be pleasure. Sunday seems such a still, long day to me that I like to have little breaks in it."

down to Widow Thompson's this cold day?"

"But suppose I wanted you to go on a week day, in your play hour ?"

Charlie looked grave. " All great things, my boy, require some sacrifice, and children do not, as a general thing, feel inclined to give up their own comfort and plea-

"I'd do it, mamma," he said, after a moment's

"I believe you would, without much grumbling. You are a very obliging boy, for the most

"But still, that isn't it, mamma. I'd like to feel that I had made some one real happy. It was so good in consin George to send me a sled for my birthday, and save his pocket money for it. I can't do anything like that, because we are poor, and I never have but a few pennies at a time."

"Yes, George might have thought that he needed all his pocket-money, and I dare say he relinquished some pleasure for himself to give you a greater one. The way to learn what you can do for others is to find out what they need. and, if anything is within your power, give it." Charlie sighed a little. He could not see his way clearly, ambitious as he was to distinguish "After dinner we'll go down to Mrs. Thompson's a little while," his mother said, as they reached the gate. Charlie belped her prepare their simple dinner.

He was rather serious, thinking over Mr. Morrison's sermon, and his brains were in somewhat of a muddle on the subject. The Russells were quite poor, as you might imagine. Mrs. Russell owned her little cottage and garden, but beyond that, she was compelled to take in sewing to support herself and child .-Charlie was a generous-hearted boy, and very fond of his mother-perhaps a little more thoughtful than boys of his age usually are. On Sunday mornings he and his mother always went to church, which was quite a distance; but the remainder of the day did sometimes prove rather long to him. He used to coax his mother to take a walk, and she generally made some errand to sick or poor people, whom she knew would in-

So, when the dinner was over, and the dishes put away, they started for Mrs. Thompson's-a widow woman living alone with an aged and infirm father, and dependent on her neighbors for many kindnesses. Mrs. Russell brought her a loaf of bread and a slice of ham to broil, and after the first salutations were over delivered her gifts.

"Even if we are poor, mamma finds something to comfort other people with," Charlie thought. Then he went and sat by Mrs. Thompson's father, and the old man began to ask a few questions, in a tremulous voice. Had Charlie been

"Yes," was the answer in a pleasant tone. "Where was the text?"

Charlie thought a moment. "I do believe I've forgotten," he said, rather confusedly; "I can't remember the chapter and verse easily, but it was about giving a cup of cold water, and I liked it. Mr. Morrison said it didn't mean simply a drink, but that it stood for all the good and generous deeds one might do. "Very true. We can do a little."

Charlie looked rather incredulous.

"You are thinking, my little man, that a poor old person like me cannot have much opportunity. Yet I sometimes strive very hard to be pa-tient and content, harder than if I were strong and could labor for myself. I find it tiresome to stay here week after week, for now it is too cold to go out, so I have to comfort myself with the words: 'They also serve who only stand and So he had found a work to do, and not an easy one either, Charlie thought. He had been sick some months before, himself, and learned that staying in the house was exceedingly wearisome. Then he caught a sentence of Mrs. Thompson's: "If I only had any one to bring it. They'll be through by Saturday, I believe." "It was very kind of Mr. Yates," Mrs. Russell replied.

"Yes; I thought of asking James Hanley to bring it, but he charges so much." By this time Charlie guessed. "Did Mr. Yates offer you some wood, Mrs. Thompson?" he asked. "Yes; they are cutting timber down in the lot, and he told me I could have a load if I'd send any one to cart it. I must see whom I can A sudden thought flashed through Charlie's brain. "Mrs. Thompson," he began, eagerly, couldn't I draw you some on my sled ?, "You are very kind to think of it, but I am afraid it would take so long. Boys love to play, and it's right they should."

"Oh! I shall not mind a little work; I'll use my play hour in the afternoon, and draw you all I can."

When he encountered his mother's smile, he understood how pleased she was; and a trembling hand was laid upon his shoulder.

"The cup of cold water," the poor invalid said.

"Oh! it will be quite like play to me," Char-lie replied, with animation. "I'll come to-morso, after school on Monday, Charlie went to the lot where the wood-cutters were at work.— His mother had fastened a piece of nice thick carpet over his sled, so that the logs of wood would not scratch nor injure it. Then she had given him a rope to fasten his load, and Charlie set off with a light heart. He went three times, and there lay quite a pile of wood in the little shed. Then he took one or two turns coasting down hill, and ran off home, with the brightest, merriest face you ever saw. Tuesday he went again, but the next two days some incident pre-

The boys are going to have a sledding match morrow," Louis Ray said to Charlie. "O mo you'll be there with your new sled?"

What time will it commence?"
They're to meet about one, and are going to Cumming's hill. Won't there be a jolly though!"

boys were planning a gay time, certainly. It would just suit him, for in the morning he did errands and waited upon his mother, but the afternoons he had to himself.

