The Family and the Farm.

Destroyed Herself.

BY MRS. M. A. DENISON.

"A little tighter, Ally."

"I dare not, Bell; as it is, it has taken all my strength."

"You must, Ally. Miss Ellis made the waist nearly an inch smaller than my blue one. It doesn't hurt me at all."

"O, Miss Bell, but indeed it makes you look unnatural. It is not a mark of beauty to have such a very slender waist."

"I don't care how it makes me look, Ally, you must try again. Now give one good strong pull."

The girl obeyed, and the lacings snapped like thread. Bell gave an angry exclamation, and turned upon her maid.

"You needn't have snapped it so. You did it on purpose," she said, her cheeks blazing.

"I did as you told me. Indeed, you were too tight. Let me tie the lacings together."

"No. Go to mamma; she has a new pair. I will wear that dress if it kills me."

"O, Miss Bell!"

"Don't stand talking, but get me the lacing. I will find means to draw it without breaking."

Another string was procured, and again the murderous process was put in force; this time with success. The boddice of delicate satin was safely buttoned, and Bell Alliston stood ready for conquest.

She was a beautiful girl, with but one blemish; you could have almost clasped her waist with your hands; and this unnatural slenderness was what she prized above all things.

The party which she was to attend was given in honor of her cousin, who was on a visit with her; and as their circle of acquaintances was very large, they had long contemplated this entertainment.

Bell hurried into her mother's room for her approbation.

"Are you not a little too tight, my daughter?" was the first query with which she was greeted.

"O, no, not a bit; just see, I can put my hand under the belt; and stooping forward she accomplished the feat with apparent ease. Presently her cousin Lucy came down stairs, dressed in fresh white muslin, with flowers in her hair. The two girls exchanged criticisms.

"Positively, you've no shape," laughed Bell.

"And you have quite too much," was the pleasant rejoinder. "I am content to let well enough alone, and remain as God made me, while you—O, Bell, can you breathe?"

"Nonsense; what a question! I am used to it. I assure you I breathe quite freely. I couldn't be comfortable, dressed as you are."

"Use is second nature, I suppose," replied Lucy. "But pray tell me where are your lungs and your heart? I am sure there is very little of you under your boddice but the spine and ribs; there isn't room for more."

"Don't go into such vulgar particulars, for pity's sake, Lucy. I never bother my head about those things. Brother Tom says all the young men are speaking of my beautiful figure, and as long as I enjoy it I don't know as anybody need feel troubled about it."

Meantime the guests were coming in, and soon the large rooms were all filled. The decorations were perfect, the guests delighted. Bell's father was known to be a rich man, and she was his only daughter; of course she did not want for admirers. She had always been petted; no shadows had crossed her pathway. She was the idol of both her parents, who were quite commonplace people, and a little astonished that this rare and gorgeous flower had been vouchsafed to them. Plainly, whatever good precepts they had taught her, they had bestowed but little attention upon the casket in which this gem was enclosed.

"That is Miss Bell," said a tall, pale exquisite, fondling his lemon-colored kids as he spoke,—"and the young lady just vis a vis is her cousin, the daughter of Col. Carr, of Roxbury. Did you ever see a greater contrast? Give me the lily Bell, with its tender, swaying figure. Is not Miss Bell beautiful?"

"She has a beautiful face," said young Dr. Edmunds, "very fine eyes and teeth, certainly; but what are her people thinking about to allow her to destroy herself after that fashion?"

"Destroy herself? What do you mean?"

"I shouldn't think you would ask. Look at her waist. It is a mere wasp's girdle. She must pay for that with long years of broken health, or else, perhaps, sudden death."

"Why, she is the finest figure in the room."

"You think so? Then I pity your lack of taste, to say nothing of judgment. Her small waist is simply atrocious, and to me disgusting, for it implies that she has really no sense of the beautiful, no soul for the true and elevating in nature, morals, or religion. You look at me with horror, but it is as I say; no good, high-minded girl would so distort the form that God has given her, or be willing to sow the seeds of disease that is to make herself and others miserable."

"She is very much admired, for all you say," retorted the first speaker, though his face grew a trifle more thoughtful.

