MARGARET TORRINGTON;

OR, THE VOYAGE OF LIFE.

By the Author of "Violet Vaughan," "Sir Julian's Wife," "St. Beetha's," &c.

"So He bringeth them unto their desired haven."—PSALM cvii. 30.

MY NEW HOME.

"What did you say to him?"

"I told him, that if I embraced his tenets, I should really become of his denomination, or, rather, of his party, whether he gave it a name or not; that I was quite satisfied with the rule and system of my own church, though it was no more perfect than other churches in this world; and that since I held the same precious faith with himself, and loved, and tried to serve, the same blessed Master, and had the same hope of eternal life in Christ, and Christ alone, it was of no consequence what we called ourselves and each other, or whether we called ourselves nothing, in a religious point of view, but Christians! I call myself a Baptist, and I am not ashamed of the name; but my chief glory is, that I belong to the Holy Catholic Church, of which the Baptist Church forms only one small section. He calls himself nothing except 'a brother in the Lord,' which I am sure he is; but he is as much a Baptist as I am, for he was publicly baptized by immersion not two years ago, only he won't call himself anything but 'a brother.' It doesn't matter, you know, my dear,—that is, it doesn't matter essentially; but I think it is a mistake, and a very silly one, and it confuses people's minds, and does harm,—all this matter about extreme views and peculiar points of doctrine. The danger is, that while we are trying so hard to establish things doubtful and non-essential, building up our own particular ism,—whether we give our opinion a distinctive name or not,—we should let go our hold on Christ: and it is for His glory, and not for any pet ideas of our own, even if we think we find them in the Bible, that we should be chiefly concerned!"

All this was quite new to me; and I was quite startled to find at the very outset of my Christian course such conflicting elements used among believers. I made no reply; for I could not be quite certain that I agreed with all that Mrs. Brown had said, and I wished to know more upon the subject before I talked about it. Still, I saw that she was right in speaking of all churches as mere sections of the great and universal Church of Christ; that it was impossible that men could agree on every point, but that it was necessary that all should be united to Christ, and so in Him to one another—in spirit, though not always in outward seeming.

Presently Miss Jane came home: she had seen Mrs. Clifton, and I was to call in Russell-square at noon next day.

THE GUARDIAN.

The bright midsummer days were at their longest when, through the kindness of Messrs. Piccolo and Grand, I was enabled to form a new and very advantageous engagement. Two Miss Brewsters, girls of my own age, or thereabouts, came up to to town that year for their first season. They were country-bred, and not at all accomplished, and, if a rich relative had not died childless and intestate, they would doubtless have remained in the seclusion of their own village, and have married respectably among the squirearchy or clergy of their neighbourhood. But girls with £30,000 are rarely doomed to "blush unseen," and they may, if they like, "shed they sweetness" on Belgravian air, especially if they are pretty generally presentable, and not encumbered with vulgar relatives.

Harriet and Charlotte Brewster were orphans, and they had been brought up by an aunt, the widow of a physician, who had given them an excellent plain education, and fitted them admirably for the sphere in which they seemed destined to remain through life. But access of fortune brought access of friends, and the mode of life that suited young ladies with only very moderate expectations was not precisely that which coheiresses with brilliant prospects might choose for themselves. The result of it all was that, when their year of mourning for their cousin had expired, they came up to town, still chaperoned by their aunt, Mrs. Elicott, and very speedily discovered that they laboured under manifold disadvantages which it would be as well to remedy as speedily as possible. One of the first things they endeavoured to improve was their music, their performance, both instrumental and vocal, being in thoroughly bad style; and in due course of time it came to pass that I was recommended and finally installed as their instructor.

They took to me amazingly; indeed, their friendship became at times almost a burden, chiefly because I had so little leisure at command that the claims they made on it, after and before my lessons were given, seriously inconvenienced me. They were most amiable girls, quite unharmed, it would seem, by the changes which wealth had wrought in their position.—Though not highly educated, they had superior minds and good taste, and they both possessed a fund of quiet, common sense, which would doubtless carry them through many difficulties. They told me all the simple story of their childhood and their school-days, and they confided to me some of their visions and aspirations for the future. They asked my advice on many subjects unconnected with their musical education; for they had somehow received the impression that I had large experiences of the world, and of woman's life therein; and they would have had me go out with them and join their parties at home far oftener than would have been prudent in my situation. Still, we became very intimate, and my interconrse with these kind, true-hearted girls, was certainly of great service to me, and roused me from the depressing torpor into which I had been falling at the commencement of the summer.