He told his mother in high glee, and then went to finish drawing his wood. At the last load, Mr. Yates made his appearance. "You're a smart little fellow," he said, when he learned the facts. "We shall finish to-morrow, but you may come and take all you can. I think there will be a heavy fall of snow before long." Charlie started at this. Draw wood instead of having a good time sledding? That would be rather hard. So he went along very soberly in-deed, but at last comforted himself with thinking that he might do it in the morning.

Alas! poor Charlie! His mother had taken a cold, and was quite poorly: so he did errands, split kindlings, and waited upon her more than

"Now you must go and enjoy yourself," she said, after dinner, kissing him fondly.

He paused at the wood-shed. There lay the piece of carpet and the rope, and then he glanced at his bright sled--she was such a beauty, and This was the first match of the winter, and he did want to go. Suppose he asked mam-

Then he thought of Widow Thompson, and how very poor they were. He could play on some other day, but no one might offer her wood again. Besides, this was just what he was wishing for ast Sunday. Here was the sacrifice and the work.

It came pretty hard, to be sure. Charlie went backward and forward several times, then suddenly he micked up the carpet and went to work resolutely. Mr. Yates came round the corner just as he started with the last load.

"Did you get tired of sledding with the boys?" he asked, in a rather quizzical fashioc. "I did not go, sir," Charlie said, respectfully.

"You don't mean that you have been working here all the afternoon "Yes, sir."

Farmer Yates looked him all over. "Didn't you wan't to go?"

Charlie explained that he thought it best to work. "Though I hope I haveu't taken too much of your wood," he said.

"You're a brave boy, and Mrs. Thompson is welcome to every stick. I'll look in upon her some day." So. Charlie went home with an approving conscience, and told his mother the story. "It was a little hard, but I remembered what on said about giving up pleasure, and I am glad did it. I think there'll be a heavy storm,"

There was a great snow, and it drifted against the edge of the wood, making a huge bank, so that for some time it would have been quite impossible to cart wood. Mr. Yates went to see Mrs. Thompson, and finding how really needy she was, sent her many necessaries.

Two weeks later, when school closed, and the prizes were given out, another parcel was handed o the teacher for Charlie Russell—a very pretty set of books from Mr. Yates-and Charlie understood what had suggested the gift.

"But, after all, it wasn't very much," he said to his mother-"just giving up one afternoon." "A cup of cold water," and she smiled. "And I think I've found out how to go to work. I understand Mr. Morrison's sermen better every day."-Methodist.

THE APPETITE FOR

TOBACCO DESTROYED!!! Leave off Chewing and Smoking the Poisonous Weed, Tobacco i

Weed, Tobacco!

ONE Box of ORTON'S PREPARATION is WARRANTED to destroy the appetite for Tobacco in any person, no matter how strong the habit may be. Fig. 18 If the Parlies in Any Case the Money WILL BE REFUNDED. It is almost impossible to break off from the use of Tobacco by the mere exercise of the will. Something is needed to assist nature in overcoming a habit so firmly rooted; with the help of the Preparation there is not the least trouble. Hundreds have used it who are willing to bear witness to the fact that Orton's Preparation completely destroys the appetite for Tobacco, and leaves the person as free from any desire for it as before he commenced its use. It is perfectly upon the same glands and secretions affected by Tobacco, and through these upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing the poison of Tobacco from the system, and thus allaying the unnatural cravings for Tobacco.

No more Hankering for Tobacco after using Or-

RECOMMENDATIONS. The following are a few selected from the multitude of recommendations in our possession. | From W.P. Heald, Esq., Bangor, Me.]

I From W.P. Heald, Esq., Bangor, Me.]

BANGOR, Me., April 24, 1863.

I hereby certify that I have used Tobacco for thirty years past, and for the last fifteen years I have used two pounds per month. I have made attempts to leave off at different times—I have left off one year at a time, but always continued to hanker for it until I used Orton's Preparation, which has completely cured me of the appetite for Tobacco. I would recommend all who are affected with this terrible habit to try the preparation, which will certainly cure if the directions are followed.

[From E. W. Adkins, Knoxville, Tenn.]

[From E. W. Adkins, Knoxville, Tenn.]

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., August 5, 1867.

This is to certify that I had used Tobacco to such an extent that my health had become greatly impaired, and my whole system deranged and broken down. In June, 18-7, I purchased one box of Orton's Preparation, and after using it I found I was completely cured. I have not had any hankering or desire for Tobaccosince using the Preparation. I believe it to be all that it is recommended, and I would advise all who wish to quit the use of Tobacco to try one box of Orton's Preparation.

E. W. ADRINS.

[From John Morrill, Bangor, Me.]

BANGOR, Me., March 24, 1868.

This is to certify that I have used Tobacco for eighteen years; have tried many times to leave off, but have suffered so much from a dizziness in my head and gnawing at my stomach, that I have soon given up the trial. A short time since a triend induced me to try Orton's Preparation (sold by you). I have done so, and am completely cured. I did not in the least hanker after Tobacco, either to smoke or chew, after I began to use the Preparation.