"I dare say. Women are not the only fools in the world," replied the young doctor. "Just study Miss Carr, for a moment," he continued. "How free are her motions! nothing constrained—no labor of the chest—her step is elastic—her laugh untrammelled—her eye full of the fire of health—her cheek rosy with nature's blush."

"What! you don't mean to say that Miss Bell's color isn't natural?"

"By no means natural; a forced and settled crimson that in time will develop into blotches. All the inner machinery moves with clogged wheels. The blood is fighting its way, like a besieged general, contending for life; everything works at a disadvantage. I never look at those engines of torture but I long to tear them off."

"But you know she is engaged to young Mountjoy; he is a sensible man."

"Rather say an infatuated one. I would almost as soon marry an idiot as one of those senseless creatures who aim to destroy that which God has pronounced good. Mountjoy is a fine young man; I respect him in other things, but I am sorry for him. At the risk of being considered a meddler, I am almost constrained to warn him; but he would only laugh at me, I suppose. I wonder at this girl's mother. But why should I? Miss Bell is not the only young lady who is deliberately, and with malice aforethought, committing slow murder, nor Miss Bell's mother the only woman who connives at such unholy sacrifices?"

"You are very severe, doctor."

"I am not half severe enough. If I had a daughter who—"

At this moment a shrill shriek sounded, and instantly all was confusion. On every hand was heard the cry, "What is the matter? What has happened?" Those nearest the door, under an impression that the house was on fire, hurried out with all possible dispatch; others crowded to the place from which the cry had come. All was alarm and uncertain terror. In the midst of the panic, a voice cried out wildly:

"Is there a doctor here?" and in another moment young Edmunds was elbowing his way through the crowd.

"She has only fainted, doctor," moaned the frantic mother; "don't say it is anything worse. O, my God, there is blood on the floor!"

"Congestion," murmured the doctor, lifting the unconscious form, and half savagely tearing open the shining boddice. Then cutting through the lacings, he laid the insensible girl on a lounge, and sent the horror-struck throng away.

"Will she come too, doctor?" cried the mother, wringing her hands. "My only daughter! My only child! O tell me she is still living!"

"If she is not, it will be a clear case of self-murder," muttered the doctor, between his teeth. "Were you aware that she was killing herself by tight lacing?" he asked severely.

"I always told her she laced too much," sobbed the mother, while the father groaned.

"Had you no authority?"

And the mother shrank back, appalled at the thought that she had often helped her forward to death's very door.

Pale and helpless as a broken lily, the girl lay upon her bed, day after day, her lips white, her face shadowy. Healthy, sturdy cousin Lucy hovered always near her, ready for any task, every emergency. Relatives and friends called with eager questionings, day after day; and one came oftener than all the rest, listening to the tidings with a broken heart that none could comfort.

"Lucy," said Bell, one day, when her languid eyes had been following the lithe, busy movements of her cousin, "I am afraid I have thrown from me the precious boon of life. I am horrified as I look back. I remember your warnings, your questions. I lied to you when I said that I felt perfectly comfortable. I tried to cheat myself into the idea that it was right, but as the time went on, I suffered from the frightful compression so much that I could have cried out, until the moment when everything grew black before me, and I thought I was dying. O, Lucy, if I had died then! and even now I am not sure of my life."

Weeks and months passed before Bell arose from her sick couch, with the health of both mind and body impaired, and never again could she join in the hearty pleasures of youth. Doomed always to be an invalid, she made one more on the list of martyrs for fashion's sake. She never married, but when the young doctor took Lucy home as his wife, her parents being dead, she went home with them, and through her sweet resignation made more friends than ever she had in health. But she never forgot that her own hands had paved her path with sufferings.—Youth's Companion.

SEASONABLE FESTIVITIES.

Whether attending, in solemn duty, to religious service, at the lecture, the concert, or at any social gathering, we find at this period that coughs and colds are very prevalent: unpleasant alike to those who suffer as well as to those who have aural demonstrations of the fact. Many an impressive discourse, many a choice selection of music, has been marred by a din of coughing that seems at times contagious. To remedy this, our readers should use and recommend Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, one of the best medicines in the world for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and chest affections.—Montreal Transcript.