About the middle of July, being tired of the heat and dust of Portland-place, they resolved to spend a few weeks at the coast, and they earnestly importuned me to accompany them. I really needed a change, and nearly all my pupils were out of town; so, after taking Mrs. Brown's advice, I accepted the invitation as frankly as it was given, though for a fortnight only, on account of the importance of resuming my duties at the proper period.

We had been at Bayscliff more than a week, and I was thinking with a little sadness of my speedy return to Bloomsbury, when Charlotte Brewster came in one morning with an open letter in her hand, and a dissatisfied air upon her face, exclaiming, "It is such a bore, Margaret; our guardian will be here this evening. I knew he would join us during our stay at Bayscliff,—but I did not anticipate so early an arrival."

"Is he very disagreeable?"

"No. For an elderly bachelor, and a guardian into the bargain, he is rather nice! But I do not want him now, because, in common courtesy, we must give him due attention; and he will interfere with our arrangements, and you are going back to town so soon. We wanted to have you all to ourselves while you remained. I hope he will like you."

"Is he difficult to please?"

"I should say he is; but really I know very little of him; he has only been our guardian since we became wealthy damsels. We had about £300 a-year between us before all this money came, and auntie was our sole guardian; but when £60,000 came to be divided between us, it was declared to be necessary that we should have some masculine protector, who would take us and our fortunes under his kind care. Auntie was quite of this opinion, and after reference to our cousin's papers, it was decided that this Mr. King, who was his chief friend, and a connection by marriage, should assume a certain authority over us and our affairs till we were of age. I have only seen him twice; and he was very kind, but a little stiff,—a little of an old beau, with the manners, I should think, of the court of George III. Yet, strange to say, he has been living in America for the lost ten years; one would have thought his precise and antiquated style would have been rubbed way in that democratic country; but he seems, as far as I can judge, to have lost none of the starch of his original composition. But don't let me prejudice you against him, Margaret;—goodness is goodness all the world over, whether its style be free or starchy; and our guardian is emphatically good."

"I wonder a man, such as you describe, should care to live so long in America."

"Oh! it was duty took him there: and duty kept him there, no doubt; he is a man who would sacrifice anything for the right. He was going to be married once, long ago; and the lady deserted him for some other lover, and she and her husband went out to seek their fortunes on the other side of the Atlantic. By-and-by news came that she was a widow, and left with several children in extreme poverty; and Mr. King, still faithful to his first love, went out, as people naturally imagined, to marry if she would have him. However, they were not married; the poor woman was in very failing health, and could not, as she wished, return to England; her medical attendants told her, if she attempted the voyage, she would never live to see the land. So our guardian stayed on there, and comforted her till her death, which happened four years after his arrival in America. There was property to which the children had a lawful claim, and he promised her to remain in the country till their rights should be established; and remain he did, through a very tedious and complicated law-process, which, however, was successful in the end. Before he came away, he saw both the daughters happily married, and the only son comfortably settled as partner in a good commercial house. I think, having been attending to other people's affairs so long, he found himself quite out of employment when his American children, as he calls them, needed him no longer, and he was rather pleased when it was proposed to him that we should be his wards."

"Has he no real relations of his own?"

"I should say not, though I know too little of him to be certain. He had a sister though, about whom there is a melancholy story. She went out to India, I think, and died there,—was drowned, I believe, and her only child with her. She had married against the will of her parents, and was never forgiven, I am afraid. Altogether her history is a warning to young ladies who are inclined to self-will and disobedience."

"Went out to India, do you say? I wonder if—but no, it cannot be!"

"What do you wonder? What cannot it be? How strange you look, Margaret!"

"Something very strange once happened in our village; a ship was wrecked, and a lady formerly from India drowned; she was coming back to look for her brother, a Mr. King; and she too married in defiance of her relatives. I could not help wondering whether there was any connection between poor Mrs. Downing and your guardian!"

"Was that the lady's name? And was her child drowned with her?"

"No; but she narrowly escaped. She was taken from her mother's arms apparently lifeless, and restored chiefly through the care of my own dear mother. And this little girl, Miriam Downing, lived with us till our household was broken up, after the death of both my parents. My father and mother took the orphan child that Providence had committed to them, and treated her as another daughter. Afterwards, when I had to leave home, some good ladies, who kept a school in the adjoining town, adopted her with a view to educating her as their assistant and probable successor. She is still with them, for all I know to the contrary."