THE APPETITE FOR TOBACCO DESTROYED!!!
Leave off Chewing and Smoking the Poisonous Weed, Tobacco!

ONE Box of ORTON'S PREPARATION is WARRANTED to destroy the appetite for Tobacco in any person, no matter how strong the habit may be. ☞ IF IT FAILS IN ANY CASE THE MONEY WILL BE REFUNDED. It is almost impossible to break off from the use of Tobacco by the mere exercise of the will. Something is needed to assist nature in overcoming a habit so firmly rooted; with the help of the Preparation there is not the least trouble. Hundreds have used it who are willing to bear witness to the fact that ORTON'S PREPARATION completely destroys the appetite for Tobacco, and leaves the person as free from any desire for it as before he commenced its use. It is perfectly safe and harmless in all cases. The Preparation acts directly upon the same glands and secretions affected by Tobacco, and through these upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing the poison of Tobacco from the system, and thus allaying the unnatural cravings for Tobacco.

No more Hankering for Tobacco after using Orton's Preparation! Recollect it is Warranted! Beware of Counterfeits!!

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The following are a few selected from the multitude of recommendations in our possession.

[From W. P. Heald, Esq., Bangor, Me.]

BANGOR, Me., April 24, 1868.

I hereby certify that I have used Tobacco for thirty years past, and for the last fifteen years I have used two pounds per month. I have made attempts to leave off at different times—I have left off one year at a time, but always continued to hanker for it until I used Orton's Preparation, which has completely cured me of the appetite for Tobacco. I would recommend all who are affected with this terrible habit to try the preparation, which will certainly cure if the directions are followed. W. P. HEALD.

[From E. W. Adkins, Knoxville, Tenn.]

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., August 5, 1867.

This is to certify that I had used Tobacco to such an extent that my health had become greatly impaired, and my whole system deranged and broken down. In June, 1867, I purchased one box of Orton's Preparation, and after using it I found I was completely cured. I have not had any hankering or desire for Tobacco since using the Preparation. I believe it to be all that it is recommended, and I would advise all who wish to quit the use of Tobacco to try one box of Orton's Preparation. E. W. ADKINS.

[From John Morrill, Bangor, Me.]

BANGOR, Me., March 24, 1868.

This is to certify that I have used Tobacco for eighteen years; have tried many times to leave off, but have suffered so much from a dizziness in my head and gnawing at my stomach, that I have soon given up the trial. A short time since a friend induced me to try Orton's Preparation (sold by you). I have done so, and am completely cured. I did not in the least hanker after Tobacco, either to smoke or chew, after I began to use the Preparation.

LAZARUS & MORRIS
PRACTICAL OPTICIANS and OCCULISTS,
LONDON, 30, REGENT SQUARE,

Have appointed
GEORGE HUTCHINSON, JR.,
WATCHMAKER, JEWELLER and OPTICIAN,
70, Prince Wm. Street, St. John,
Sole Agent for the sale of their
CELEBRATED PERFECTED SPECTACLES,

Which have been extensively used in the New England States, the past eight years, and for which they claim the undermentioned advantages over those in ordinary use, the proof of which may be seen in their constantly increasing business during the last 8 years.

1st. That from the perfect construction of the lenses, they assist and preserve the sight, rendering frequent changes unnecessary.

2d. That they confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision, with an amount of ease and comfort not hitherto enjoyed by spectacle wearers.

3d. That the material from which the Lenses are ground is manufactured specially for optic purposes, and is pure, hard and brilliant, and not liable to become scratched.

4th. That the frames in which they are set, whether gold, silver or steel, are of the finest quality and finish, and guaranteed perfect in every respect.

They are the the only Spectacles THAT PRESERVE AS WELL AS ASSIST THE SIGHT. And are cheapest, because the best, always lasting many years without change being necessary.

☞ One of the Firm will visit St. John at the Store of their Agent, every three months, for the purpose of fitting those having different sights, when any Spectacles sold by their Agent during the interval will be exchanged free of charge if not properly fitted.

☞ WE EMPLOY NO PEDDLERS. May 21.