"How old is this child?"

"She must be about fifteen now. She was just ten when she came to us."

"Were no efforts made to discover this uncle—this Mr. King you spoke of?"

"Of course. My father did all he could to find out Miriam's relatives; but nothing ever resulted from his inquiries. Miriam herself knew nothing about this uncle, except that he had been very angry with her mamma, she scarcely understood for what. She therefore very naturally shrank from being given over to him; and I am sure she was glad when the search was over, and she was told that she must make up her mind to remain with us. She always spoke of the missing Mr. King as Uncle Cuthbert."

"There!" cried Charlotte, eagerly; "that settles it, I think. Our guardian's name is Cuthbert—he must be the long-lost uncle, and your little friend must be the niece he believed was drowned five years ago with her mother."

Of course, I felt very much excited, and very anxious to meet Mr. King. What a strange story I should have to tell him! and would he be pleased with the discovery thus made? No wonder we failed to find him when he was so far away as America. I could scarcely doubt that he and Mirrie's uncle were one person, the Christian name being similar, and at the same time so uncommon.

Late in the afternoon the two girls drove to the station, while I waited with no small anxiety to see this "Uncle Cuthbert," who had suddenly become so interesting to me; and the time lagged strangely that evening, as I strolled alone upon the shore, and watched the rising and falling of the tide, till the shadows fell, and the stars came out in the clear night-fall sky. I paced up and down the strip of land that lay below the shingle immediately in front of the cottage, straining my eyes through the gathering gloom to note any dark speck upon the long white Lyncombe road, and listening with a feverish impatience for the sound of wheels.

Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY

In the whole history of medical discovery NO REMEDY has performed so many or such remarkable cures of the numerous affections of the THROAT, LUNGS and CHEST, as this long tried and justly celebrated Balsam. So generally acknowledged is the superior excellence of this remedy, that but few of the many who have tested its virtues by experience fail to keep it at hand as a speedy and certain cure for sudden attacks of Cold—fully believing that its remedial powers are comprehensive enough to embrace every form of disease, from the slightest cold to the most dangerous symptom of pulmonary complaint.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONY.

From REV. FRANCIS LOBDELL, Pastor of the South Congregational Church, Bridgeport, Connecticut.

"I consider it a duty which I owe to suffering humanity to bear testimony to the virtues of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. I have used it—when I have had occasion for any remedy for Coughs, Colds or Sore Throat—for many years, and never in a single instance has it failed to relieve and cure me. I have frequently been very hoarse on Saturday, and looked forward to the delivery of two sermons on the following day with sad misgivings; but by a liberal use of the Balsam my hoarseness has invariably been removed, and I have preached without difficulty.

"I commend it to my brethren in the ministry, and to public speakers generally, as a certain remedy for the Bronchial troubles to which we are peculiarly exposed."

None genuine unless signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

OBSERVE THE NAME.

IT is well at all times to call things each by their own proper names, otherwise you may not get what you want. When you desire to have the best Coal Oil, that which is made from Albert Coal, and manufactured in this Province, ask for "ALBERTINE OIL." Should you call for it by some other name, where the genuine article is not sold, you may expect to be served with an inferior article. Always call for and be sure you get Albertine Oil.

Albertine Oil has no bad odor, will burn to the last drop in the lamp without depreciation of light, and gives universal satisfaction.

Whenever you meet with a bad smelling Oil or a bad burning Oil, you may be sure it is not Albertine.

ROGERS' MEDICINES

AFTER a test of Four Years before the public, are still increasing in popularity, because they continue to make cures unparalleled in the history of Medicines, as abundantly appears by the following, among hundreds of similar testimonials, from people of the highest respectability from all parts of the Lower Provinces.

There is no cause any reason why the most hopeless cases in any disease arising from impurities of the blood may not be cured, as well as General Debility, Female Weaknesses, &c.

Our ALTERATIVE SYRUP is beyond all controversy unsurpassed as a purifier of the blood and invigorator of the system. This no man can doubt who will look over the following

CERTIFICATES:

CANCER OF THE WOMB CURED.

Messrs. ROGERS & Co.—Gents: I have been cured by your wonderful Medicine of one of the worst diseases, as follows, viz.:—

I had been afflicted for several years with an internal Tumor, and four years ago I was taken sick with a fever; the old complaint also revived. I had a Doctor attending me, but continued to get worse; we sent for another Doctor. He pronounced it a hopeless case, and said I could not live long. He said the Tumor was then as large as a pint bowl, and was assuming a cancerous nature. I suffered more than tongue can tell. My friends expected me to die daily. They were called in to see me die, and I was reduced to a mere skeleton. I suffered in this dreadful manner for upwards of two years. I at length, as a forlorn hope, was induced to try your medicine. The first dose seemed to make me worse, and I became discouraged; but the Rev. A. W. Barss advised me to continue. I did so, and soon began to improve, and I am now well again, and a wonder to myself and neighbours. I feel as one raised from the dead. I am a young woman of 26 years of age. I state these things for the benefit of suffering humanity, and I cannot begin to describe the severity of my case—it is widely known in the County of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia.

Yours, with much gratitude, LOIS A. HATFIELD.

We, the undersigned, friends of Miss Hatfield, have much pleasure in endorsing all she says above, and much more might be said of this most extraordinary case.

MARIAH GAVEL,
MARY L. MCCORMIS.

ULCERATED CANCER CURED!

Who needs better proof than the following voluntary testimony of Mrs. HANNAH BALMAIN, of Wickham, N. B.:

Some four years since there came a lump in my breast, and at the time I did not know what it was; but on showing it to three Doctors, they told me it was a "CANCER," and for which the knife would have to be applied; then again, I went to a female Doctor, who has been in the habit of curing Cancers by drawing them out, but she informed me that it was deep in the flesh and too long seated, and therefore could not help me. Knowing that something must be done, I concluded to try your medicine, which I saw advertised in the VISITOR. Accordingly, I sent for a can of Ointment and Powders for making the Syrup, which I used without the slightest change at the time. I began to think it was a failure, but concluded to give it another trial; consequently I procured another can of Ointment and Powders, and from its use it gathered and broke in two places, and discharged very freely for about six months, after which time it broke again in another place, and one of the old Ulcers healed up, the remaining two still remaining, one of which ran for two and a half years, the other healing up in about two months after it broke, during which time I used your medicine regularly. I may here state, that the last Ulcer healed up about thirteen months ago, since which time I have enjoyed good health! Yes, I may say better health than I have enjoyed for years.

I remain yours, respectfully,
Wickham, Q. C., February 11, 1867. MRS. HANNAH BALMAIN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

FIVE ISLANDS, Nova Scotia, October 21, 1867.

MESSRS. ROGERS & Co.—Gents: My daughter is nicely, and you have done wonders, for I never thought you would make a cure as you have done. Her leg appears to be quite strong, but it itches a little.

Yours, &c., EDWARD CORBETT.

The above was a very severe case of Scrofula of four or five years standing, and after having baffled the skill of the best Physicians and almost every other Patent Medicine, and the child appeared to be on the verge of the grave, and the parents having lost confidence in every thing in the medical line, we undertook the cure for a certain sum, and if we failed were to get nothing; but we succeeded, as we do in every case of Scrofula we undertake. Nearly the whole of the bone—from the knee to the ankle—came out in pieces from time to time. ROGERS & Co.

Mrs. Edwin Starratt, of Port William, Nova Scotia, after having lost the use of her limbs for upwards of three years, has been fully restored to her former health by the use of our medicine. Any one wishing to know the particulars can correspond with Mrs. S., who will give every information. R. & Co.

Mr. Allen, Editor of the Liverpool Transcript, Nova Scotia, has been cured of a very bad scrofulous sore on his leg, of several years standing, after every other means failed. R. & Co.

Miss Miles, of Milton, Queen's County, N. S., was for upwards of three years suffering from a general derangement of the system. Bleeding at the lungs, &c. &c., and to all appearance was fast sinking to the grave. Medical skill and every other means proving ineffectual. In a few months our ALTERATIVE SYRUP restored her to her usual health.

Persons wishing to know the truth of this case can drop a line to the Rev. John Hughs, Baptist Minister at the above place. We could easily fill pages of newspapers with the revelation of such cases, but we deem the above sufficient for the present. R. & Co.

It usually takes from six to twelve months to effect a cure in cases of long standing, and will cost from thirty to sixty dollars. The cheapest way for such cases is to order a $20 box at first, which can be had in New Brunswick by ordering from JOHN CHALONER, Esq., Corner of King and Germain Streets, St. John. But may be had at all the principal Drug Stores by Retail; or, address
